Bulb Growing in the State of Washington.

The following report on the bulb industry and its prospects in Washington, by the party of Holland growers who recently visited that state on a tour of inspection, has been handed us for publication by Mr. A. Simon, of the Illinois Staats-Zeitung:

We arrived at Bellingham Bayon Tuesday, May 19, bearing letters of introduction from Andreas Simon, agricultural editor of the Illinois Staats Zeitung, a gentleman who has made several visits to Whatcom county and is quite familiar not only with the towns on Bellingham Bay, but with the adjacent agricultural districts, to Messrs. C. X. Larrabee, president of the Fairhaven Land Co., of Fairhaven, and C. L. Anderson, manager of the Bellingham Bay Improvement Co., of New Whatcom, and others. Our entire party being bulb growers in Holland, and having heard and read of hulb growing in the state of Washington, we came here for the purpose of looking over country and to judge of its possibilities for the production of Holland bulbs. On our arrival at Fairhaven we were shown that town and New Whatcom on Bellingham Bay, affording many fine views from the drives and streets overlooking this beautiful sheet of water. The first farm we visited was that of Mr. Hugh Eldridge located on the north side of the bay, about a mile west of the city of New Whatcom. We also visited the neighboring farm of Mr. John Bennett. Both farms are under a high state of cultivation, general farming and market gardening being carried on there. At Mr. Bennett's place we saw some excellent nareissi, lilies and general nursery stock, besides excellent plants of pæonies and dielytras.

On Friday the 20th, in the early morning, we left Fairhaven by the steamer 'Buckeye'' to pay a visit to Oreas island. The run to Orcas took us about six hours as the steamer touched at numerous post-offices and landings of minor importance on the route; but we enjoyed it so much that the time was passed before we knew it. About one o'clock we landed at Oreas, where we were to visit Mr. Geo. Gibbs, who has been engaged for four or five years at that place in the cultivation of Holland bulbs and choice shrubbery. Mr. Gibbs was not expecting us, but it was not difficult to find where he was, for everybody around there knew of him and the work he has been doing in bulb culture. Mr. Gibbs is pleasantly located on the southwest side of Oreas island, overlooking the waters of West Sound, a minor branch of Puget Sound. He has been located here for a number of years, but it is only recently that he took up experimenting with bulbs. Here we found quite a good many Holland bulbs, such as hyacinths, tulips, crocus, narcissi, lilies, etc. They were grown in a very rich, dark, sandy loam with a clay subsoil

Mr. Gibbs told us his tulips were not as good as they had been informer years, on account of his having used too strong a fertilizer this year. Of course, the time of flowering was past, as spring seems to be early on Oreas island; but we were astonished to see such fine plants grown in this part of the world by a man who has never been trained in bulb culture. The hyacinths looked healthy, as did the crocus and nareissi. Here we saw lilies and other plants growing stronger than we had ever seen them before in any country, and we mention especially the L. Wallichianum, L. candidum and L. Washingtonianum. The soil there seems to be very well adapted for raising Dielytra spectabilis, paonies, English iris and lily of the valley. We devoted some little time to looking over Mr. Gibbs' farm. and found that, in addition to the growing of bulbs and shrubs, he has a very choice young orchard, in which were growing all kinds of fruits, save those that can be produced only in the tropics. We have never, in our experience, found such a growth of fruit stock as at this point. We left the island at six o'clock in the evening, and took with us the impression that this beautiful spot is immensely rich and the climate excellent—all that is claimed for it by the residents of the island. The choicest strawberries were just ripening, and were sampled by our party

On Saturday, the 21st, we visited the land in the vicinity of Lake Padden, a mile and a half east of Fairhaven and the source of the water supply for that town. We found here a number of small farmers, all engaged in the cultivation of fruits and berries. The soil being a sandy loam, underlaid with elay in most instances, but in a few places we found sand at a considerable depth. One of the principal fruit farms at Lake Paddenis that of Mr. Baats. He is cultivating a tract of warm sandy soil, especially adapted for berries and small fruits, which for general marketing purposes could not be excelled. All the cultivated tracts of land in this vicinity show the best of care, and attention of the owners, and it was represented to us that the business of raising small fruits and vegetables for the market was quite remunerative.

On Saturday afternoon, through the courtesy of Mr. Anderson, of the Bellingham Bay Improvement Co., of New Whatcom, we went by rail to the town of Everson, located some sixteen miles from New Whatcom on the line of the B. B. & B. C. R. R. We were met at that place by a Mr. Simpson, who kindly took us over his farm and other adjoining places, showing us the different kinds of soil, as well as growing crops. We found some very good sandy loam at this point, located in the valley of the Nooksack river, the lands being what are termed, locally, as "river bottom" lands, which in our judgement would make a very good soil for producing bulbs. It has a subsoil more like that found underlying the bulb growing lands of Holland than we found at any other point we inspected. Mr. Simpson, however, told us that these lands were quite low, and at certain seasons of the year, for short periods, the river overflowed its banks and submerged them unless protected by dikes, and that being the case, until some provision was made for these overflows, it would be dangerous to use them for bulb fields. The time allowed us at Everson was very short but still long enough for us to ascertain that most excellent farms can be had there, if the lands already cleared are brought under good cultivation.

The following day Mr. Canfield, of New Whatcom, took us for a drive to Lake Samish. The entire road from Fairhaven to Lake Samish lay through timber, much of which was the finest we ever saw; in fact, none of our party hadever seen such large specimens of cedar, fir, or spruce as was shown us on that trip. The entire drive is made up of magnificent views at every point. We also found in the woods hordering the drive a good many bulbs and roots growing wild, which are cultivated and considered valuable in Holland. Among those we may mention Solomon's seal, Spiræa Aruncus, fritillaria, etc. About the lake we found many acres of land, which, in our opinion, if in cultivation, would prove to be most excellent soil for gardening, fruit growing, and even for some kinds of bulbs. The low, flat lands along the lake have many of the characteristics of good bulb land, but the area under cultivation is limited.

On May 23 we visited the lands in what is known as the Old Fort Bellingham district, located on the north side of Bellingham Bay, about five miles from the cities of Fairhaven and New Whatcom, where many years ago was stationed a com-pany of United States regulars. A fort and stockade were creeted at this point for the protection of settlers from the Indians. This historic ground has been used now for a score of years for fruit growing and market gardening. land lays with a gentle slope to the south west and the soil is exceedingly fertile We paid special attention to the lands of 4) L. Tuck and A. Houser, which were thir san ples of all the lands in that neigh bordood The strong growth of both how and vegetables on these tracts ndicated that the soil is very warm and supered for early and fine vegetables. We found growing here a great variety of fruit, such as apples, pears, peaches, prunes etc., all of which were growing havirantly. As no bulbs had been grown here, it was bard for us to judge whether they could be produced here successfully rined. It would require a practical test fordemens trate that but we were favorable impressed with the soil in this local its, which consists of about one foot of and among consists or about one foot of sandy oam underlaid with coarse, yel-lowish sand being only about four feet above water. We found here many choice plants of a fine-peer of camassia. In the after con we drove south from Lairhayen, to the town of Lakson in Shagar county, a distance of come thirtees miles, over one of the choicest gravel roads we have ever had the pleasure of driving upon. For the entire distance one has a beautiful view of the Sound and most magnificient scenery. Here is located in one body, a tract of several thousand acres, which for the most part has been reclaimed from the sea, and is protected from the salt as well as from the fresh water streams that pass through it by a system of dikes. The principal crops grown here are hay and oats. The soil is extremely strong and fertile, being of a variety of peat, the surface soil underlaid with a sand and clay formation. While this is one of the richest agricultural districts in the state, at the same time we hardly think it would be adapted for the growing of choice bulbs.

Our visit to Whatcom county was limited to five days, no part of which time was lost, as we were on the road constantly, when not partaking of refreshments or sleeping. We were in the vicinity of Bellingham Bay long chough, however, to get the impression that, in the near tuture, the cities on its shores will be the center of an exceedingly rich agricultural district. Manufacturing is carried on extensively here, and in addition to having ample railroad facilities, Bellingham Bay is one of the most perfect harbors that we have ever seen, and must be, in the near future, a very important shipping point. The lumber business has been the principal industry up to the present time, but many new establishments for the packing and shipping of fish are being creeted, and the water front presents a very lively appearance.

We are under obligations to the many persons whom we met on Bellingham Bay during our stay, and for the information given and attention shown us by them.

Mr. Simon adds: That these gentlemen evidently were unable to discover an ideal soil for hyacinth growing in the above named region is not to be wondered at, for it certainly seems impossible to make a through investigation of the different soils in Whatcom and the adjoining Skagit county within the short period of four and one-half days—this having been the duration of their sojourn.

Winter Forcing in the Open Field.

A bulletin of the Missouri Experiment Station describes a method of forcing asparagus in the open field which has proved very successful.

Ditches were dug between the rows in which 4-inch blocks were laid at the sides on which boards were placed, the ditches being then filled in. Through the passages thus formed steam was forced. As the bottom and sides were formed by earth only the steam readily found its way into the soil, moistening as well as heating it. About one foot of soil was placed over the crown of the plants and the whole covered with six inches of horse manure. The horse manure not only re-tains the heat but ferments quickly and adds to the heat from the steam. The asparagus was forced during December and January, the best results being during the coldest weather when the thermometer frequently went below zero. The stalks were cut as soon as they reached the surface of the soil and were very fine. It is claimed that one season's growth leaves the forced plants in perfect condition for a second forcing.

The expense was very small. For a plot 25x25 feet, which was run for fifty-eight days, the time of running the steam averaged seventeen minutes daily, and as there were six ditches the average was only three minutes daily for each ditch. The coal consumed, by careful measurement, amounted to $1.82 in value. The temperature of the beds was not allowed to go much below 60°. This experiment would, if carefully carried out, be quite promising as to hastening the blooming period of hardy flowers and even shrubs. It is well known that spring bulbs, paconies, lilacs, etc., are no longer profitable to the average grower for the wholesale market, while if they could be hastened even a few days there would be a good demand with fair prices.

Herbaceous Plant Notes.

As the season advances we see new features in the herbaceous ground every day; by the end of May hundreds of species and varieties are out in full bloom; many of them, being very valuable for cut flowers, should be grown extensively by our florists. The large flowering aquilegias and some of the smaller free-flowering species are truly useful in many ways; they are elegant, unique and graceful. What flower can we compare with the delicate, slender spurred, blue and white A. corulea, or the deeper colored, shorter spurred, A. glandulosa and A. Olympica, with some of their hybrids? We have no other flower which approaches in any way the singular and elaborate construction or peculiar delicacy of coloring represented in almost all the aquilegias. Of course if we only grow the ordinary garden varieties of A. vulgaris or A. Sibirica, which are nearly all small flowered and often dull and uncertain in their coloring when grown from seed, and if we are not familiar with the graceful, large, open flowers of the other species, then the above description must appear as an exaggeration; but I have never seen a lover of flowers vet who would not stop a few moments at least before a bed of the rarer species, or even the selected varieties of the common columbines; they are always interesting.

The irises are very plentiful everywhere and all of them, even the inferior sorts, sell readily in the cut flower market; but it is good policy to grow only the very best. The pyrethrums have found their way into the cut flower market long ago, and the single forms in bright red and white are decided favorites; they are used often in preference to the doubles for parlor Hemerocallis flava, the lemoncolored day lily, has been used extensively for many years; it has been in bloom with us since the latter part of May, and as we have a good lot of it planted out we may be able to cut from them for a month to come. Lychins viscaria fl. pl. is a mass of dazzling color and attracts the eye from afar. Where a bright flower is wanted for any purpose this fills the bill in the month of June, and we cannot do without it. Having a stiff creet stem of good length and excellent lasting qualities, it is a capital thing for vases. Æthionema grandiflorum is one of the daintiest cut flowers at this time of the year. The slender stems grow semi-erect and from ten to twelve inches long; they are closely set with small linear leaves and every one of the twigs terminates in an elegant flowerhead. It is little known and but seldom found in collections, probably only because some difficulty is experienced in its propagation, though cuttings of the half ripe wood root quite freely in midsummer and will make good, strong, blooming plants in less than two years; seedlings will produce a few flowers in their second year, but seed is rare and the young plants are very liable to damp off before they are large enough to handle; layering may be practiced successfully, but the layers should not be separated from the old plant until well rooted, which usually takes more than one year, unless the season and conditions are very lavorable for the formation of roots. It is with us perfectly hardy without protection, never freezes back, and when once planted will last forever apparently; we have a few very old plants which never were disturbed since first planted; each of these measures about eighteen inches across, a dense mass of delicate pink. A few plants on the half shady part in the rockery do not grow quite so compact as those in the open border; their growth is longer and thinner, but, rambling loosely over the rocks, the beauty of every individual flower on the plant is shown to advantage; and protected as they are here from the hottest sun, they last much longer in perfection.

Hormium Pyrenaicum is a low free growing plant which sends up numerous spikes well furnished with deep blue salvia-like flowers. Dark blue at this season is quite scarce among the cut flowers, and with us, at least, everything in this color is used up as tast as it comes out; the stems are about ten inches long and the spikes thickly set with showy flowers to their very tips. The foliage is short and broad, rather rough to the touch, but neat and evergreen; the habit is compact and clean; no dead or decaying leaves show beneath the younger growth; it is easily propagated by division in spring or fall and extremely hardy; light soil is best for it, though good results were obtained in a stiff but rather dry loam, while in wet places the plants are generally short lived. Another very useful blue flower is the ordinary Campanula glomerata, but when you want the deepest and brightest shade C. glomerata Dah-urica is the one to plant; it will not reproduce itself from seed and must be increased by division or from enttings. The stems grow up to a height almost of two feet on old, well established plants; the big, many flowered, close heads are really beautiful and remain in perfection for a long time; new flowers open out as the older ones fall off. The Cheddar pink, Dianthus casius, is freely used here as a cut flower and is very popular, principally perhaps because of its very decided and lasting clove perfume; the color is a soft shade of pink, the flowers not very large but well shaped with deeply fringed edges; no other of the whole family is so delightfully fragrant, though the flowers in many of the various species are superior to it in size and shape.

Helenium Hoopesii is one of the very best deep orange yellow flowers at the present time; it can be cut in long sprays and keeps well in water. After the doronicisms are gone this superior flower is ready to take their place. Thalictrum aquilegifolium produces long feathery plumes of handsome lilac, pale purple, pinkish or, though rarely, white flowers. It is an excellent keeper and comes handy for large vases and in all decorations.

A Model Chicago Establishment.

George Wittbold and his five sons grow palms and tropical plants under 32,000 feet of glass which covers Chicago realty worth $125 a front foot. The Wittbolds grow most of their stock from seed, importing only such large palms as can be procured from Belgium at less expense than the cost of growing them on here for several years. The Kentias and other palms and maiden-hair ferns are grown remarkably well in a pot, which is one of Louis Wittbold's ideas. The pot is in reality two pots, one within the other, with a common drainage opening, the inner pot being about an inch the smaller. The space between the two walls of the pot is filled with water, the moisture percolating through the porous inner wall in just the quantity most conducive to the growth of these rapid selling plants. The Wittholds do an extensive wholesale business; they also retail cut flowers and enjoy a large trade in decorative work. They conduct two stores, that illustrated herewith being their principal establishment.

Carnations.

The season is practically over, and as cleanliness is an essential feature in good carnation culture, cleaning up should be done at once. A very good plan is to let the houses dry off thoroughly, then the old plants will be dry enough to burn as they are taken out instead of leaving them to rot and breed disease on the place. Burning is the only effective means of destroying many of the diseases the carnation is heir too, and while these diseases are really not so terrible as they are sometimes represented to be, yet when we have the chance to burn them up it is advisable to do so. In cleaning up the houses make a thorough job of it; then close them up tight and burn a liberal quantity of sulphur in the house; this will kill all the fungus germs that may have been lodged around the wood work of the house, and if strong enough will clean up the red spider so that there will not be one left.

As to changing the soil every season, that is a matter of opinion, or, perhaps. to state it more correctly, a matter of soil. I have used the same soil in a bench for five consecutive years, and by careful comparison found very little difference between the soil that had been in five years and that which had been put in fresh the same season. I prefer, however, to change the soil every third year, and if a variety is very rusty the soil in which that variety has been growing is changed each year. It is a good plan to put in the new soil now if you are changing and let it get thoroughly dry; this sweetens it and helps to kill some of the weed seeds it may contain. Let it dry until about August 1, when it should be well enriched with manure at least a year old and then watered, this will bring out the balance of the weeds and they can be kept down until August 15, by which time, if the weather is favorable, planting should begin.

In a former paper I wrote on the prevention and elimination of rust on a variety by potting the plants and growing them under glass during the summer. I have faithfully followed the instructions given in that paper, and to-day the variety on which I experimented is in the field practically free from rust and fine, strong, healthy looking plants; those in the house in pots, and some on benches, with extra good care and treatment, are covered with rust and not nearly so good otherwise. All this, too, in spite of the fact that the season has been very unfavorable for field grown stock. The result of the experiment is that in the future I shall depend on good field-grown stock, and do that which I know from past experience and observation will bring me good results. It is all very well to write on the proper method of carnation culture and read the writings of others, but it is only by close observation of the carnation on your own place and giving it a lift where it needs one that paying results are to be expected.

It would be interesting to hear from some who make a success of growing carnations under glass all summer. A detailed statement of their methods of culture and the monthly cut from a given area beginning with October and closing in June, would give antiquated growers like myself some data to work upon. There are a hundred and one things to be done now in the shape of painting, looking after the glazing and the benches and heating apparatus, all of which should be spick and span for their rest over the summer season. By doing all these things now you will be free to attend the convention in Omaha and give a few days to the exposition without feeling that you ought to be at homegetting ready for the ALBERT M. HERR. winter.

Cercis Canadensis.

The judas tree or red bud, which illumines the woods in early spring with clouds of pink, is too well known to require any description here. It is one of our most beautiful native trees. It makes an effective companion to the white Cornus florida and shares with it the honor of standing at the head of the list of beautiful and showy trees for hillsides and horders of woods, and for general planting in parks and large estates. Several varieties bearing flowers of deeper pink than the type have been introduced from time to time, and a fine pendulous form is an especially valuable acquisition.

Chrysanthemum Notes.

In growing chrysanthenums for the wholesale market it is well not to run on too many varieties. Better have more of a few varieties that you are familiar with, so as to be able to make good shipments of one variety or color, as they are mostly called for by the dozen; and again, when growing a good sized batch of one variety, they are much easier to treat, and the average of high grade blooms will be much larger than if one attempts to grow six or eight varieties in the same space. If a few plants are needed of several varieties that do not come up to the commercial standard, though they may be useful for exhibition or some other special purpose, plant them on a bench by themselves; they can then be treated separately. The mid-season varieties should now be planted as soon as the benches can be made ready for them. The success of the operation will to a large extent depend on firm planting and on the application of water sparingly for a few days until the plants have commenced to take hold of the soil.

The following varieties will bloom about the same time and are as near as possible of the same height: Major Bonnaffon, Ivory, pink and white, Mrs. Perrin, Geo. W. Childs, Defender and Mrs. Henry Robinson, after which comes Maud Dean, Mayflower, Viviand Morel, Charles Davis, Mrs. J. J. Glessner, Western King and Evangeline. Then we have Mrs. J. Jones, W. H. Lincoln and H. W. Reiman. Golden Wedding, Modesto, Mrs. S. T. Murdock and Eugene Dailledonze are tall growers and bloom about the same time.

Helpful Reminders.

It is now necessary to put everything in shape for summer. Start your best house with palms and the choicer plants; prepare a potting bench of soil carefully fertilized; pick out all the plants that need a shift; move them to the potting shed; clean them nicely and give each eareful attention; don't treat them all alike unless they really are alike; some want a larger pot; some are sour because drainage was poor; some arc so loosely potted that the waterruns through without wetting the whole ball, and have in consequence suffered for moisture and become infested with seale and mealy bug; some are in order except that the soil is poor and needs a little fertilizer. After you have them in shape do not return them to the greenhouse until it is cleaned up. Arrange one bench at a time; get as many pretty things in the house as you ean for summer show; large palms may be raised with ferns under them, or side benches of ferns, gloxinias, fancy caladiums, auratum lilies, anthericums, pandanus. Cissus discolor, alocasias, boudanus, Cissus discolor, alocasias, galuvilleas, ficuses, Grevilleas, bamboos, etc. Arrange the house so that each plant has the requisite amount of light and so that each plant will become more valuable every day; then take hold of your other houses.

Get all your common stock into one house, or two, as the case may be, have all of each variety together. Many plants unsalable to-day, if trimmed and reported, often sell or come in nicely for a decoration later on, and by having them in a small compass you can more easily care for many plants. One plant in particular requires this attention—the hydrangea. All inshapely plants should be put in the propagating bed. The growth that is formed from now on should hold over for flowering next spring, and if wanted for Easter they cannot be repotted later than this.

Amaryllis are about done blooming, but don't neglect them. Keep the pots free from weeds; now is the time to build up for next season's bloom. Keep camellias well syringed and protected from burning sun, and take the same care of your azaleas.

After you have put everything in order take a wholesale price list and put the selling price on every plant. You will then have things adjusted for the coming season and your employees can sell correctly for you. You will also be in a position to estimate on what purchases are necessary for fall. Get as much of your next season's stock in early as you can. Any one who has not followed this line of management and will do so carefully will be surprised to learn how much more accurate calculations are and how many odds and ends are saved. A florist who needs five houses from October to May only needs three in July, August and September, and the remaining two would better be entirely empty. C. B. W.

Notes and Comments.

There are at least two ways to make use of sulphur in greenhouses. One is after we get a bad dose of mildew, and the other is before—as a preventive. I prefer the latter method. I am reminded, also, that there are different ways of applying this useful fungicide. Whoever applies sulphur for the first time invariably holds the delivery pipe of the bellows close down on the plants, with the result that the material is applied in streaks, which has a very careless look and is not so effective as if the operator held the nose of the machine somewhat "tip-tilted" or at a slight elevation, and in this way the atmosphere in the house is more uniformly filled and the flowers of sulphur more evenly distributed over the plants.

During the recent almost continuous rainy weather our sulphur became damp and would not distribute with any degree of satisfaction. C. A. Schmitt asked if air slacked lime would do any injury if mixed with the sulphur, the object being to bring about a possible drying process and consequent better distribution; and thinking it would not do any injury we agreed to the experiment. He proceeded to mix the lime and sulphur together in equal proportions in bulk, when he found that just as soon as the two substances came in contact a very perceptible heat was generated. It soon, however, passed away, and on referring the matter to Prof. Wm. Frear, of State College, Pennsylvania, he said: "I have never observed any chemical action between air slacked lime and flowers of sulphur. It is entirely possible that the reaction you observed and the brief heating was caused by the moisture, which taken in the flowers of sulphur in sufficient abundance to prevent its being easily distributed by the bellows was sufficient to further slack the caustic lime. This would account for the heating of a brief duration. In that case, the slacked lime would simply dilute the sulphur and would not prevent its action. I have carefully examined chemical literature and find no mention of any action of finely divided sulphur upon ordinary dry, air slacked lime without the intervention of heat.

The question is if it does no injury there is a possibility that it may do some good, as lime in any form, as I understand its qualifications, is a purifier; but whether it will aid or hinder the sulphur as a fungicide, I do not know. Prof. Frear intimates that the combination can do no harm, and I believe if used as a preventive the mixture would be more economical to use, and it certainly aids in its more free distribution by having the two combined; this applies only, of course, when both separately and in combination they are kept thoroughly dry.

Louis C. Elson.

Professor Louis C. Elson, of the New England Conservatory of Music, whose address before the New York Florists' Club on "Ladies' Night" is reported at length in the correspondence from the eastern metropolis, is very popular with the florists of New York, Boston and Philadelphia, most of whom enjoy his personal acquaintance. Prof. Elson, while making music a study, is a lover of flowers, and no man better fitted could have been selected as the speaker for so auspicious an occasion as the ladies' initial visit to the club.

New York.

"LADIES NIGHT" AT THE CLUB.—AN ENJOVABLE ENTERTAINMENT.—HOT WEATHER AND POOR STOCK.—ALL FLOWERS SELLING LOW.—BUSINESS VERY DULL.—A SUPERB CATTLEVA.—MANDA'S NEW ROSES.—THEO. LANG TO BE MARRIED.—A NEW FIRM.—C. W. KNIGHT.

"Ladies' night" at the New York Florists' Club was a conspicuous success. It was the first attempt of the club in this line, hence was regarded somewhat as an experiment, and results were so gratifying to the participants, and especially to the promoters, that "ladies' night" is likely to be an annual occurrence hereafter. Monday evening was the hottest of the scason, so far, and one of the most uncomfortable ever experienced in this city. No doubt the torrid weather kept many away who would otherwise have been present, but, as it was, the company outnumbered the hundred mark and fully one-half were of the fair sex.

The effect of Prof. Elson's genial manner and irresistible magnetism was apparent as soon as he began to speak and when, in illustration of the points alluded to, he sat down at the piano and sang song after song he captured every auditor and the applause was enthusiastic. The connection of flowers and music was his theme and he traced it back through the music and poetry of China, Egypt and Greece for thousands of centuries. He sang a Chinese flower song, which is said to be the oldest flower song known, and surprised and delighted everyone when he showed how the now popular "Star Spangled Banner" had come down directly from the music and floral metaphor of the ancient Greek song of the "Myrtle of Venus and Bacchus' vine." The har-vest and vintage songs of Biblical times, the floral language of England centuries ago, the Christmas carols and many other illustrations were given to show how the two subjects, flowers and music, have intertwined in history, and that mankind has always been sensitive to this peculiar connection. Wordsworth, the lecturer said, was, above all, the flothe lecturer said, was, above an, the norists' poet, and he sang Wordsworth's lines, "A host of golden daffodils," to music composed by himself. "Thou'rt like unto a flower," he said, has been set to music more times than any other lines in the whole realm of poetry. The subject of the national flower, the harmony existing among those connected with floral trades, and other interesting points were touched upon, and a galaxy of songs in various languages ended this unique entertainment, after which cheers and a unanimous vote of thanks were accorded the speaker. Then came the ice cream and other delicacies which were appreciated fully, not only by the ladies, but by the sterner sex, who, after serving their guests, helped themselves generously. On the exhibition tables were blooms of a number of W. A. Manda's hybrid Wichuraiana roses and a group of caladiums from Mr. Imbert.

With the mercury in the 90's it may be said with truth that New York is fairly started on the summer season. A look at the thermometer, however, is not necessary for proof of this to any one who has the privilege or duty of visiting the wholesale cut flower establishments these June mornings. The lassitude that prevails in the individual seems to have spread over all business transactions as well, and not even the quiet logic of Johnnie Weir, the spontaneous ebullitions of Billy Bogart, or the unctuous volubility of the Honorable Michael Wiegand, who has recently taken to driving his own wagon daily to the city, are effectual in starting anything like a ripple on the summer becalmed surface of Twenty-eighth street activity.

The early half of last week was fairly busy, but on Thursday, the 9th inst., the tumble eame, and it was no half-way tumble either. As to roses the most noticeable fact is, as a rule, their miserable quality. With mildew, faded color and wilted tissues, a large proportion of them are too poor to offer to any one, and it is high time their owners tossed them out, root and branch, and replanted the benches. Carnations are piled up all around; big fellows with two and threefoot stems, and no offer between 10 cents and 50 cents a hundred is refused by those having them in their possession. Sweet peas are beginning to come in from out-doors, and this is the death knell of the indoor crop, which can neither compare in quality nor compete in price with the garden grown crop. Lily of the valley is needed every day and a certain amount is easily disposed of for special occasions, but this does not mean that a larger stock than these particular calls demand can be floated, or that anything more than recent low quotations can be forced upon buyers. Lilies are abundant and of splendid quality, with sales fairly active but at absurdly low prices. Paonies are heaped high and values in quantity are away down, although a few dozen are easily disposed of daily at each establishment at rates that would make paronies good property if they would bring such figures throughout. Smilax has gone to the bottom of the ladder, along with everything else, sales being also very limited. Moss roses are fine this year.

In Bridgeman's window last week a superb plant of Cattleya gigas attracted much attention from passers by and also from expert visitors who recognized in it a specimen the equal of which has rarely been seen in New York. Growing in a 7-inch basket, it carried seven leads, five of which bore five flowers each and two bore four flowers each, thirty-three blooms in all. The plant came from MacDonald & McManus, who have some more sensations of the same sort on the There would seem to be a good profit in plants such as this.

W. A. Manda is justly elated over the splendid showing which his hybrid Wicharaiana roses are making. The plants now in bloom at his South Orange nursery are four-year-old seedlings, Wiehuraiana being in all cases the seed parent with Hoste, Perle and Meteor as pollen parents, and they are of tremendous size and covered with blooms. One of the Perle-Wichuraiana crosses bears handsome double flowers rich yellow in bud and nearly white when fully open, very large and very fragrant. All of these roses have proved to be evergreen. The great number of novelties in all classes of plants, hardy or otherwise, which Mr. Manda has to show makes his place very interesting to visitors.

OLD SOL POURS HIS SCORCHING RAYS UPON THE CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE.-STOCKS AND THE MARKET .- HEACOCK'S PLANS AND METHODS.

Ninety degrees in the shade has been the noon-day heat mark with us for the past few days. This is disastrous to business and it had its effect on the stock. Brides and Maids being very small. Meteor stands the heat better. Beauties, on account of their size, are in demand, but are mostly very tight or full open. Prices are about the same as last week. Carnations are getting poor and most of the stock fit to sell in the stores goes for $1 per 100. The fakirs get the balance at their own price. Outdoor grown sweet peas are now in and sell at from 25 cents to 40 cents per 100.

The storekeepers are doing but little these days. The June weddings are mostly over and what little demand there is comes from school commencements. Houses are closed all over the aristogratic district, for everybody of note is out of town and will probably not be heard from until next October.

Growers are not paying much attention to cut flowers at present and one house after another is being thrown out to make room for next season's stock. a hot job working at clearing and filling tables with soil in houses where the sun scorches with full power, with the ther mometer registering among the nineties in the shade. The clothis the cheap shading stock used in palm houses,

Mr. Heacock is plant-ing sixteen houses with roses, ten to be devoted to Beauties and the balance to Meteors, Brides and Maids. Meteors paid him the best the past season per table foot of space. A barrel with a force pump on top is used to syringe plants requiring an emulsion of insecticides. The apparatus is wheeled from house to house. PARK IMPROVEMENT.—THE CRITICS HAVE ANOTHER SPASM. - BUSINESS QUIET. -PRETTY WEDDING DECORATION. DEATH OF EDWIN FAXON.-MR. FARQUHAR GOES Substantial permanent improvement in Boston's parks and boulevards is being rapidly advanced. If Mr. l'ettigrew has a hobby it is "loam." His faith is rooted in loam—deep loam and plenty of it, and he has been buying it this spring wherever offered, thousands upon thousands of loads. We have had an impressive example of the results of the opposite policy which prevailed a few years ago in the condition of a large number of trees that have just been removed from the driveways of the Back Bay Fens, their places being filled with intelligently planted substitutes. The original trees have been struggling for life in saucer shaped beds of loam, three feet wide and about a foot in depth. Seven feet wide and three feet deep is the loam space being given the new trees by Mr. Pettigrew, and, in addition, a trench of equal width and depth, opposite each tree, is opened across and under the gravel sidewalk and filled with good soil. Had this been done at the start the roads would by this time be well shaded by rows of large vigorous growing trees instead of the spindly things—many of them tied up to stakes for support—which have now very properly been consigned to the brush heap.

But the removal of these evidences of past meapacity has furnished another opportunity for the meddling critics of the park department who are ever seeking publicity for their peculiar grievances through the columns of the daily papers, and a mighty protest has gone up against this tresh "vandalism." The stupidity of the original planters, as well as the unreasoning ignorance of the fault-finders of to-day, is illustrated in the fact that many of the "stately" trees that have been trying to exist for fourteen years on these high, dry, gravel roads in a few bucketsful of soil, were nothing more nor less than red swamp maples! A recent addition to the ranks of the grumblers is a gentleman who, unlike the others, is a professional landscape architect of considerable repute, whose arguments, however, are apparently lacking in sincerity and appear so ludicrously clamsy that at requires no great penetration to discern. an evident pui pose to propitiate a certain. class, with an eye to future business, by appearing to favor views at variance ath the writer's own convictions. City trade goes on in a somewhat sleepy way for the month of weddings and graduations. The demand for flowers is not as active as might be expected, and wholesale prices are very low all along the line. Country trade is proportion-ately better than local, and the wholesalers have been doing a fair amount of shipping to New England points, in small lots. Outdoor roses are beginning to appear here and there; the avalanche will be on next week if the present very summery weather should continue.

One of the most elaborate decorations of the season was that at Brookline, for the Fenns Shaw wedding. Evergreen boughs, rhododendrons, snowballs, together with an abundance of the choicer greenhouse product, were lavishly used in the adornment of the church which was elegantly done by Wm. E. Doyle.

OUTDOOR STOCK PLENTIFUL.—HUGE HEAPS OF BLOOM BUT LITTLE THAT IS REALLY FIRST CLASS.—COGITATIONS ON TRADE CONDITIONS.-I. II. MOSS TALKS ON OUT-DOOR ROSES.

A half day's rain has ended what threatened to be quite a serious drought, and everything is freshened up and vigorous again. Outdoor flowers are very, very plentiful, and a glance into the piled and heaped up storage rooms of the exchange is calculated to make the beholder wonder how it can pay the producer to grow and gather such quantities of bloom, which in the main must waste, and whether the time will ever come when the florist business ceases to be an endless succession of gluts and famines?

With all the over-production there is manifest the fact that strictly choice flowers are scarce. To be sure the standard of excellence is advancing continually and what would have been considered a fine bloom within the memory of middleaged florists, would hardly sell at any price now, but the standard is not too high yet to be reached by some growers and those who cannot get within pretty close reach of it had better step down and out and devote their time to growing something they can do well. After all, though, it would be hard for a man who had failed to produce perfect material, through some accident or misfortune to throw away the second class result of his efforts, and it is possible that much, if not most, of the inferior grades which make up the over supply are due rather to bad luck than incapacity.

At the club meeting I II. Moss read a paper on outdoor or bedding roses. He named Mannan Cochet, pink and white; Safrano, Hermosa, Jacqueminot, Kaiserin, Papa Gontier, Clothilde Soupert, Queen's Searlet, La France, Meteor and Souvenir de Malmaison as desirable varieties. An exhibit of cut roses by J. L. Wagner attracted much attention. Mack. attracted much attention.

Grafting Tomatoes on Potatoes.

In a paper read before the Royal Horticultural Society of England, Mr. Neild describes some successful graftings both of tomato on potato and vice versa. The tomatoes on the potato produced a good crop of fruit. It was noted that the potato tubers, however, produced roots where ordinarily eyes are formed. The potatoes grafted on tomato stocks did not grow so freely and produced small green tubers in the axils of the leaves.

The Yellow Rambler Rose.

Am. Florist:-In your issue of En. April 15 I notice the comments of your correspondent "K" on Aglaia, the Yellow Rambler rose. As the originator and in-Nampler rose. As the originator and introducer of this variety, permit me to state that only strong three-year-old plants give the best results. The stock generally distributed is still too young to permit of a correct estimate by even the most competent grower, but the parent plants in our nurseries prove every year that this rose is truly a fitting companion to the Crimson Rambler, and I am convinced that "K." will modify his opinion with another year's experience.
Trier, Germany. Peter Lambert.

Fertilizer Cartridges.

An ingenuous Frenchman, M. Georges Truffant, has prepared and placed on the market a very novel method of applying fertilizers to pot plants. The fertilizer is compressed into cartridge shape and covered with a metallic case, except the bottom, which is not covered. Presumably the fertilizer is in a slowly soluble form. In use the cartridge is pressed into the soil and the fertilizer gradually dis-solved by the watering and carried to the roots of the plants.

So far the invention would seem to be. like jadoo, a pleasing and harmless thing enough; but M. Truffaut puts forth some remarkable claims for it. By repeated chemical plant analyses he has succeeded, so he says, in finding the exact fertilizer requirements of a large number of plants and is prepared to furnish cartridges war-ranted "to just fill the bill" if you will only give him the name of the plant. For instance, the formula for Asparagus tenuissimus is nitrogen, 13.4%; phosphoric acid, 8%; and potash 5.8%, while for pelargoniums it is 8.6% nitrogen, 8.6% phosphoric acid and 8% potash, and so on through a long list. No doubt M. Truffaut's cartridges are very good in their way, but we are compelled to smile audibly at his long list of special formulas.

All of these "horticulture made easy" inventions, remind us of the small boy with the pin hook and the hickory pole and how often his string of trout out-weighs that of the dude with the fancy outfit. The moral of this is that the "know how" counts for a great deal more than the "where with."

Cemetery Bedding Plants.

The superintendent of one of the Chicago cemeteries says that of echeveria and alternanthera there are not more than one quarter as much used as there was four or five years ago, and their use is less every year. The semi-double Bruant every year. The semi-double Bruant geraniums have almost entirely taken the place of single geraniums and superseded many of the old double favorites. Beaute Poitevine is easily first among colored geraniums. Mme. Aimela Chevraliere is better than the much grown La Favorite in double whites. Athlete is the only single that people enthuse over. Fuchsias are little used. Crimson Rambler sells like hot cakes if in bloom. Soupert is well liked, as is also pink Soupert. Mme. Caroline Testout is a fine outdoor rose. It grows and winters like a vigorous hybrid perpetual. Perhaps Garrett will be another one. Salleroi is the only variegated geranium for which there is much call. A dwarf marguerite which would stay dwarf would be a boon and a blessing. The lady with the long shawl and a penchant for annexing other people's plants is, as usual, much in evidence.

Twine for Greenhouse Use.

It will soon be time for tying chrysanthemums and the question of twine, although not a matter of very large expense, is like all other small things worth considering.

For many years we used white cotton twine for tying purposes whenever raffia was not suitable but of late we have used a one-ply jute twine and for cheapness and convenience find it the best. Its cost is about 9 cents a pound and at a guess we say one pound is equal in length to ten balls of the white cotton. In fact it is so cheap and convenient that we now use but little raffia. When the plants are tied to vertical strings instead of stakes 3 or 4-ply jute twine will just fill the bill and costs only 5 to 6 cents per pound.

Another little point the neglect of which causes loss of material and waste of time, is starting to use the string from the inside of the ball. The most natural way to most workmen is to loosen the outside end and let the ballroll in the path. This results in tangles and snarls, especially when the ballis nearly used up. If started on the inside the ball will lie where it is put and the string will pull out readily until there is nothing but a thin layer of

Subscriber. stating whether clematis paniculata can

Clematis paniculata is so easily and cheaply raised from seed that nobody will now attempt to go to the trouble and grow them in any other way, though a number of years ago, when seed was scarce and rather high priced, propagation by cuttings was practiced in many quarters with variable success. The most satisfactory results were obtained by summer propagation in sash frames running east and west, shaded with canvas stretched permanently over a lattice frame a toot or so above the sash on the south side, slanting up to a height of about four feet on the north side of the frame. About a foot of fresh horse manure is tramped in the bottom of the bed, covered with three or four inches of sharp, clean sand, which is then well firmed and thoroughly watered. The thinner and weaker young green wood is cut up into suitable lengths for the cuttings, few of the stronger sappy shoots showing any inclination to root. or in real hot weather, twice a day the cuttings receive a slight syringing over-head and the frame is kept close and tight for three or four weeks; then a crack of air is left on each sash, overnight only at first then for an hour longer, until by degrees the plants are accustomed to a little fresh air all day. Later on the sash are removed, and in a few days the young plants can be potted off, placed in the same kind of a frame and kept close again for a short time. Strict attention and vigilance is required; to neglect them once brings disaster. It is beneficial to to the cuttings, when first inserted, to shade them additionally by shutters or lath shades placed over the canvas frame during the hottest part of the day. A week or ten days after insertion the extra shade may be dispensed with.

Paris.

The great horticultural spring exhibition, which for the last few years has been held under great tents in the Tuileries Garden, opened its doors to the publie on the afternoon of May 18, after the President of the republic and ministers had paid it a visit in the morning of the same day. This exhibition is to the floral world what our annual "Salon" is to the painters and art amateurs. It is reputed to contain what is newest and what is thought most worthy to be brought before the public interested in horticult-The exhibitors know that the most fashionable and select people will not fail to visit the show, and this explains the fact that so many florists, who otherwise seldom take part in exhibitions, send in their products.

The leading tent, about 300 feet long and 100 feet wide, in which are usually shown the finest specimens of rhododendrons, azaleas, palms, orchids and rare flowers, was this season too small to contain all the marvels of horticulture, and had to be enlarged. Unfortunately the unseasonable wet weather which pre-vailed during the whole month of May had no pity for the brilliant dresses of the ladies, which always seem to challenge the dazzling hues of the flowers on the On that day the lady opening day tailors might easily find out what was best suited to the "blondes and brunes," and their visit to the exhibition cannot fail to inspire them in regard to fashions. The tent referred to with its many beds of plants coming from the different parts of the world was a real Eden, and this impression was rendered still more fairylike by the establishment on the farther end of the tent of a most picturesque grotto, through which ran a streamlet winding its course around the flower beds.

Entering the tent, we gazed upon a bed of zonal pelargoniums, exhibited by Mr. Poirier, who secured a gold medal for it, and close by we found a still more dazzling bed of the same plants raised by Mr. Nonin, who won with it a medal of honor Both beds included plants with very large trusses and such a brilliancy of color that it is difficult to look at them for some time without tiring the eyes. Among the finest sorts may be mentioned: Paul Crampel, of the most hery redcolor which can be imagined, L. Behrens, Detaille, Mrs. Crozy, brilliant red; Mrs. French, Dr. Bonneloy, Mrs. A. Poirier, Jeanne Flenry, Pink Domino rose, Jeanne Hardy, Mr. Viard, Mrs. Chase, Countess of Pot salmon, Van Dacheream colored, La Lot rame, purplish red, Carmen Sylva, white, etc. The plants were shown in stripes and parallelograms made of one color instead of mixing all the colors, and the effect was vs corderful.

On the right and left of Mr. Poirier's hed Messis Vilmorin & Co-showed two groups of annuals ard he annuals usually mercased by seeds, which in regard to variety of form and color effected one of the greatest attractions. People who admired the beds did not realize the amount of skill and attention that is necessary to bring such a number of plants, including nearly their whole attalogue, into ful-flower at a given date. The groups comprised such novelties as Nastur-tium Chameleon, Nemesia strumosa grandiflora, Gilia multicaule, Papaver orientale, Celsia betonicæfolia, For the annual and biennial flowers and its rich collection of vegetables this concern was awarded a medal of honor. A little farther along we came upon some fine beds of double cinerarias, calceolarias, gloxinias, achimenes and streptocarpus, the latter plant showing a decided improvement as regards size and color. There were also exhibited various carnations, including the big variety Le Colosse, of which I have spoken in a former letter; single mammoth begonias, the bright scarlet Begonia Lafayette, Hydrangea paniculata, some specimens of which were trained like roses on stems six feet high; paronies, clematis, cannas, caladiums, crotons, anthuriums and magnificent orchids.

Moser, of Versailles, well deserved the grand prize, given by the President of the republic, for his lot of Rhododendron ponticum and azaleas, and Croux had a display of the same plants, which was not much less creditable. For those interested in rhododendrons, we may mention the following attractive sorts: Alarm, white center bordered eherry red; Comte Adrien de Germiny, large truss of dark lilae; Dhuleep Sing, distinct dark earmine; Everestianum, pale lilac rose, dark spotted, Geranioides, sweet pink, black spotted; Isaac Davies, distinct copper red; John Walter, splendid crimson; Mine, Carvallio, fine white bouquet; Magnifi-cum, bluish lilae; Old Port, purplish lilae; Purity, creamy white. Simon, the cactus king, carried off a first prize with his large collection of phyllocacti, among which his two new kinds, Etincelant and Aurore Boreale, were particularly attractive. On the rockery by the grotto Mr. Vilmorin staged a collection, quite unique, of alpines which he has collected during his many travels in Switzerland, the Alps and Pyrenees, or procured in various other parts of the world. On the left side of the grotto was another most interesting collection of alpines, owned by Mr. Magne; they offered a delightful field for the botanist, who without taking the trouble of making long, tiresome trips, could contemplate the plants found on the lighest mountains. Perhaps the most interesting plant of these groups was the little rhododendron, a native of the Alps, which gave rise to the huge plants exhibited opposite. Owing to the watery vapor which filled the atmosphere near the little cascade and fell in pearly particles upon the plants, these alpines kept as fresh as in their native haunts. It is a pity these plants are not more grown by people who can afford to have rock-

From the grotto two stairways led right and left to the floral decorations. I am sorry I cannot send you a photograph of the most creditable arrangements, asit is difficult to give a description of them. The first prize went to Mr. Debrie, of the old firm of Lachaume, for some capital Among the most charming bouquets was one made up of white lilae, wises and Asparagus Sprengerii. Another was composed of white and blue elematis, use hydrangeas, white lilac, a truss of dmia, some lilies of the valley andericas * in adiantum and pteris. Authoriums · tup with good sprays of adiantum and catagus, were very showy. For dining table decorations orchids were mostly ad, each person having a small bouquet car his plate.

I'mm as attracted a good deal of attention with a duplicate of the floral decorations which had been prepared last year for the reception of our President by the Czar and Czarina. The groundwork consisted of big La France roses set up in a basket having large handles or arches trimmed with very small pompon miniature roses and myosotis. Some conspicuous arrangements were also made with big Black Hamburgh grapes intermixed with flowers and greenery. Other appropriate vase furnishing was secured with white lilac, white lilies, white arums, white gladioli and some adiantum and pteris leaves. Two interesting contests took place in the exhibition, one among professional florists and the other between amateurs. The dexterity and rapidity with which both classes composed the most informal, artistic and effective bouquets was wonderful. Among the ama-teur winners were: Miss de Germiny, Countess de Waldener, Countess Etienne d'Orves, Baroness de Bourgoing and Miss Th. de Vilmorin.

In the contest for plants recently introduced into Europe, Mr. Sander received a silver gilt medal for his Acalypha Sanderi, which attracted so much attention at Ghent. It is a very curious plant, with long, drooping flower spikes of a bright rose-madder color. A silver medal was awarded to the introducer of the Cattleya speciosa nivea, and thanks were voted to the exhibitor of Zygopetalum Tenenardi and Phaius Colsoni Other rare plants exhibited were Salvia Alfred Ragueneau, in flower, though only a few inches high, and of a fine scarlet color; Begonia Alb. Crousse, a mammoth double rose variety: Cypripedium Lathamianum, a hybrid of C. Spicerianum and C. villosum; Agave Vandervinneri; a hybrid of A. Verschaffeltii, with a flower spike over 10 feet high; Lælia-Cattleya purpurata Roezli, Gardenia Fortunei, Heliconia illustris rubricaulis, etc.

An innovation, which met with a good deal of favor was the establishment in one of the tents of an art gallery where the public could admire some pictures of our best flower and fruit painters, such as Kreyder, Thurner, Mme. Lemaire, Lonise Ahbema, Bourgogne, Cesbron, Grivolas, Allouard, Cornellier, etc. Parisian.

CHEAU FLOWERS AND CHEAU SALES PREDOMINATE. — WHOLESALERS — REPORT SHIPPING TRADE AS EXCELLENT. — VAUGHAN, M'RELLAR & WINTERSON'S BURGLAR.—DEATH OF MRS. J. W. POEHLMAN.—NOTES.

Local retail trade is comparatively quiet, a large proportion of all the flowers retailed in Chicago at present being sold in the department stores or by the street fakirs, and the prices they receive do not average enough to pay the grower for picking the flowers and sending them to market. Pausies have been sold on the streets in bunches of a dozen at 1 cent a bunch. Carnations, two dozen in a bunch, self for 5 cents; roses and pronies bring 10 cents per dozen, and other flowers are proportionately low priced. At such prices where does the grower come in? The wholesaler gets his 15% commission and the takir evidently makes a profit.

The wholesalers report business for the first half of June fully up to the average. Prices have been lower, but a much larger stock has been disposed of. The shipping trade has been good, especially on first-class roses and carnations. There has been fully 23% more flowers shipped this season than ever before and good stock suitable for shipping, particularly of roses and carnations, is very scarce. Really good roses of any kind are not in market in any quantity. A week ago there was an abundance of stock of all kinds, much of it going to waste. The demand has gradually increased and at present all stock, except paonies, which are now in the height of their season, is disposed of every day. Vaughan, McKellar & Winterson's store was burglarized Friday night, [une 10. Postage stamps, pocket knives and other things were taken to the value of about $10. An attempt was made to blow open the safe, but Mr. Winterson, who happened to call at the store late that night, discovered the burglars and frightened them away.

John Ure has been ill with the grippe for several weeks at the home of his son in Rogers Park.

Wietor Brothers have succeeded to the business of the Rogers Park Floral Co. The change is in name only, as the Wietor Brothers have been for some time the only members of the firm.

Frederica Poehlman, wife of John W. Poehlman, died June 12. She left two small children, the oldest about three and a half years of age. Mr. Poehlman has the sympathy of many friends.

In the club bowling contest, June 10, E. F. Winterson made the highest score, 194, but J. S. Wilson's average of 155 was one point better than Mr. Winter-son's.

The Gardeners' Friendly Club held its first meeting at Hull House June 13 and discussed the raising of vegetables. M. Harper read a paper on "How to Plant Seeds." The club is cultivating a farm on the Pingree plan.

Among the week's visitors was John C. Chase, representing Benj. Chase, of Derry, N. H., manufacturer of plant stakes

TRADE CONDITIONS SPEAK OF THE ADVENT OF SUMMER.-THE CINCINNATI CUT FLOWER COMPANY SUCCEEDS THE H. L. SUNDERBRUCH COMPANY.—TWO POPULAR TRADESMEN.

The lassitude of the market speaks eloquently of the advent of summer. Social activity is at an end and the only business now in sight is an occasional commencement or June wedding. Stock is not of first-class quality, a condition which probably prevails to a more or less general extent throughout the country.

The event of the week has been the announcement of the succession of W. A. Mann and F. W. Ball to the business of the H. L. Sunderbruch Company, which they will continue under the title of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Co. When Harry L. Sunderbruch established this popular wholesale house, over ten years ago, he took Frank Ball from the retail store and made him shipping clerk. He has been identified with the concern ever since. Mr. Mann has been the accountant for more than six years and is therefore well up in the business. After the death of H. L. Sunderbruch his brother, Albert, supplied the capital to carry on the establishment under the management of Messrs. Mann and Ball. Mr. Sunder-bruch now withdraws in their favor. Both gentlemen are widely known and are deservedly popular. They have always handled the cream of the trade and the best stock in this market and the success which has attended their efforts speaks for their ability. The Cincinnati Cut Flower Company undoubtedly has a prosperous future before it.

SATISFACTORY TRADE IN THE MISSOURI METROPOLIS.—STOCK POOR AND PRICES LOW.—THE FLORISTS' CLUB WILL PIC-NIC.

Trade during the past week has held up very well considering the increasing warm weather; school commencements and graduating exercises have made the principal call for stock. Good blooms continue scarce, except in sweet peas, which have been in large over-supply, selling at from $1 to $2.50 per thousand. Lots of good stock changed hands at $1 per thousand, and quantities must have been moved at a lower figure, the street men selling at 5 cents per bunch.

Carnations have also been received in quantities, showing, however, the effects of the warm weather. The price ranged from $5 to $10 per thousand. Quite a lot of smilax has been called for, selling from of smilax has been called for, selling from 10 cents to 15 cents per string. Roses have been in abundant supply, but of poor quality. The only scarcity has been in American Beauties, they sell readily at from $1 to $2 per dozen. Candidum liles have been in short supply, and have been cleaned up as fast as they have been received, at from 8 cents to 10 cents per stalk. Quite a number of bedding plants seem to be left on hand from spring sales, and as the planting out season is about over it will probably be a loss to the growers. We hear of one enterprising man who expects to hold an auction to get rid of his surplus.

The last meeting of the Florists' Club was rather slimly attended and very little except routine business was transacted. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for our annual picnic. The grounds at Belleville and Croeve Coeur Lake are under consideration with the chances of selection in favor of the latter.

Watertown, N.Y.

In as much as the time honored Begonia Rex has for some reason or other been relegated to a back seat, if not entirely discarded, by the commercial florists, it may be of interest to note that Greene & Underhill have the finest collection of these plants I have yet seen, there being over sixty distinct varieties. The collection of Begonia Rex has been a sort of hobby with Mr. Greene for the past few years, but unlike most hobbies, it has paid well. Besides wholesaling, they find a ready demand for these plants in the local market.

Spring business here was in no way disappointing, the sale of plants being tully up to expectation.

Greene & Underhill contemplate equipping a modern flower store and conservatory in the business center, but will retain their old stand.

Pelargoniums.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Will some one kindly give, through the columns of the AMERI-CAN FLORIST, the best directions for growing and propagating pelargoniums, and names of the best varieties? M. W. W.

The best time to propagate pelargoniums, that are wanted to make nice salable plants in 5 or 6-inch pots the following spring, is the latter part of August or early September. Choose well ripened wood and insert the cuttings singly in 2-inch pots; place in well ventilated house where they will have partial shade from the sun in the middle of the day; use a light porous soil without manure; give them a watering to settle the soil, after which they must be watered only when they absolutely need it. With a little care in this respect, they will root readily in a short time, and should then be placed in a well lighted house as near the glass as possible and given ample ventilation. When the plants are well rooted pot them firmly in 3-inch pots, using a rather stiff soil. Pelargoniums are slow grow-ing plants in the fall and winter months, and will not stand forcing; a dry, even temperature of 45° at night, with ventilation on every favorable occasion, suits them to perfection. In January they will be ready for 5 or 6-inch pots, which is plenty large enough to grow a good market plant. Fumigate lightly and often, as they are subject to green fly.
With regard to the names of the best varieties, we are not up-to-date on the introductions of recent years, as they seem to be neglected by most of the florists of this country. It is difficult to tell why they are not grown more extensively, as they make a fine showing in Easter and spring sales when well done. While handling these plants for the London market the following were the best that came under our notice some years ago: Madame Thibant, white fringed petals; Venus, white; Duchess of Bedford, white; Gold Mine, searlet; Maid of Kent and The Czar. We are unable to state whether these are handled by growers in this country. C. W. Johnson.

DECATUR, ILLS.-W. H. Gullett & Son were victimized by a young man who rented a dozen palms in the name of one of Gullett's good customers, peddled the plants about town and never came back.

SUMMER DULLNESS AT THE OHIO CITY. SULTRY WEATHER AFFECTS STOCK .-DROUGHT IS BROKEN. -- LOWERS, QUALI-THES AND PRICES.

Business is rapidly dropping to the summer level, although there are still a few people yet to be married this month.

The sultry weather of the past week had its usual effect on the supply of stock and still further deteriorated the quality of roses. What good stock was offered usually sold, but there were many poor ones that could not be disposed of. price of standard sorts ran from $1 to $3 er 100, according to quality. American Beauties are of fairly good quality. They are bringing $1 per dozen when they have stems of hon length. Carnations have been in over supply owing to the heat They have been offered in enormous quan tities and have often been refused, although offered in some cases at 20 cents and 40 cents per 100. Sweet peas, with some growers, are about at an end, being poor in flower and short of stein. A few sweet peas are now to be seen outdoors. Prepries, white and red, are about over Pink ones of late varieties are plentiful in fact too much so, some having been retailed at 25 cents per dozen.

At the time of this writing we are having abundant rains, so that the threatened drought is averted.

Bedding stock has sold about as in former years, and at about the same prices. Some dealers report being sold out while others have more or less stock on hand.

Buffalo.

SWEET GIRL GRADUATES RECEIVE MANY FLOWERS.—CARNATIONS ARE IN OVER-SUPPLY .- OUTDOOR STOCK SCARCE .-SUMMER OUTINGS.—VISITORS.

Trade the past week has been rather brisk, the commencements of two of our young ladies' colleges calling for American Beauties by the hundreds. Beauties were of good quality, but roses of other varieties are beginning to show the effects of warm weather. Carnations can be had in quantities this week at almost your own price. Outdoor flowers are not very plentiful and only a few tiger lilies, pyrethrums and pæonies can be had.

The retail florist is thinking where he can go for a vacation and not have to buy some summer resort in order to remain there. W. F. Kasting can be seen almost any evening driving around the park in a pneumatic tired buggy behind a fine horse, and is envied by others who only pedal along on bicycles. S. A. Anderson has taken up his summer residence on the Canadian side with the Buffalo Canoe Club, of which he is a member.

Harry Balsley is here at present talking flower pots, and looks well. Martin flower pots, and looks well. Martin Reukanf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., called on the trade the past week. Will Siebrecht and bride, of New Rochelle, called on D. B. Long and W. F. Kasting this week on their way to Niagara Falls. Other recent visitors to Buffalo were Fred B. and Fred G. Lewis, Lockport; Mr. Wheeler, of Red Rock, Pa.; G. L. Graham, of Bradford, Pa.

Kansas City, Mo.-Olivia Thompson has filed application for a mandamus to restrain John Sneider, florist, from removing or destroying stock or fixtures at 1013 and 1015 Walnut street.

DULL TRADE FOLLOWS MEMORIAL DAY ACTIVITY.—CHANGES AT THE INGLESIDE NURSERIES. — RAFFERTY'S FREESIAS. — JOTTINGS OF PERSONS AND PLANTS.

Memorial Day was more generally observed in this city than for a number of years past; florists were liberally patronized and in return presented to representatives of patriotic bodies nearly all flowers remaining after the orders were filled. Since Memorial Day trade has been very dull and the prospects for the summer season are not encouraging.

Several changes have taken place at the Ingleside Nurseries. J. A. Kusche, who has been in charge of the greenhouses and gardens for nearly two years, resigned. He contemplates entering business for himself, either in this city or in Santa Barbara. His position is now filled by Thomas Comstock, who recently arrived from Missouri. Miss Allen, the etlicient stenographer an i book-keeper at the Spring street store has given up her position and in a few days will leave for Salt Lake City to reside. Capt. F. Edward Gray, the proprietor, is announced as a candidate for the republican nomination for county assessor, a position he has held before.

Fred Rafferty, the leading florist at Santa Ana, has been selected as one of the park commissioners of that city. He reports a heavy demand for bulbous stock. His entire crop of freesias is sold and he requires more to complete filling his orders.

Since the destruction by fire of the big Raymond Hotel, at South Pasadena, nearly three years ago, the greenhouses and grounds have been somewhat neglected but now additional greenhouses are being built, one for roses 24x100 feet, and a large propagating house. R. Leithead, who is in charge of this establishment, hopes to soon see a new hotel built.

Otto Saake, who has been employed by J. A. Summers, of the Central Park Floral Co., has resigned and will investigate the culture of tobacco in this vicinity. It is said to be a profitable crop in some parts of San Diego county and Mr. Saake hopes to succeed with it.

E. H. Rust, of the Park Nursery Co., Pasadena, has returned from the east and is now attending to his duties as horticultural commissioner.

Henry Ebert, gardener at the Hollenbeek Home, has gone to serve his country in the Philippines.

The conservatories in East Los Angeles Park are attracting many visitors. display of a house full of gloxinias in full bloom is the principal drawing eard, but a collection of Japanese irises grown outside under lath shade, is greatly admired. D. R. W.

Rose and Carnation Houses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Some reader of the AMERICAN FLORIST would oblige by answering the following: 1. What is most economical for three-fourths-span rose or carnation house, east and west, that is to be constructed for solid beds? There will be four houses and each house is to accommodate one bench of pot plants. Would prefer a house of three benches, always two solid and one raised. The local conditions are such that we can build the best solid beds cheaper than plank benches. By using one raised bench for pots we avoid the difficulty of constructing the third or high solid bed. Walks should be all around the sides of the house, giving them three beds and four walks. 2. How much space is absolutely necessary between such houses, on ground sloping at a rate of one foot in fifty feet, to prevent one house from shading the other? What is the necessary elevation of the solid beds? MINNESOTA.

As submitted, there must be something left out of the question, as there is nothing to signify what the word "economical" refers to, whether to the construction, arrangement or the heating of the house. To answer briefly: In forcing houses it is desirable to have from 24 to 30 inches of glass in the south wall, set either in permanent sash or in hinged ventilators. The wall itself may be con-structed with cedar posts set four feet apart and sheathed and sided up to the sill beneath the glass, or a grout wall may be used beneath the glass. The north wall requires no glass. It is advisable to have a walk along the south wall, but a raised bench may be placed against the north wall. For carnations the south bed should be raised about two feet, but for roses one foot will be ample. The other beds should be about one foot higher than the bed to the south, and the ground should be graded so that the beds will not be too high for convenience in caring for them. Three feet from the walk to the top of the soil will be fully as high as desirable for any of the beds. Hot water will, as a rule, be found most satisfactory in small establishments, but steam plants are less expensive to put in. All of the pipes may be placed upon the walls, or the mains may be carried on the purlin posts a foot or so below the glass, with two returns beneath the soil on each of solid beds to give bottom heat. The farther the houses are apart the better so far as the growth of the plants is concerned, but a distance of eight feet will give good results. It also permits of driving between the houses, which facili-tates the handling of the soil. If necessary, a smaller distance may be used, and fair results will be obtained with six or even four feet, especially if the ground can be so graded as to bring the north house two feet higher than the south one.

Polo, Illis. M. E. Miller has found a new way to increase trade. He is giving flower shows in the surrounding towns, usually under the anspices of some patriotic society which receives a share of the proceeds of sales and sends, the money to the soldiers representing the town in the camps in the waith.

BALTIMORE, Mic-William Griffith and Harry V. Casey, have been employed by Pobert S. Corse, superintendent of Pat terson park, to lay out eight large ornamental beds

Sweet Peas.

ED. Am. FLORIST:-Our Blanche Ferry sweet peas turn striped in very warm weather, and we would like to know weather, and we would like to know whether there is not a better pink variety for market purposes. We would also like to know of a better white for outdoor culture than Mrs. Sankey, which is tinged with pink. Next year we are desirous of having our sweet peas in bloom about February 1, and would like to have information as to the time of sowing, temperature and the two best varieties, one pink and the other white.

Tennessee.

Replying to above, we had same trouble last year outdoors. We do not force any under glass nowadays, so ventured to get replies from some of the successful growers of sweet peas who do.

Edward Swayne, Wawaset, Pa., says:
"We have had the usual trouble with Blanche Ferry coming striped, but do not know the cause. The trouble is not consnow the cause. The trouble is not confined to those grown under glass. This year we have them outside more than 95% pure. Last year they were all striped. Inside we have about half our house nearly all true to the type, and the other half nearly all striped from the other half nearly all striped, from the same lot of seed. Better save our own seed from best plants." In answer to the question, "Is there not a better pink for market purposes?" Mr. Swayne would market purposes: Ar. Swayne would not say positively, but would suggest as worthy of trial Miss Hunt, Lovely and Prima Donna; and as a white variety for foreing, Blanche Burpee has given him the best results, with Emily Henderson next.

Jacob H. Weaver, Greenland, Pa., says: "We have experienced more or less trouble with the variety under consideration coming striped. At the present time it is confined to a few plants which came from seed dropped from last year's crop. I'p to the present the flowers from the seed sown has shown no signs of stripes. He does not use the Blanche Ferry exclusively. With him the Emily Henderson far exceeds the Blanche Burpee, and these are the only two whites he has tried as vet.

Elmer J. Weaver, Bird-in-Hand, Pa., ivs: "About April 20 a portion of our Savs: sweet peas began touching the glass, which was removed, thus allowing the peas to grow through the roof. At the present time they are so hadly striped, standards and all, that they do not resemble Blanche Ferry in any way. All the remainder of this variety which are growing under glass at present are true to color, not a plant bearing striped flowers. Last year they grew true to color. Cannot account for it, as one would think removing the glass would tend to bring them true." Up to date Mr. E. J. Weaver has no variety as suit able as Blanche Ferry for an all round pink. "Katherine Tracy," he says, "has certainly a more delicate and beautiful color, and also comes true, but is rather a shy bloomer, many of the first buds turning yellow and dropping off. But when it gets well started it makes fine salable flowers. Emily Henderson is the best white for foreing, though Blanche Burpee may make a few more flowers, but of many his transfer may be the salable forms. but of a much interior quality and shorter. weaker stems."

In Tennessee, if the seeds are sown about the middle of August, they should be in bloom not later than f ebruary 1. A temperature of 5 at might will suit them. The red spider is the greatest enemy of these plants, well-directed heavy syringing is the best remedy for this pest

Open-air-dried Cypress Lumber is more durable, and better suited to Greenhouse conditions, than kiln-dried stock. But you cannot get it from those that are engaged in the business in a small way—even though their entire business is confined to greenhouse material—for it takes a long time tor the lumber to thoroughly dry and this means an investment in lumber that only those of large capital can make. The only way to have air-dried lumber is to buy green lumber and hold it until it dries. Those that order dry lumber from the prolumber and hold it until it dries. Those that order dry lumber from the producers of Cypress get kiln-dried stock. It is cheaper for them to kiln-dry than to hold the stock long enough to season it in the open air. We carry a large stock and fill all orders with open-air-dried Cypress clear of knots, sap and all other defects.

The Culture of Dendrobiums.

| Abstract of a paper read before the June meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society by John Thatcher. |

These include some of the most useful and beautiful species of orchids in cultivation. By growing about twelve different varieties, one or the other can be had in flower nearly the whole of the year. The general culture of them is easy; no one who owns a warm house should be without a small collection. I will now give the mode of cultivation that I have used for several years, and with the majority of varieties I have always been fairly successful.

To insure success the roots must be in a healthy condition, and to secure this the plants should be repotted every two years, the compost to consist of good, clean, fresh sphagnum and broken crocks, these latter to be about one-half inch in Potting is a work that cannot be rushed along, as though you were potting geraniums, but should be done carefully, so as to injure the active roots as little as possible. When the plants are taken out of the pots or baskets all the old material and dead roots should be carefully removed. If pots are used they should be about three parts full of crocks; if baskets are used a few crocks over the bottom will be sufficient, for when hung up they dry out much more quickly than otherwise. Spread a thin layer of compost over the top of the crocks and then spread the roots over the surface, filling in between with compost. When finished the compost should be about one inch above the rim of the pot One great point is not to use too large a pot or basket. The proper time to repot is when the young growth is about two inches high, just when the roots are commencing to push out.

After repotting give the plants every encouragement to grow by supplying plenty of heat, moisure and light. Do not give much water till the roots get fairly good hold of the compost. Care must be taken not to let thrip, greenfly or red spider get headway. To keep these down syringe twice a day overhead on bright days and get well under the foliage. Shading, if it is permanent, should be very thin, but if possible do not have a permanent shade. If shaded too heavily the growth is weak, and if given a fair amount of sunshine it is possible to have stems like young bamboo canes. Manne can be applied with advantage to some varieties, but I would not adviseits use where only a few plants are grown. If there are trough pipes in the house they may be kept filled with manure water when fire heat is in operation, and much advantage will be derived therefrom. One of the best things I have found for giving a good, healthy, dark green hue to the foliage is fresh slacked lime and soot, two-thirds soot and one-third lime. Scatter the mixture on the paths and under the benches twice a week when the plants are in full growth, and anyone that has not used it will be surprised at the amount of beneficial gas it throws off.

Resting I consider the most important point in dendrobium culture, and many tail to keep their plants in a healthy condition because of neglect in this particu-The majority of dendrobiums, or 1 should say spring flowering varieties, as soon as growth is finished should be put in a cool, airy house and given plenty sunshine, gradually withholding water; give only enough to prevent shriveling; the varieties that flower soon after growth is finished I prefer to leave in their growing quarters until the flowers are out. I will now give the six best varieties, to my mind, their season for flowering and the temperature they should be in it possible during the winter months. The varieties I shall name are easy to grow, free flow-ering and cheap: D. Phalaenopsis Schroderianum is the king of the dendrobiums. This variety produces its flowers on the top of mature leafy growths; it also throws out spikes from the two and three year-old growths. Well-grown plants produce two or more flowers on a spike and the color varies from pure white to dark magenta. The flowering season extends from August till November, and if possible this variety should be kept very dry in a temperature of 55° during the resting period.

D. nobile is one of the best and easiest to grow. The blooms are produced on the old growth, in twos and threes, all up the stem. It can be had in flower from the end of December till June, and should be rested in a cool house where the temperature does not fall under 45. mosum giganteum is the largest flowering variety among the white kinds. It blooms on the ends of leafy stems in bunches of from three to five as soon as growth is completed. The flowers appear in August and September, and the plant should be wintered in a temperature of 55 and not allowed to get too dry. Dalhousianum is very sweet scented and requires plenty of head room. When well grown the pseudo bulbs will reach to a height of four or five feet. The flowers are produced in a spray of from six to ten on the leatless growth, usually in April and May. It should be wintered in a temperature of 55 and kept fairly dry. D. Wardianum is a beautiful large-flowering variety and one that should be in every collection. The flowers are produced on the young growth after the leaves have fallen, from January to March. Winter in a temperature of 45 and keep moderately dry. D. thyrsiflorum is the best of the evergreen kinds and one that can be grown in an intermediate house all the year. The flowers are produced in long pendulous racemes, which last about a week in perfection; the color is orange yellow, with white lip. Six additional good varieties will be found in D. Falconeri, D. Hildebrandtii, D. macrophyllum, D. fimbriatum oculatum, D. Devonianum and D. Brymerianum.

Three Fine Pyruses.

The pyruses made a singularly beautiful display at the Arnold Arboretum this year while they lasted, but severe wind and rain cut their season shorter than usual. Pyrus betukefolia, which is the subject of one of our illustrations, is a comparatively recent acquisition from the mountains near Pekin, China, and is not yet in general cultivation. The flowers are pure white, appearing in clusters before the leaves. The fruit is very small, rusty brown, resembling a Seckel pear in color. Apart from its good qualities as an ornamental tree, Mr. Dawson advocates it as a stock for pear grafting, especially valuable on light soils.

Pyrus baccata is the well known berry bearing apple. It is an early bloomer, following close on the cherries. When full grown it makes a shapely tree fifteen to twenty feet high, but it begins to bloom when very young and with its long stalked flowers of good size makes an attractive picture. It comes in innumerable varieties with fruit yellow, red or green. The plant shown in our illustration is a seedling raised by Mr. Dawson and called by him the Hillside variety.

Pyrus spectabilis floribunda Scheideckerii is a novelty received from Spaeth's famous nursery at Berlin a few yearsago. It is now about four feet in height and has bloomed every spring for three or four years. Mr. Dawson thinks it is a hybrid between P. baccata and P. spectabilis. The flowers are deep rose and are produced in great abundance. Its dwarf habit would indicate that its maximum height when full grown might be about eight or ten feet.

Another pyrus, of the Japan quince section, worthy of special notice is Pyrus Japonica pygmea. The specimen in bloom at the Arboretum is from seed gathered by Prof Sargent in Japan five years ago. It has bloomed already three years. The branches are reclining, almost trailing, the flowers clear orange vermilion, and the foliage soft and flexible, superior in many respects to the ordinary type of Pyrus Japonica

Toronto.

There was a large attendance at the Horticultural Society's June meeting in St. George's hall. I. McPherson Ross, president of the society, read an excellent essay upon "Herborcous Plants," and illustrated his remarks by an exhibit of great variety showing the many stages of the growth of the plants under discussion. George Wills displayed a number of seedling petimias and described everything in connection with their development.

The society will give a chrysanthemum show in the fall and will soon distribute a large number of plants to school children, offering prizes for the best specimens developed by the date of the exhibition.

The Florists' Bargain Counter.

ACCORDING TO CHICAGO IDEAS.

"We are now reaching out after retail business," said Louis Wittbold, who is in charge of the office at George Wittbold's handsome new establishment, "but I do not think we shall employ the bargain sale. I can see how special sales would be of great assistance to retail trade under certain conditions but as our wholesale business far exceeds our retail department we would feel that price cutting would be risky. We are probably the largest growers in the west of tropical plants and palms and ferns and if we should cut the retail price for a special sale we should at once incur the displeasure of other retailers who come to us for their stock. To be sure, we sell cut flowers over the counter and are doing a large and growing business in funeral and social work, but I think there are better ways of attracting customers than offering cheap sales. The best advertisement is a well pleased customer and we are endeavoring to do as extensive advertising as possible along this line. We gain an occasional order through neat invitations mailed to addresses in the Chicago Blue Book and we exert ourselves to please every such customer, not only the first time but every time. This is by far the most satisfactory trade to have and I am not sure that it could be obtained by an offer of bargains; in fact, 1 think that one first-class job of decorating for a largely attended wedding or dinner would bring more desirable patronage than would a whole year of bargain sales."

"Special sales have done me a great deal of good," said A. Lange, whose place of business is opposite the Palmer House, "and I believe that such sales, judiciously managed, will benefit any florist who is so situated that he has fair control of his field. It would not be advisable to start anything which would lead to price cutting between two adjacent dealers but a bargain never fails to attract all classes of people. I found that I could buy up a lot of stock, it made no matter what so long as it was cheap enough, make a big display, put out a placard announcing the special price, and receive immediate response. If you once get a person to know your store he will come again. It may not be until some friend dies or until his wife gives a dinner but when flowers are wanted the man who has created a favorble impression by means of a bargain sale will come instinctively to the mind of the prospective purchaser. Of course an occasional buyer of a bargain will come back expecting to make other purchases at a cheap figure but a little diplomacy will send such away satisfied and thoroughly understanding the situation."

"No, sir! Never! You'll see us out of business before you see us offering 'bargains,'" said Andrew Miller, of the Central Floral Company, and he ceased work upon two great bouquets of beautiful Lilium longiflorum, which he was preparing for the bier of one of Chicago's leading jurists, only long enough to empha-size the remark. "There never will be anything cheap about this place. Cheapness is now doing a great deal of injury to the trade and when it comes to such a pass that we cannot do a legitimate business we shall retire. This hawking of flowers about the streets is of incalculable damage, and not more so to trade than to the flower itself. If people who can and will pay good prices for good blooms find the flowers stuck under their noses at every corner they will not have them at any price. An illustration of this cheapening process is the downfall of Cape jasmines. When I started in business there was a good sale for this sweet scented flower at $1.50 per dozen; to-day the street men are the only ones that can sell them at 15 cents. The department store bargain sale process of cheapening everything is hurting the grower just as it is the retailer. The dealers in good stock buy what they want of the commission man each morning and then the cheapsale man comes along and makes an offer for the balance of the stock on hand. He gets it, but what the grower gets is a question. There is too much inferior stock in the market. As soon as a man establishes a reputation for selling only first-class goods, no matter what his line, he does not lack for well paying customers. Too many men have not the ambition necessary to establish such a reputation."

"If I should display a lot of flowers, cut blooms or plants, in my window and placard them with a price as low as I paid, I do not believe that it would attract half dozen new customers," said E. Hobbs, "and the probabilities are that nearly every bargain sale I should make would be to some one who would have paid me a profit had I not offered the bargain. I confess that this is merely theory and might not be at all applicable to a down town store but I think that a cheap sale would be of little aid to any store in a residence district. In fact, I think that the chief obstacle to profit making business is the cheapness of the stock sold by department stores and fakirs. The fakirs have cut off nearly all the profit in bed-ding plants this spring. They have been able to buy up considerable numbers of geraniums and other stock which they have peddled at $1 a dozen and have even planted them out where it was necessary to clinch the bargain. They make very few sales which florists would not make at better prices were it not for the fakirs. Then the street men down town hurt the sale of cut flowers. It is very seldom that a day passes without some one asking in surprise, 'Why! Aren't you high? I can get them for 10 cents down town,' when I ask twenty-five cents a dozen for firstclass carnations. The average person fails to notice that the fakirs' stock is that which no florist wants. The fakir sells the leavings of the commission house; he pays no rent and does not even wrap up the flowers he sells, but average humanity expects me to put into a neat box good flowers wraped in tissue paper and deliver the package at a home a half mile away, at the street man's price. I don't see any way out of the situation. The fakir will do business as long as the commission man will sell to him and the commission man will sell to anybody at any price rather than have stock left on his hands. The only remedy seems to lie in a gradual improvement in the quality of stock sent in by the growers. Good stock will always command fair prices, but many growers, I fear, will always take what they can get for poor blooms rather than exert themselves to produce nothing but the best."

"Bargain sales? No. We've never tried them." said E. Weinhoeber. "I have never given the matter consideration but at first thought it does not appeal to me. Business has been excellent this spring; since Easter, in fact, we have had all that we could attend to satisfactorily, and I see no reason for resorting to any questionable method to gain trade. As a general proposition I do not believe that any high class establishment will derive benefit from resorting to department store ways of drawing a crowd. I am quite sure that bargains would be little temptation to our patrons. Bargains almost invariably mean poor stock and that is just what my people do not want. While I find little difficulty in selling good stock at reasonable prices some places may find special sales expedient, but I am too busy to view them in other than an unfavorable light."

"I am not a believer in cheap sales," said W. McCormick, who is an old time worker with W. J. Smyth, whose Michigan avenue store is one of the finest in the city. "Cheap sales are all right for some purposes but they would not do for us. At least that is my idea and I think that Mr. Smyth fully agrees with me. The people to whom we appeal do not want cheap flowers; they want the best and are willing to pay what they are worth. Most of our customers buy more or less regularly. I do not think that they would be induced to buy oftener if special sales were offered and I fear that nearly every sale at a bargain price would be the expense of the regular trade. I think that Mr. Smyth will always be satisfied with a high class, legitimate business. Trade is very good this spring and the only difficulty we are experiencing is in obtaining first quality stock. American Beauties are now far from good. I do not think that the cheap sales and street men are hurting our trade, in fact they are causing many people to buy flowers who would otherwise never do so. Of course, it would be far better if there was no poor stock but so long as a large proportion of the product is below a high class grade it is better that there should be an outlet for the poor stock than that it should remain unsold to clog the channels of trade. Growers are gradually finding out that their profit increases with the quality of their stock and the result is an apparent improvement which we hope will be continuous.'

OTHER PHILADELPHIA VIEWS.

My next call was on a wide awake uptown florist, Chas. II. Fox, whose up-todate methods, bright advertising and enterprise have been favorably commented upon Mr. Fox has two stores.

"Yes," said Mr. Fox, "we find special sales a good thing and run them regularly at our Columbia avenue store. We dispose of a great deal of surplus stock in this way. It enables us to buy more liberally for both stores, and by so doing get concessions in price. We can keep a finer stock at our Broad street store, and whenever we have a surplus there we can run it off up-town. We apply the special sale idea only to plants. The public knows something about the price of plants, but has very little idea of the value of cut flowers. Prices are so fluctuating that stock worth 50 cents this week may be worth only 5 cents seven days from now. We therefore confine our bids for public patronage to the plant department alone."

"Would you be in favor of introducing the special sale idea in your Broad street store"

"No, sirree! We do not want anything of that kind down there. We have a first class clientage in that neighborhood, and we would soon lose our best trade if we were to institute any such method there. I know something of the class of trade it brings when you advertise special sales, and I certainly do not want that kind of business at our Broad street establishment."

It will be noticed that Mr. Fox's experience coincides with Mr. Cartledge's idea on the subject; namely, that the bargain counter idea might be all right for certain neighborhoods, but would be decidedly out of place for a store catering to a high-class trade.

"I thought that thing up some years ago," said John Wescott. "Some years ago, when I was with Pennock Bros., I thought we might try the bargain counter when we had a surplus of any kind of flowers. We might have a counter at one side of the store fitted up for special sales, all goods to be sold for eash, and have a cash register there so it would not interfere with the other business. I think we could have made considerable money. probably $200 or $300 a day, and that it would be beneficial to the growers. It would accommodate a great many people who want only a few flowers. My idea would be to do as Wanamaker does when he has any bargains, to advertise them and let the people know it, and give them to understand that they only had the benefit of these bargains because there was a surplus of stock. I do not think that a bargain counter would hurt the standing of a high-class store 1 would tell the growers we did not want any poor stock on these bargain counters, nor would I offer at a bargain the pick of the stock. Many good customers would not go near the bargain counter, because they would think the stock would not be good, and others would soon find out that the pick of the flowers would be at the regular counter. I do not believe Wanamaker makes a great deal on what he sells at his bargain counter, although the department stores are hurting, and will hurt, the business of the retail florists until we will be forced to make a move toward meeting these things. These department stores are more progressive than our florists. About six years ago a book called the "Little Chatterbox" came out. It was published by Lippincott; their price was 50 cents. Retailers sold them price was 50 cents. Retailers sold them for about 75 cents, but Wanamaker sold them for 40 cents. The other people went to Lippincott and complained because Wanamaker had bought them lower than they had, and Lippinzott had to exhibit his books to show that Wanamaker bought them for 50 cents. It was a big advertisement for Wanamaker and he sold ten other books for one "Little Chatterbox.'

"You think, then, it pays to take a leader and sell below cost for the sake of getting the erowd?"

"Well, may be a little above cost. I think it really would pay, for people would probably buy something else. One should have cheap carnations and expensive carnations. The customers would look at those at the bargain counter and at the good ones at the regular price. They would pay the difference and be glad to

"Even the most liberal people want things cheap. Then again some people think that if they are not required to pay a good price for a thing that it is not good. The people coming in to the bargain table would go over to the other counter, that is, if it were in the same store, and ask questions. It would be a nuisance, especially in the busy season, and if you had a store next door for a lot of cheap plants and flowers, you could keep your first-class place in better condition. There is more than one side to the question

"Do you think that the wealthy people, who are rather exclusive in their ideas, feel like looking down on a store that has a bargain counter?"

"I do not really think so. Wealthy people often want something for one particular occasion. On a Saturday they want a few flowers to take to a friend, or to take home, but they do not always want something expensive. It is a great deal better for a first-class store to sell at cost than to throw the flowers ont."

"Would it not be better to give them to the hospitals rather than drop prices?

That is all in the hands of the growers. The grower sends his stock to the commission man and wants him to sell it. If he sends a large quantity and there is a glut on the market they have to be sold cheap. Lalways take it that as soon as you make a thing too cheap you make it undesirable. John Y. Smith, of Doylestown, said some years ago, that he was going to make roses so cheap that every working girl would be able to have them. He was injuring the florist and injuring himself. Just as soon as you make a thing too cheap the rich will not buy it. They want to wear something that the poor cannot afford.

"The right kind of competition is the life of trade By fair competition I mean that in which every one lives up to what he promises. When it comes to taking an order, and estimating on a wedding decoration one man would say he would do it very cheap, and promise that every-thing should be good; but the stuff would tring should be good, but the still would turn out to be poor. Of course the cus-tomer would be dissatisfied. There has been too much competition of this kind. Twenty five years ago, when there was not a great deal of plant decorations, they used to use camellias, carnations, and maybe old azaleas, anything to look a little green, to put on the table or to fill up the fireplace. That kind of stuff would be sent in a closed wagon and charged at ten dollars a load, when the stuff was not worth much more than that. Then after they got to using palms and other choice plants competition was and other choice plants competition was such that the price was not raised as it should have been. As soon as you get too much competetion it is the death of

"I believe that the growers would profit in the end if they would make an effort to regulate the quantity of stock in the market by holding back part of their cut when there is a prospect of an over-supply. So long as the growers do not do this the dealers must make the best use they can of the supply, and I believe that the bargain counter is a valuable agent for the consumption of the surplus."

G. C. W.

"I have been using the special sales for some time as a means for gaining new trade and have found that they have paid me well," said E. Nagel, of 824 Nicolett avenue, Minneapolis, "I have found that bargain offerings not only attracted a large number of people to my store upon the day of the sale, but that many of them came again on days upon which I offered no special inducement. As this is the chief aim of such efforts I may say that my special sales have accomplished their object in every respect. Best of all, I have found that special sales have helped regular business upon bargain days. I suppose that people attracted to the store by the cheap price of one article have seen something else which they preferred and have been willing to pay the regular price to obtain that which eaught their laney Cut flowers are the only things which we offer at special sales We aim to sell nothing but perfectly fresb stock and use a good quality of blooms for bargains but never so employ the very hest, those being reserved to make sales at regular prices. We never offer a special price without advertising it as thoroughly as our business will warrant in the local columns of the daily papers, and we find that there is ready response from all classes of people. Very few people speak of having bought at cheaper prices when they come again for the same stock on other than bargain day. As a rule they expect to pay the regular prices, but when an occasional person expects to buy a second time at cheap prices he is usually satisfied by an explanation that the special price was for that day only.

Mr. Nagel's greenhouses comprise 10,-000 square feet of glass and are located in a good residence part of Minneapolis. His store is on one of the cleanest, broadest, busiest retail streets in America.

FROM A NEW YORKER'S STANDPOINT.

For the florist who raises the stock. himself, undoubtedly beneficial, especially if at a time when his product is too heavy for the ordinary demand. But for the florist who has to buy stock, apt to be injurious both directly and indirectly unless his financial condition is known to be such that no one will question his ability to pay his bills.

Bargain day is dear to the hearts of the shoppers, and if, when judiciously managed and properly advertised for just what it is, it has proved a sagacious business policy in other retail lines, then why not, also, in the florist trade?

Carnations.

There is considerable interest manifested in the solid bed system of growing carnations, on account of the saving of expense in benches and labor. While there may be certain sections or certain soils where this system may not be practical, experience will finally show that such places are few and far between.

Success can only be obtained by experience, as it would be impossible for anyone to lay down certain rules to follow which would bring good results in all soils; but one of the important points in this method is to have a house properly constructed for the purpose, and such a house I will attempt to describe. house was built in the summer of '96 and has been in use now two seasons. In it a great variety of carnations have been tried and the first failure has yet to be charged up against it. The house is 256 feet long by twenty-two feet wide. An even span runs directly north and south with a slope of two feet to the south in its entire length. This slope to the south gives it the benefit of the winter sun better than if it were perfectly level, and carries all the water to the south end.

It is heated by steam, from five 11 1-inch pipes that run the entire length of the house. The pipes are arranged along the side of the house, the first being directly under the gutter and the others following four inches apart on down the side posts. They are fed from the northwest corner of the house and run on down the west side across the south end and back along the east side where they connect with the return, thus making a continuous flow of 534 feet and giving ample heat for the coldest weather. Each pipe is supplied with a globe valve where it connects with the feed and a check valve (hinged) where it empties into the return, so that we can use one pipe or the five just as we see fit.

Along each side of the house is a path two feet wide and dug out to the depth of two feet, giving a good working path without throwing the side of the house up high enough to make shade to hurt the earnations. Next to this 2-foot path is a bed five feet wide, a path eighteen inches wide, another bed five feet wide, a path eighteen inches wide, still another bed five feet wide and the 2-foot path along the side.

This gives us fifteen feet of growing surface across the house. Some may think this is not enough out of twenty-two feet, but a very careful comparison of results shows that this house gives us more flowers per square foot of ground surface under glass, than by any other method in use, and in addition to this, the plants are far healthier and stronger in every way. The reason for this is very plain as it is conceded by all growers that to get the best results from earnations they must have an abundance of light and a free circulation of air. The beds are made directly on the subsoil, and consist of five inches of loose growing soil, to which manure is added as may be necessary. This gives us, after the compost has be-come settled by watering, about the same depth of soil as that ordinarily used on benches, four to five inches. The 18-inch paths are made by simply staking up boards six inches wide for the sides.

The construction of the house is also to be taken into consideration, as the object is to have as little shade as possible. used a very light cypress rafter twelve feet long for each side and a ridge that is one and one-half inches by six, merely heavy enough to hol therafters together and allow the ventilators to rest below its level. There are no center supports at all, but five feet from the ridge on each side of the house there is a run of 1-inch pipe supported by 1-inch pipe posts every eight feet. This is ample sup-port for the roof, unless it is clumsily heavy, where the snow storms are not very severe. The glass used is 16x24, double thick and of first quality. It pays to buy good glass. The ventilation is such as would amount to a continuous ventilator the entire length of the house three feet wide, only it is equally divided on the two sides. The ventilators open at the ridge and by having them on both sides one set can be opened no matter whether the wind is from the east or the west without passing a cold draught of air over the plants, which is as injurious to the carnation as it is to the rose.

It is my object, as the balance of the glass needs rebuilding, to throw my whole place into such houses as this, attaching them and leaving them open under the gutters the same as Dreer has done in his new houses and as I have done myself on a small scale for ten years past. When this is accomplished I feel that I can grow enough carnations for every dollar that is invested to meet the competition of any grower who is in the business for a living and pays his bills. We carnation growers have made some money in the past but the margin of profit is getting smaller every year, so that it will become an absolute necessity for us to use every possible means of cheapening the production and at the same time increasing the quality of our flowers.

MARKET REACHES LOW-WHOLESALE WATER MARK, -- FLOWER SHOW OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE.—BUILDING OPERA-TIONS AT MADISON, N. L.

There is very little to say regarding the wholesale market this week, as everything is at low-water mark. American Beauties are about done here, and will not be looked for until our over-supply from outdoors is disposed of. Jackshave been mostly called for of late, but hybrids in general are bought only by the green Greeks. Brides and Bridesmaids, the few that are coming into this market, are very poor, and they are disposed of almost for the asking; any price goes.

Particularly red, were in their fullest demand this week. Recent events have taught the wise florist to grow them for early and late for this market. Carnations, indoor grown, saw their finish for this season this week, and it was a very poor adieu for such a prosperous White orchids have been called for frequently, but not as they were in "Ye olden time," for 15 to 20 cents were the top figures.

The Bridgeman Company had the decorations for the Koeder-Hayward wedding this week. White orchids and Dendrobium Jamesianum were used for the bouquets. Roses, paonies and palms were used profusely for the house decorations, in which Mr. Bridgeman displayed artistic originality.

At the strawberry and flower show held under the auspices of the American Institute, 113 West 38th street, Wm. Turner, gardener to Mr. W. Rockefeller, Tarrytown-on-Hudson, exhibited three bunches of grapes, two of Black Hamburgh and one of Muscat of Alexandria, which weighed three pounds each; also a vase of Kaiserin Augusta Victoria roses, cut outdoors, which were acknowledged by all to be the best ever seen so early in the season. A. Herrington, of Florham Farms, Madison, N. J., showed some fine delphiniums, and also some Hemerocallis aurantica major, very showy, and a good flower for floral decoration.

L. A. Noe, of Madison, N. J., is building one house especially for growing his young rose stock. Henry Hentz, Jr., of the same place, has just added six new houses to his already large establishment. Beauties, Brides and Maids will be his specialties for the coming season.

SUMMER QUIET PREVAILS. - KAISERINS GROWN SINCE EASTER.-JUNE MEETING OF THE PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY .- MANY FINE EXHIBITS .- MAN-DA'S NEW ROSES MAKE ANOTHER APPEAR-ANCE.

There is little that can be said about business for the demand is very light. There is plenty of stock but the quality is very poor. Prices are the same as last week and are about on a summer basis. Sweet peas are almost given away as 40 cents will buy 100 of the best flowers in the market and 15 cents is the price at which many are sold. Blooms are being cut from Kaiserin stock planted since Easter. The stems are rather short but the flowers are good. Crimson Ramblers in bunches have had a little sale at $1.50 per hundred sprays and proved very useful for decorations. Water lilies, pink, yellow and white, are now coming in and sell at from $3 to $5 per 100.

Pennock Bros, have had a large tank made for their show window which, when filled with lilies, makes a pretty display.

The independent order of Greeks seems be increasing rapidly, keeping pace with the surplus and doing its best to come out ahead in every deal. They are the closest of buyers and keep the commission men on edge all the time.

The June meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was a record breaker for a monthly show, both in point of attendance and in the display of flowers and vegetables. The H. A. Dreer Co. exhibited some twenty-five vases of Japanese iris, a dozen or more of a kind to a vase, which made a fine display and attracted much attention. These flowers will no doubt become very popular as they are so showy and come in at a time when most of their garden companions are through flowering. The Andorra Nursery Company also sent a choice col-lection of these beautiful irises. W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., made an exhibit of his new hybrid roses, Wichuraiana, crossed with teas and noisettes. There were vases of the varieties Evergreen Gem, Jersey Beauty, and Gardenia. This display caused much comment and was awarded a silver medal. They are an entirely new type of rose and will certainly be largely grown. A white cluster rose, a cross between Wichuraiana and a noisette, called Manda's Triumph is said to force well in pots and to be a fitting companion to Crimson Rambler. The individual flowers are as double and about the same size as the Rambler and are borne in clusters of much the same form. Mr. Manda also exhibited a bloom of the yellow calla, Elliottiana, and a new orchid, Ladia-Cattleya elegans Mandaiana. H. T. Clinkaberry was awarded a silver medal for Cattleya Harrisoma alba, the only known plant and a vote of thanks was tendered him for an exhibit of forty vases of orchids. A splendidly flowered plant of Bougainvillea glabra Sanderiana exhibited by John Hobson received a certificate of merit for culture. John Thatcher staged a few rare plants, one being Francoa ramosa nicely in flower, a bloom of the cradel orchid and also a vase of cypripediums. He also read a paper on the culture of dendrobiums, an abstract of which appears in another column. There were also some nice collec-tions of sweet peas exhibited for the II. F. Michell prizes and among the vegetables a number of plates of peas in the pod and heads of lettuce for prizes offered by II. F. Michell and the II. A. Dreer Co.

Philadelphians note that there are some bowlers in far away Omaha.

Scores of 170 and over area credit to any man, but they are hard to get when anything is at stake. The Evans cup looks very nice in the case at the club rooms along with some fifteen others, but we will willingly leave it in the west next August if we have to.

PAONY EXHIBITION OF THE MASSACHU-SETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY WAS VERY SUCCESSFUL —SEASON NOT FAVOR-ABLE BUT MANY TIME EXHIBITS WERE MADE. -- NAMES OF THE PRIZE WINNERS. --THE ROSE AND STRAWBERRY EXHIBITION.

The unfavorable early spring caused the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to postpone for sevendays its annual parony show, but even the additional week failed to afford time for the late varieties to come into bloom. However, Horticul-tural Hall was well filled with excellent exhibits on June 18, and, as the exhibi tion is a widely appreciated event, the attendance was large

The special prizes offered by Kelway & son, Langport, Lugland, for eighteen named varieties, single or double, brought out many bne flowers. The prizes were won by Dr. C. C. Weld, first, a silver gilt medal; and T. C. Thurlow, second, a bronze medal. Particularly good among by Weld scollection were Gen Carvaig nac, blush Lads Leonora Brantwell, dark rose Chas, Verdies, deep rose, Olobosa, blish Francois Ortegal, deep maroon, Model of Perfection, deep rose; Zephyrus, white and flesh color, Princess Beatrice, rose; Agnes Mary Kelway, cream and blush; Blanche Niege, white. The most striking among Mr. Thurlow's collection were Baroness Schreeder, white and blush; Bridesmaid, blush white; Fostira Maxima, white, marked with red; Modeste Guerin, deep carmine pink; Jeanne d'Arc, cream white and blush; J. Descaisne, white guard petals and yellow filaments; Edward Andre, very deep crimson. There were also several single varieties that were handsome in their way.

In the contest for prizes for collections of double varieties T. C. Thurlow was first with a very fine display including eightyfive varieties. Dr. C. G. Weld was second and Geo. Hollis, third.

The prizes for named single varieties was won by T. C. Thurlow, first, and Geo. Hollis, second. For specimen blooms Dr. C. G. Weld took both first and second with Model of Perfection, deep rose pink, and Blanche Niege, white.

In the class for cut blooms on long stems arranged in vases for effect there were three competitors, Dr. C. G. Weld, Geo. Hollis and Mount Vernon Nursery, the prizes being awarded in the order named.

Foxgloves made a fine showing and the prizes were awarded to John L. Gardner, Mrs. M. S. Walker and W. X. Craig, first, second and third in the order named.

Gratuities were awarded as follows: To Wm. II. Spooner for a display of roses which included several of the Lord Penzance sweetbriers and the new single rose, Hebe's Lip; to Mrs. E. M. Gill for sixteen vases of pæonies and a large display of hybrid roses; to James Comley for two large tables filled with rhododendrons, azaleas, paonies and foliage and flowers of ornamental trees and shrubs; to Oakes Ames for a display of hardy plants, including Heracleum giganteum in flower; to G. L. Clark for a display of hardy flowers; to Mrs. A. W. Blake for a display of hardy flowers; to the estate of los, S. Fay for rhododendrons and pagenies; to Rea Bros. for pyrethrums and other hardy plants; to W. N. Craig for a display of hardy flowers; to Wm. Nieholson for three fine vases of earnations, Daybreak, Eldorado and Mrs. G. M. Bradt.

R. and J. Farquhar & Co., exhibited a R. and J. Parquian & Co., Canada beautiful collection of double hardy pyrethrums, the finest ever shown here. were awarded a silver medal.

Oakes Ames was awarded a certificate of merit for a new variety of Cattleya Mendelli, very delicately shaded, named

Mrs. A. C. Ames.
T. C. Thurlow was awarded a certificate of merit for the new double syringa, Philadelphus Lemoynii.

C. G. Roebling showed a cut spray of Cattleya Mendelli var. C. G. Roebling, with petals of a peculiar mottled rosyviolet color.

W. A. Manda showed four new roses, seedlings of his own raising, crosses between Wichuraiana and Minc. Hoste, Perle des Jardins and Metcor, which have recently attracted much attention. The first are in varying shades of yellow and are evergreen; the Meteor cross is a deliicate pink.

In looking over an exhibition of herbacoms paronies one is struck with the deployable condition of the nomenclature of the flower as regards the garden names. Probably many years of neglect and care lessness in naming are responsible for the It seems as though every dealer had named and renamed old varieties without consideration until one name is applied to anywhere from one to a half dozen different varieties, and one never knows when he buys by name what he will receive. If the interest in the flower increases as it is likely to do they will need to be taken in hand, as the narcissi were a few years ago in England, for a general straightening out of names. If it could be accomplished it certainly would be a great convenience to both buyer and A. H. FEWKES. seller.

The annual rose and strawberry exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which was held on June 24, was superb as to the strawberries, weak as to roses and very good in other classes. About 400 quarts of strawberries were displayed on the tables, and they have never been excelled. The cold, backward season has retarded the roses and the date was several days too early to show them at their best. The display from the them at their best. The display from the estate of J. S. Fay filled one-half of the upper hall. Other large rose exhibitors were W. N. Craig, James Comley, J. L. Gardner, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, Mrs. E. A. Wilkie, E. S. Converse. Wise M. S. Weller, Lee H. White Dr. C. Miss M. S. Walker, Jos. H. White, Dr. C. G. Weld, Mrs. A. W. Blake, Dr. O. S. Paige and W. H. Spooner.

Novelties were scarce. Wm. II. Spooner's Hebe's Lip and Lord Penzance sweetbriers and Walsh's Joseph S. Fay being the only ones noted. More admired than any others were Jackson Dawson's beautiful multiflora and rugosa hybrids, which received honorable mention.

One of the finest orchid groups seen here for years came from W. P. Winsor; miltonias, epidendrums and Cælogyne Dayana were superbly grown. J. B. Shurtleff, Jr., showed a geranium said to be a sport from Mme. Salleroi, more vigorous and with leaf more deeply cleft than in the parent variety. James Com-ley made a fine display of his hardy white seedling rhododendron. E. J. Mitton staged a dozen well-flowered fancy pelar-goniums. George Hollis exhibited two commendable seedling pivonies. John L. Gardner showed several handsome orchids. Robert Laurie had excellent chrysanthemums and tuberous begonias. T. C. Thurlow had eighty varieties of paronies on display, and John Jeffres and W. H. Cowing brought extensive collec-tions of Spanish iris. There were also large displays of sweet williams, fox-gloves, pelargoniums, gloxinias and other seasonable flowers from many other contributors, and the exhibition as a whole was exceedingly good, notwith-standing the inferiority of the roses. The public was admitted free. Among the visitors noted were Leonard Barron and A. T. Boddington, of New York; F. L. Atkins, of Orange; and D. MacRorie, of South Orange, N. J.

Topeka, Kans.

James Hayes, of College Hill, is confined to his couch by a knee which was recently severely injured by a kicking horse. Business has been so brisk with him this spring that he finds his illness irksome. He is making some improvements about his place, putting heat into the violet house and building an addition.

W. C. Graves had a successful rose sale this week, and reports spring business as excellent.

M. J. Wallace is building a new house of a thousand feet of glass to meet the requirements of increasing trade.

Since Memorial Day trade has been quite dull, but this spring has seen a greater sale for bedding plants than ever before.

Louis Schmutz, of Brooklyn, N. V., celebrated his silver wedding June 21.

L'ELIA-CATTLEYA ADMIRAL DEWEY WAS exhibited recently in London. There is evidently one Englishman who knows a good thing when he hears about it.

JET BLACK ROSES, so long considered impossible of production, have, it is announced, made their appearance in Russia. Mr. Fetisoff, an amateur of Veronezh, is said to be the originator of the plant which bears them.

THE new Lilium rubellum lately exhibited for the first time in England has made a very pleasing impression. It is apparently very free flowering and the plant is said to resemble a slender L. auratum. Color a palerose or rosy pink.

JOHN MORRIS, gardener at Forest Park, St. Louis, has "remembered the Maine" by an ornamental bed representing that famous battle ship. Another new decoration in the park is a huge shield-shaped bed in which in bold letters is, "Dewey, REFERRING to our report of the American Carnation Society's convention, an Australian contemporary remarks: a list of standard varieties submitted to the conference over 100 are enumerated, and of these hardly a dozen probably are known to Australian growers. This suggests isolation from American growers so far as this particular flower is concerned. and there seems no good reason why more intimate relations should not be established between nurserymen of the two countries, which would doubtless prove to be of mutual benefit."

Fumigating With Sulphur.

Constant advice is given to fumigate houses with sulphur after they are cleared. This is a most excellent thing to do, but before burning the sulphur the hose should be put on and the whole honse thoroughly wet down inside, roof and all, reaching every crack and cranny possible. The water absorbs the fumes of the sulphur and earries them into the dirt and so reaches the depths of many cracks that the dry fumes would not reach.

On entering the spacious grounds each lady was presented with a bunch of flowers, and the gentlemen with boutoniers of carnations. At nine o'clock in the large pavilion, the orchestra, behind a bower of flowers, rendered the grand march which was participated in by 150 couples led by James Hession, president of the association, and Miss Waller. After the march dancing was indulged in until the march dancing was indused in until the small hours of morning. In a smaller pavilion a piper and fiddler discoursed excellent music. THE BUSINESS SITUATION.—THE WEATHER. -MARYLAND HARD LUCK STORIES TERSE-LY TOLD.

There is nothing very cheering in the present condition of business. Plant sales are practically over for the season and the market men, who ought to know about plant sales, if anybody does, seem generally inclined to pronounce it a had season; slow sales and low prices. One florist, to close out his stock, sold 1500

4-inch pot geraniums for $15, and stories of similar sacrifice sales are sufficiently numerous to show rather a demoralized market. At such times as these it is some consolation to know that others are as badly off, and the prices the vegetable gardeners have received for their two chief crops at this season, strawberries and peas, make one, if not glad to be a florist, at least glad not to be a truck farmer. Only fancy growing, gathering and marketing green peas at 12 cents a bushel, a price at which thousands of bushels have been sold to the canning houses this month.

The weather is very dry and crops of all kinds will suffer unless we have a drenching rain soon. Prices of cut flowers remain unchanged, and, indeed, there is little probability of a rise for some time.

The committee on arrangements is C. Rayner, S. J. Thompson and H. Kleinstarink.

Business has been very good here the past week. There has been no over supply of stock, and fair prices have prevailed.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-We notice in your issue of June 11, under the head of "Canna Nomenclature," that A. Blanc & Co. claim the name of Admiral Dewey for their new canna on the ground of priority in publishing said name. We would like to say to the readers of the American Florist that when we learned that A. Blane & Co. had gone to considerable trouble to hold that name, we immediately waived all claim to it. But we do think that in a case of this kind that priority alone should not establish the right to its ownership, but that the merit of the plants in ques-tion, as new and distinct varieties of value, should have great weight in arriving at a decision. We would be willing to submit our plants on this basis.

How to Get Government Bonds.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-By special request of Secretary Gage, one of your contemporaries publishes a circular telling all about how to get a bundle of Uncle Sam's nice new bonds—that is, all about it, except one thing. The secretary forgets to tell us how to get the $20, and the careless editor overlooks it and fails to supply the omission.

I have long wished to own bonds and cut coupons (I think the wire shears would do the cutting, on a pinch). The only bonds I ever had anything to do with were peace bonds, and I had to give them-never mind why, it is not a pleasant remembrance.

Now about these other bonds, I want one awful bad. Please, Mr. Editor, tell me how to get the 820? The secretary evidently expects all of us florists to buy, and the editor of the other paper seems to be backing his friend the secretary right up, or, perish the thought, was it only a case of a column and a halt of gratuitous reading matter

The Latest Swindle.

From a variety of places reports have recently come of swindles perpetrated in the manner practiced upon L. E. Marnuisce Syraguse N. V. Lune 17 quisee, Syracuse, N. Y., June 17.

A well dressed man rented eighteen palms in the name of one of Mr. Marquisee's good customers. The florist's delivery wagon was met near the customer's home and was escorted to the rear entrance to the grounds, where the plants were left, the swindler having previously asked and obtained permission to leave them there "while he was delivering to customers in the neighborhood." After the wagon had gone the man and an accomplice peddled out the plants, at the best bargains they could drive, and vanished. The whole transaction was so like ordinary methods that no one's suspicion was aroused until Mr. Marquisee telephoned next day to his eustomer to inquire at what hour he should call for the palms

COMMENCEMENT WEEK PROVES A BOON TO FLORISTS.—ROSES ARE OF POORQUALITY. CARNATIONS ARE ABOUT DONE.—SWEET PEAS AND P. CONIES IN FAVOR.—NOTES AND COMMENTS.

With cut flower dealers, the past week has been one of the busiest of the year. Somewhat less flowers have been on the market than during the preceding seven havs, and the demand has slightly improved, not enough, however, to materially affect prices, except on the better grades of stock. Good roses of all vari-cties are searce. American Beauties have been most in demand, and all grades, except the extra long stemmed, are higher A few very good outdoor Jacks are in the market and find ready sale at $2 to $4 per hundred. Meteors, Perles and Kaiserins have all sold well. A large proportion of the Brides and Bridesmaids are of such poor quality that they are practically worthless. Longiflorum lilies and piconies have been plentiful. Klehm's Nursery and A. Kennicott, two of the largest paeonia growers, report the sale of paronies last week to have been about 25% larger than they were for the corresponding week of last year. Carnations have not been in large supply this week, and have sold out well, in fact not in two years has there been a time when the wholesale houses were cleaned out so early, and so regularly as they have been in the past two or three days.

Carden flowers have been in good supply and have sold well, sweet peas being the inverties of this class and about the best selling flower in the market. Enormous quantities have been disposed of during the past week at from 25 to 40 enes per 100. The demand for flowers for school commencements this season has been fully up to that of any previous ear. A much larger stock has been on the market and lower prices have premied. After this week the stock of roses ed arrations will be greatly reduced, as litheold stock of roses that have been heal to produce a crop for this week will a critical thrown out or dried off prepartor to replanting. The heat has about 15 as for the carnation plants in the gree houses and but lew flowers can be peried of them hereafter.

GREAT SUMMER SHOW AT THE TEMPLE GARDERS.—CRIMSON RAMBLER ROSE VERY POPULAR.—NEW MALMAISON CARNATIONS.—JACKMAN'S HYBRIDS OF CLEMATIS COCCINEA—NEW FERNS AND AZALEAS.—VALUABLE ORCHIDS STOLEN.

The great summer show held at the Temple gardens under the auspices of the Royal Horticultural Society was a great success this season. This gathering has now become one of the most important This gathering has horticultural events of the season and brings together a big assemblage of the eraft. Although exhibitors are under a disadvantage owing to the limited space. all classes of plants were well represented and it would have been difficult to have made better use of the space. Orchids as usual were a great feature, but not quite so extensively shown as on some previous occasions. Roses were well shown and among them some fine examples of Crimson Rambler. This has proved one of the most valuable plants for florists' work of recent introduction. No doubt we shall get more growers to take it in hand in the future, but at present it commands a higher price than almost any flowering plant in the market. H. B. May has been one of the most successful growers,

A group of Malmaison carnation Prinress of Wales was a great feature of the show and carried grand blooms of a deep rose pink on plants of remarkable vigor. These came from Leopold de Rothschild. Messrs. Cutbush also showed some good varieties of Malmaison. And Chas. Turner had some good things in carnations. Tuberous begonias were well shown by several exhibitors. A marvelous advance has been made especially in the double varieties. A most interesting teature of the show was a large group of phyllocacti, including a large number of hybrid varieties, which showed a great diversity of bright colors. If these would only stand well they would soon be great favorites with florists. The above came from James Veitch & Sons, who also showed one of the finest groups of caladiums I have ever seen.

A very pretty exhibit of sweet peas came from one exhibitor, about fifty varieties including some very distinct colors Clematis were wonderfully well shown by Messrs, Smith & Co., of Worcester. These are well worth more attention for florists' work. Two year old plants of the C patens type are the best for small pots, they always flower freely; and only require a little extra warmth to have them in early in the season. Messrs. Lach man's hybrids of Clematis coccineasere very interesting, but they require torther improvement in point of color before they will be of much value to flo n ts. Messrs, Sander & Co. staged a the group, the chief feature being their m & Acalypha Sanderiana - I think there o a great future for this plant. I underconduct flowers as freely in winter as in countraind the long racemes of rich crimson are well shown off with bright green foliage. I shall be disappointed if this does not prove a useful plant. Ferns were well shown by three growers, but few novelties appeared.

Mr. May's new phlebodium was an exception. This is a variety from P. glaucum with broad pinnæ deeply lobed along the margins, the lobes overlapping each other. This was certainly one of the greatest novelties in the exhibition. Pteris Drinkwateri, an improved form of P. major, is certainly a good fern and will take the place of Ouvrardii which hitherto has been the best variety of P. cretica major, and one of the most popular ferns we have for market. Messrs. Cuthbert staged some fine hybrid varieties of Azalea mollis which should prove valuable for florists work. A great variety of hardy flowering plants were exhibited but in a limited space it is not possible to refer to all the good things seen.

A most regrettable incident occured at the close of the show, one exhibitor having some very choice orchids stolen. I am told that one of the plants lost was valued at three hundred guineas, or about $1,500.

Passing Events in Denmark.

The question of trade schools for young gardeners has for several years been under consideration by the Society of Danish Gardeners (the term "gardener" embracing all branches of the trade) and schools were started in Copenhagen and Odense in 1896. As now arranged they are evening schools and operated during the five months October to February, two winters making one course. The teaching embraces: "General Instruction in Horticulture," "Management of Nursery and Orchard," "Culture of Flowering and Ornamental Plants," "Forcing Fruits and Vegetables" and "Drawing." The school terminates with an examination, the result of which is published in the organ of the society, and each graduate receives a diploma recognized by the society.

The intention with these schools is to give the young members of the craft the much needed theoretical instruction in as cheap and good a way as possible. The tuition fees are very low and the time, from 7:30 to 9:30 four evenings a week, enables the young men to attend to their regular duties and yet have time left for study. In order to obtain good books for these trade schools the committee in charge offered generous prizes for each course, the chief demands being conciseness and clearness, and in this way excellent mannals were obtained.

The young men show a praiseworthy interest in this work, and to foster it the instruction is made as interesting as possible. Once in a while some of the veteran horticulturists visit the schools to see how things are progressing and to give some good practical advice and relate interesting incidents of their experience. The schools here referred to have no relation or connection with the government horticultural school, which is a more scientific institution, while these are intended for the practical gardeners in general.

The horticulture of Denmark suffered quite a loss this spring in the death of Professor of Botany Joh. Lange, at the advanced age of 80 years. He was a very able man. From 1856 to 1876 he was director of the botanical garden and connected with the royalhorticultural school from 1858 to 1893. He was one of the founders and for a long time one of the presidents of the Danish Botanical Society. In 1856 he was chosen to continue the great national illustrated botanical work, "Flora Danica," which had been in preparation during the reigns of six kings, and he succeeded in completing it. In addition to this he was a prolific writer on general botany.

The old question of fewer hours and more pay has been giving some trouble in some of the commercial places in Copenstrike, about one-fifth of the employes leaving work. The difficulty was, however, soon settled, the men in most cases getting what they asked for.

The season so far has been cool and rather wet, but with sufficient dry weather for sowing and planting, and the present prospects are in favor of bountiful crops.

H. HANSEN.

St. Paul.

The last month of the season for the florist business finds trade good and everything encouraging. A brief retrospect of the season shows that fall trade was fairly good, chrysanthemums selling well both as cut flowers and as potted plants. Winter trade was excellent; the mild weather reduced coal bills quite materially and increased the crop and every-thing sold at good figures. While the spring was cool and backward, it was favorable to trade as a whole. Trade at Memorial Day was very satisfactory. In the cut flower line, stock was abundant and of good quality. Outdoor stock was not plentiful here and this helped to maintain prices. Carnations werein good demand, also roses, lily of the valley, gardenias, etc. The cemeteries were laden with flowers and potted plants and the heroes were remembered as never before. Following close after Memorial Day was the first batch of June weddings and after them came the commencements, where every sweet girl must have from one to twenty bouquets and baskets of flowers. This, with the usual amount of funeral work, has kept most of the brethren busy,

A few days of hot weather has hurt the roses considerably and good stock is not plentiful. Some good carnations and sweet peas are coming in, while some choice auratums-the queen of all the lilies-are now in the market.

In the plant line, nearly every one is cleaned out of salable stock. This is a good index to the season's trade, though there is the usual amount of grumbling about low prices, etc. A great many plants are sold at the stands at the city market, where rent and other expenses are very light. A few of the growers, and some of those with the best stock, were foolish enough to cut prices at the beginning of the season, thus injuring their own trade as well as that of others. Good 4-inch geraniums have sold this season as low as 75 cents per dozen, although the average price at retail was from $1.25 to $1.50. Pansies were the best sellers, with geraniums, heliotrope, ageratum, vincas, etc., in good demand. Cannas have sold well and are becoming more popular each year for bedding purposes and massing on the lawn.

L. L. May & Co., handled several thousand cannas this year, including the standard varieties as well as several of the novelties. In the reds, Bouvier and Pierson are the favorites. In yellow Count DeBouchard is far ahead up to date, with Souvenir d'Antonin Crozy as a great improvement over Queen Charlotte for that type. Burbank produces immense trusses of bloom of pure yellow which fade very quickly. Champion and Duke of Marlboro show up in magnificent form and are real acquisitions. Klondike is an elegant plant with a pretty bloom of very large size. Maiden's Blush is a new and distinct color in the canna family, which should become very popular unless it fades badly.

Work at the parks is progressing rapidly and should be finished in a week or ten days. A great many cannas have been planted, which should produce a grand effect later in the season. Hardy stock is just now at its best, pæonies, weigelias, syringas, snowballs and roses being in the zenith of their flowering period.

C. A. Smith, of Minneapolis, was a C. A. Smith, of Minneapous, was a recent caller and reports a very gratifying spring trade. He is just completing his order with the park board which called for upwards of 50,000 plants.

Omaha.

At the monthly meeting of the Nebraska and lowa Florists' Club, S. B. Stewart, seedsman and florist, of Omaha, was unanimously chosen as superintendent of exhibits at the S. A. F. meeting to be held here in August.

J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia., is looking forward to increased trade in business as he is extending five houses 24x130 which he built last year, making them 24x200 and building two additional ones  $24 \mathrm{x} 200$  and also a violet house of the samelength. They are all built on modern principles, with butted glass with zinc joints. He will use 50,000 feet of glass 16x24.

Rose stock in this locality is generally in very good condition.

Members of the Florists' Club are putting in considerable time in practice bowling and are making some fair scores. Here is the score made June 21:

The horticultural and floricultural display at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition is keeping up well under the spell of warm weather. California, Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Oregon fruit growers are well represented by their native fruits. California has a display of oranges. Missouri, Illinois, lowa and Nebraska each have a splendid exhibit of apples. Nebraska heading the list with sixty-two distinct varieties. Illinoisfruit is highly colored and the arrangement of the same with mirrors for a back ground gives a pleasing effect. Oregon as yet is not fully represented as her season is just commencing. Kansas and Colorado and several other states are preparing to make a fine display.

The floral display is being augmented daily. Among the leading exhibits is that of W. J. Hesser, of Plattsmouth, Neb., a fine Cycas circinalis and a very large Agave Americana. The aquatic exhibit of Dreer & Co., of Philadelphia, is making a good showing, several nympheas being in blossom. The Victoria regia is showing up well and now making good

THE CROPS AND THE MARKET.-VISITORS. -A TRIP TO LANCASTER,-WORD FROM WARRIOR GEORGE STEPHAN.

The supply of carnations still keeps up and the quality is good, but in about another week the crop will be virtually exhausted, and the fortunate grower whose crop holds out can then get his own price. Paonies are nearly all passed. Sweet peas are in over-supply and are not in much demand. There is some fine iris coming in from Brookins, of Orchard Park; the colors and quality are unusually good. The sale of flowers is about one-third what it was in former years because the schools do not allow flowers to be sent to the halls. Still, orderscome in for the better quality of flowers.

George Asmus, formerly of Buffalo, but now with Herman Schiller, of Chicago, paid us a visit last week. He is looking well and evidently enjoys the breezes of Lake Michigan.

A visit to Lancaster last week found W. J. Palmer, Sr., busy building new houses and overhauling the old ones. When the improvements are completed it will be worth any one's time going out to see his place, which Mr. Palmer is always pleased to show to visitors. If the owner is absent his general super-intendent, B. S. Myers, will always be found ready to do the honors. S. B. Smiley's greenhouses are being repaired and new benches are being put in for early planting.

The florists in the vicinity of Pine Hill have had a busy season with vases for the several cemeteries out that way.

George Stephan, an employe of Wm. Buechi, has gone with the 65th Regiment to fight for his country, and in a recent letter from him reports good health. W.

THE WEATHER, STOCK AND TRADE.-RE-PLANTING WELL UNDER WAY.—CARNA-TIONS ARE LOOKING WELL.—VIOLET GROWERS ARE RESORTING TO THE USE  $\bar{\varphi}$

During the past week trade has been mainly due to commencement exercises and to weddings, which seem to be coming on later than usual this season. Continued warm weather has had its effect on stock. Sweet peas have been steadily growing poorer and are about over for the season; carnations are getting smaller and smaller, and the only good things in roses are some of the better summer varieties, such as Kaiserin and Testout.

Replanting is under full swing and most growers are getting their stock in from two weeks to a month earlier than usual, having found the growth last season extremely unsatisfactory on late planted stock. Carnations in the field are looking well, they have nearly all had one topping; owing to the abundant moisture, they have broken well and promise to make good plants. Violets are also looking well with the exception of the small single variety, which with some growers is not standing so well as is Maric Louise. Quite a number of growers are carrying violets in pots, expecting to get an earlier crop of flowers than from the field-grown stock, which last season, owing to the dry summer and fall, was very late in coming into flower. It is to guard against a repetition of the shortage that pot violets are being tried.

The committee appointed by the Florists' Club to arrange for our annual outing, have about decided to hold it at Croeve Cocur Lake, some time during July. Fuller particulars will be arranged later R. F. T.

MACOMB, ILLS.- J. B. Keefer is about to erect a fine greenhouse upon the site of the old Normal building.

THE largest and oldest nursery in Europe is said to be that of the Messrs. Spaeth, of Rixdorf, Germany. It comprises 700 acres, 680 of which are planted with stock which includes practically, all the trees and shrubs which can be grown in that climate. There were nearly fifty members in attendance, including park superintendants, landscape architects and lovers of nature from New York to Salt Lake and from Duluth to New Orleans. In the absence of Pres. J. B. Castleman, of Louisville, Vice-President L. E. Holden, of Cleveland, presided and appointed the following committees: Auditing—E. J. Parker, Quincy: T. W. Kelsey, New York; Dr. W. W. Folwell, Minneapolis.

ton, Onio.

Resolutions—Secretary Manning, Lewis Johnson, New Orleans, G. Wahl, Milwan-

Detroit was selected for the next meet

Franklin Kelsey Phoenix.

As man more thoroughly deserves the esteem of his fellow workers than does Franklin K. Phonix, who is probably the oldest nurseryman in America, having embarked in business at Delayan, Wis., in the Spring of 1812. Mr. Phornix was born in Perry, Gen-esce county, N. V., in March, 1825. His parents removed to Wisconsin in March, After a decade of business activity Mr. Pho nix started a branch nursery at Bloomington, Ill., where he concentrated his efforts from 1854 to 1877. After four years of mactivity here embarked in business at I clavan, where he is now completing his fifty seventh year of horticult anal endenvor. In 1850 Mr. Phænix man ried Miss M. L. Topping of Darien, Wis They have four sons and two daughters. The eldest son, Samuel T, served four years with J C Vaughan, and is now min ng in Utah. The second son, I. S., is the only one to adopt his father scalling as his lib s pursuit. He is now proprietor of the og 10% omingtommir er v started in 1852

Despite the weight of his seventy-three years, Mr. Phoenix is energetically proseenting business undertakings and enjoys a thriving trade. He handles general nursery stock but makes a specialty of hardy roses grafted on a native stock

MIS-STATEMEN

NDER date of Boston, June 14th, Jos. Breck and Sons Corporation intimate a mis-statement in our recent letter to the trade. The following extract from a contract existing between the Braslan Seed Growers Co. and Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation, would seem to be the best evidence of our rights and has been accepted as conclusive by the U.S. Postmaster at Chicago after a careful hearing.

"The said Charles P. Braslan and Sherman W. Callender, under the firm name of Braslan Seed Growers Co., or any Corporation which shall be organized by said Braslan and Callender or by either of them under the name of Braslan Seed Growers Co., shall have the right after May 1st. 1898 and so long as said Charles P. Braslan shall be connect d with said firm or corporation, of describing themselves or itself as successor of the Chicago Branch of Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation with the right to open all mail addressed to the Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation at Chicago and with the right to appropriate and have the benefit of all such mail matter pertaining to the crop of 1898. But inquiries or communications relating to seeds of which the Chi-6300 Franch of Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation had a surplus on June 1st. 1898, are to be forwarded to said Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation at Boston until such time as said surplus shall be disposed of."

We turn over to that Corporation all such mail not of interest to us and frankly admit that our agreement applies to 1898 crops-As the Braslan Seed Growers Co. propose making their first season's deliveries of new crop seeds should we receive, which we hardly anticipate, inquiries for seed crops of 1897, 1896 or other earlier years, we will freely pass the same to Jos. Breek A Sons Corporation at Boston or their successors, as already arranged for,

My foreier customers, friends in the trade and others who may expect to require seeds of THIS SEASONS CROP on a basis of close contract prices are cordially invited to correspond with Yours Truly. the undersigned as above.

OTTINGS FROM THE CITY OF PARK-LIKE LAWNS .- TRADE IS EXCELLENT .- WHAT THE GROWERS AND RETAILERS ARE DOOKG

The weather has been very favorable this season for bedding stock. There has been no frost or cold storms and there has been just the right amount of rain. Watertown is a city of fine lawns, the streets being broad and the residences not crowded together. There are few fences and the city is practically one large park. The planting of palms, bay trees and hydrangeas in the lawns, with occasionally a small bed of coleus, geraniums and other bedding plants, adds very much to the park-like appearance.

A. Stockle, the Ten Eyck florist, has almost finished bedding out. He has a large trade in this line and in addition fills hundreds of vases, window-boxes and baskets. He has charge of the bedding at Brooksides, Watertown's beautiful city of the dead, and his work there has attracted the attention of thousands.

Green & Underhill, of Munson street, are pushing their large wholesale business and their plant is a hive of industry just

W. A. Clark & Son, of State street, do a large business in bedding plants and have had to work night and day of late to keep up with orders, but they are now nearly through and are expecting the calm which always strikes the florist about July 1.

W. K. Skeels, the downtown florist, is planning several improvements and will not be satisfied until he has the most complete small plant possible. He is building up the best cut flower and funeral trade in the city and realizes that a neat and attractive office and sales room are essential. He reports the most successful season since he started in business five years ago. W. P. Darby

P. Darby reports his violets looking well. Mr. Darby has had phenomenal success for the past two years and his plants are in better condition now than ever before.

Geo. N. Sayles also devotes his houses to violets. He had great success for several years, but for the past two winters they have not done quite so well. George will catch them right again, though, for he is not one of the give-up-easy kind.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY GARDENERS' ASSO-CIATION MAKES A SUCCESS OF ITS FIRST EXHIBITION,-NOTES OF THE SHOW.

Fehr's opera house was the scene of an excellent exhibition of roses, herbaceous and other plants on June 17 and 18. The show was given by the Westchester County Gardeners' Association and was County Gardeners' Association and was the first exhibition of this character ever held in this district. The largest prize winners were Hicks Arnold, Andrew Grierson, gardener, and Hobart Park, W. Harvey, gardener. Both gentlemen had remarkably handsome as well as numerons exhibits. James M. Constable, Wm. Anderson, gardener; and Mrs. Tashel, Robert Jenkins, gardener, also captured several prizes. Clio was the best flower in the hall in the hall.

There were splendid exhibits of hardy perennials from Hicks Arnold, Hobart Park, J. M. Constable, Robert Mallory and the Osborne estate, most noticeable among them being Delphinium hybridum, Coreopsis Harvest Moon, double pyreth-rums, campanulas, Henchera sanguinea; Centranthus ruber and sweet william in in fine sorts.

In foliage plants Jas. W. Quintard, G. X. Amrhyn, gardener, took most of the prizes. The Osborne estate sent in a lot of well flowered geraniums in well grown specimens and a small collection of truits and vegetables attracted much attention.

In the non-competitive groups T. R. Pierson & Co., staged a fine display of cut roses and decorative plants and W. A. Manda, of South Orange, showed his new hybrid evergreen roses, crosses between R. Wichnraiana and Perle, Hoste and Meteor, which received a first-class certificate of merit.

A New Rose.

A new red rose raised by Messrs. Alexander Dickson & Sons, Ireland, and to be sent out jointly by Ernst Asmus and Robert Scott & Son (for the firm which raised it), has only been spoken about in an undertone, occasionally amounting to not much more than a whisper; but a few days ago Alexander Scott (of Robert Scott & Son), E. G. Hill and Robert Craig were speaking about it quite freely, as though everybody knew all about it, or if they did not, it was about time they did.

Without hesitation it was stated to far outdo Meteor in the production of high quality blooms. The color is also superior, retaining that velvety crimson shade-so much admired in a rose by everybody-longer than does the variety which it is expected it is destined to supersede. It was also stated that it is not so full of petals as Meteor, which may make it less valuable as a summer rose; but that fact should not be against it for winter blooming, provided, of course, there are enough petals in it to give it the appearance of being double, and at the same time to retain its bud shape long enough to satisfy retail buyers.

Alexander Scott has planted, or is about to plant, 500 at his new place at Sharon Hill, Pa., which is only fourteen minutes ride from Broad street station, l'hiladelphia, and four minutes' walk from the station at Sharon Hill to the greenhouses; so that we may confidently expect that many pilgrimages will be taken out there during the coming season by the growers hereabouts, who will want to see how the newcomer is behaving itself. Mr. Asmus has a larger number than Mr. Scott, but how many I have forgotten. This new rose has been have forgotten. given the name of Liberty.

Pittsburg.

The cut flower trade in this section of the country has fallen off greatly in the past two weeks, and if it were not for funeral work and school commencements the florists could all take a vacation. The stock of flowers is very abundant. The quality is good and the few buyers are getting great value for their money.

The plant growers are about through with the rush in their line and all are well satisfied with the season's business, which has been the best they have had for several years.

The interest in the S. A. F. convention at Omaha is increasing, and from present appearances Pittsburg and vicinity will be well represented.

E C. Reineman has left for a short sojourn at Mt. Clemons, Mich. His many triends hope he may succeed in getting rid of the rheumatism, which has been troub-ling him for some time. REGIX.

WEATHER AND WAR KEEP FLORISTS GUES-SING .- A PRINCE OF THE REALM MAKES TRADE BRISK -BEDDING PLANTS THAT ARE IN DEMAND.-RENTAL OF PALMS -THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY FLOUR-ISHES.-A CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW IN SIGHT.

The weather here was of such a nature throughout April and May that it kept plantsmen guessing, and as some of the craft happen to be ex-members of the state militia and subject to a call, it can be imagined that these gentlemen thought tharder than others not so placed; and those florist soldiers are still wondering whether or not they are to have a summer trip to Cuba or enjoy the "Dewey" mornings in the Philippines.

It is much in evidence that the war scare has affected the rental of many cottages that have heretofore been on the foremost list of desirable Newport summer homes. But we are not taking too gloomy a view of the prospects for the coming season, for the reason that we have had the Prince, and heir to the throne, of Belgium with us the past week as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, of Chicago. He received a royal entertainment and the floral decorations were claborate. They were changed each day and have since been spoken of as being very creditable to Siebrecht & Son, the decorators.

All florists are rushing out bedding plants. Of geraniums, Gen. Grant, the light pink variety, Mme. Belmont, known by others here as Lady Alice, have for several seasons been much in demand and still predominate. Cannas of large flowering varieties are extensively planted and scem to grow more in favor each season. Tuberous begonias, do not thrive in Newport except in well protected places There has been quite a demand for coleus and heliotrope and rose geraniums are still much used in borders. Annuals, with the exception of zinnias, asters and sweet peas have been discarded to a great extent. Of sweet peas the pink varieties are grown most extensively. Begonias of the Vernon and Erfordia types have not been handled to any extent by the florists as yet, although considered good, especially the Erfordia. In many private places these begonias are planted largely. Lobelias seem to be little used hereabouts for planting purposes although they are in demand for basket and tub filling; for this purpose the dwarf variety is considered the best. Dwarf nasturtiums are also much used for filling and for cut flower purposes.

Alternanthera and bedding plants of this class are in little demand. In many places, the greenhouses which were once empty during summer months are now planted with tuberous begonias, Semple's asters, gloxinias and chrysanthemums, and frequently these plants are exceptionally well grown,

The greenhouses on the estate of the arte Ogden Goelet, the finest and most extensive in Newport, have encountered a "frost," the best plants having been the best plants having been sold, and the greenhouses now appear to be exacuated, which is considered deplorable as the plants here were once so well grown and cared for. The same might be said of the J. I. Van Alen greenhouses which are now used for conniercial pur-

The rental of palms and foliage plants tor indoor decoration is an extensive trade ere and it is I case of renting a palm to enstoner that knows what a palm ald la Italias that have the "vellows or palms with leaves torn through the center or palms that are furnished at "low-water-mark" are not in demand here.

The Horticultural Society gave more entertainments this season than it ever alid before. The membership is steadily increasing and now numbers 120. The society has been granted a charter by the legislature of the state and the members have taken steps towards issuing tickets for a chrysanthemum show. The judges for the exhibition will be gentlemen selected from other cities. A keen interest is manifested by many growers and J. J. B. a good show is expected.

Knoxville, Tenn.

All Knoxville sympathizes with Charles W. Crouch, the florist, in the death of his son, Thomas Pendleton Crouch, who, although but 23 years of age, was the leading musician of thecity and one of its most popular and widely known residents. The Crouch family have been for many years identified with the growth and progress of the city. The dead musician's grandfather came to Knoxville from England and in the early days built the greenhouses in which his son is now doing business.

Altoona, Pa.

According to reports the sale of spring plants may be likened to that of the proverbial hot cake. Everything in that line sold readily and, on the whole, at fairly good prices. Nor was the Memorial Day trade in any way disappointing, school children as well as their parents, largely patronizing theflorist's establishments.

Myers Bros' new range of houses at Eldorado, three miles out of Altoona on the Holydaysburg branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, presents a sight well worthy of seeing. The beautiful grounds surrounding them, and I may remark in passing, that the landscape gardeners' skill is noticeable here in no small degree, the stretch of the Allegheny mountains to the west and east as far as the eye can reach, make this an ideal place. Nine houses, comprising about 25,000 feet of glass, built in the most approved style and equipped with all the modern appliances, constitute their range. A feature worthy of special notice is their hot water heating apparatus, operated under high pressure. By an ingenious device, the heat is evenly or otherwise distributed through the houses, there being a sufficient quantity provided to heat the dwelling house as well. A general stock of cut flowers, bedding and decora-tive plants and bulbous stock is being grown quite successfully. Allen Myers takes charge of the Eldorado establishment, while his brother attends to the Помо. Altoona branch.

MONTANA FLORISTS REPORT THE BEST SPRING TRADE ON RECORD.—JOTTINGS AMONG THE GROWERS.

The year's business has been considerably the best Montana florists have ever experienced. Both supply and demand have been excellent and prices have been fair. Easter was a very busy season but little more so than Memorial Day.

The State Nursery Company's business has been good in everything except bedding plants, for which the call was not up to the standard of last year. However, their Butte branch is prospering to an unprecedented degree, and the company is doing more spring building than usual. Two new rose houses, each 16x130, have just been completed and work is progressing upon the third one of the range. A new cold house 10x50 is nearly finished and a 75 foot addition to the palm house is soon to be undertaken.

Mrs. L. J. Wells is doing a flourishing business and feels that the prospects for continued trade warrant the renovating and remodeling of a number of her houses.

Charles Horn reports cut flower trade as very good but states that he is moving his bedding plants slower than is usual at this time of year. Mr. Horn sustained a considerable loss this spring through the caving in of his carnation house.

Mrs. Mattie Miller is showing extra fine geraniums and marguerites. A. J.

TRADE CONDITIONS IN THE NORTHEAST.—
WM. SHAND STARTS IN BUSINESS WITH A MODEL ESTABLISHMENT.

Business here is now in full swing, the weather being mild. Sales of bedding stock have so far been in excess of last year, the demand for annals, especially, being much ahead of the average. Prices, however, are lower than those of former seasons. Cut flower work has been fair, but not better than last spring as a whole, roses and carnations being the principal stock offered.

Wm. Shand, recently gardener to Mrs. W. H. Jones, has just started business on his own account. He has bought three and one-half acres of land with a cottage three miles from the city and is now erecting his greenhouses, one of which, three-quarter span 20x100 to be devoted to roses, is well under way. Another even span 17x70 will be ready by the time to plant stock in the fall, the establishment will be heated by hot water from one of Hitching's boilers. Roses and carnations will be his principal product.

The stock at the greenhouse in the Public Garden is in first-class condition and will no doubt make a grand display later on. At the present time Superintendent Knott is getting the beds filled as fast as possible.

Park Woodlands and Plantations.

Paper read by J. W. Pettigrew before the Park and Outdoor Art Association, Minneapolis, June

The subject of the treatment of natural woodlands in parks is of vast importance and commands the earnest thought of landscape gardeners. Such areas generally made up in great part, of thick growths of trees, which have injured each other more or less, by close contact, natural perhaps, in the sense of having sprung from the soil without the aid of man, but having, nevertheless, been subject to such unnatural conditions as to upset nature's balance.

The effort on the part of the landscape gardener or forester to improve the natural or growing condition of woodlands in public parks, is generally met with opposition from probably well-meaning, but badly informed critics, who ery that the work is an interference with nature, and who call in the aid of ready tongues, and readier pens to stop the "outrage."

The forester brings into service the practical experience and study of years in his efforts to assist nature in her work, yet all for naught. The clamor of a few culisted in a mistaken crusade dis-courages him, or influences those in authority to the extent of causing a stoppage of the work, and the result is seen too painfully all over the country, in their malformed and distorted condition, from over-crowding of park trees.

General rules can searcely be framed for the treatment of natural woodland-much depends on the use to be made of it. whether for woodland effects or woodland use. The first operation in a thick piece of woodland desired to be retained for natural effects, should be that of thinning; trees of individual merit or beauty should have interfering trees removed, to allow of their own development. places, areas of greater or less size may be entirely filled with trees, which, by reason of overcrowding, are so far injured that they can never recover their lost beauty; in such case, a free cutting should be made to allow light to penetrate to permit of the growth of saplings or newly planted material below, and further cuttings made, from year to year, as the young growth demands. Care should be taken that all saplings that may not be needed are cut out, only retaining those necessary to replace sickly or injured trees. Judicious thinning of all trees should be made where interfering with the growth of better ones, noting, at the same time, and retaining picturesque groupings or pleasing combinations of trees, preserving, in the general mass, a natural appearance, and encouraging as much individuality as possible, without impairment of natural woodland effects. This thinning will permit of the passage of light to the undergrowth which will respond quickly to its influence and materially enhance the beauty and naturalness of the woodland. A woodland so dense as to prohibit the growth of vegetation on the ground, is monotonous and dreary.

The improvement to the wood by thinning is noticeable in the following season's growth, the branches, relieved of the necessity of having to struggle upwards to an opening in search of light, spread out, and it becomes apparent very quickly, that the work of the axe will have to be resumed the following winter, in fact, whether in woodland or plantation, the work of the axe is never completed; it is vandalism to lay it away.

The best time to make selections for permanent trees or for cutting is in the summer. At this season, the condition of the tree can be more easily ascertained; its relative position and needs are more apparent.

Natural woodlands, when included in lands taken for park purposes must of necessity either dominate, or be subservient to a general scheme of adaptation, in the latter case modifications of their out lines may be necessary. Let no mistaken sentiment prevent the execution of this work. A park is not made for a day; the work of the present is subject to the judgment of the future; the mistakes of to-day bear disappointment for posterity. Should it, then, become necessary to cut away any part of the woodland, in the execution of a properly devised plan for the unification of the different parts of the ground into a harmonious whole, hesitate not to apply the steel.

Very often natural woodlands are subject to severe and constant use of the public, when it is impossible to retain underbrush and ground cover; in such cases the destruction of underbrush exposes the ground to the action of the The roots running near the surface which have been protected from heat and dryness under the natural forest covering are killed off and the trees soon die. This result can not be avoided unless some other covering can be substituted. of four or five inches of loam seeded in grass will serve the purpose, and be besides of great benefit to the trees.

The proper treatment of park wood-lands includes the carefulcutting from the trees of all dead or diseased limbs. A large proportion of trees come to an untimely end, because of the decay introduced into the boles through the stumps of dead limbs. Each cut should be make close and even with the bole, and well painted over, renewing the coat when-ever necessary until the wound is healed

While natural woodlands within park areas are arbitrarily placed, and generally control any scheme for harmonizing them with other features, plantations are entirely governed in their location and character by the landscape gardener.

The preparation of the ground for planting is of the first importance to the trees. On it depends largely whether the plantation shall be a mass of healthy, vigorous foliage, or a collection of stunted trees, dragging out a starved existence. For the production of a healthy growth of deciduous trees, an essential necessity is a sufficiency of good soil. A park commissioner once said, "Besides the diamond, since becoming a park commissioner, I have discovered another valuable—loam." Without it. noble proportions in the trees can not be expected. Therefore, to achieve good results, soil, and plenty of it, must be provided. This is expensive work; an old saving contains sound advice: "If you wish to spend twenty dollars to plant a tree, spend nineteen and a half of the amount in the preparation of the ground '

No work of park construction should take precedence over that of tree planting, other than the work necessary to make the ground intended for plantations available: bridges, buildings, roads and walks are of secondary importance in comparison.

Assuming that the soil is good, preparation for planting should be commenced in the preceding summer by plowing and deeply subsoiling, plowing the ground two or three times, reducing it to a good condition of mellowness. Spring planting is preferable in our northern latitudes. Fall planted trees, unless put in early enough to have made roots to sustain them, are apt to dry out by evaporation during the long freezing months. A good method is to make selections and purchases in the fall, which can be heeled in overwinter, and protected from drying winds; thus planting can be commenced much earlier, unhampered by the delays of spring shipments from nurseries. In planting, plant thickly—ten to twelve feet apart is not too close—the ground then is more quickly shaded; the trees also shelter each other. Thin out by transplanting or even by cutting when the branches interfere. Under no consideration, permit injury to be done by overcrowding. This method has many advantages; it provides shade for the ground and for the trunks of the trees; the and for the trunks of the trees, the trees, thickly placed, protect each other from scorching winds it permits of easy and cheap cultivation of the ground, and is a convenient mursery from which finer trees can be gotten each season than can be had in commercial nurseries. The plan also gives a greater variety from which to select the permanent trees. It gives, too, the effect of mass more quickly expected development. A second arrangement may be made, nearly alternating, of some other kind of tree, and even a third combination may be made, again alternating. The advantage of this plan is that any one of the three arrangements may be adopted as may be deemed best, at thinning time, for the permanent trees.

The effect of large masses of trees of one species is much more dignified and impressive than a conglomeration of trees of different kinds and habits of growth. The mass or groups of varying size may be allowed to merge into each other in irregular, ragged outlines. It is not considered desirable to plant shrubs throughout new plantations, as they interfere with the free use of the cultivator, which is a valuable adjunct to the diligent planter desiring vigorous, rapid growth.

Cultivation should be maintained for a period of three years or so, when the shrubbery or ground cover may be introduced. Shrubbery should, however, be planted on the borders of the plantation, when made of such wood bordering plants as shadbush, redbud, viburnums and cornels, etc.

For planting in public parks our native trees and shrubs can not be surpassed for appropriateness and beauty, and for this purpose their use alone is advocate; nothing can be more inharmonious than the introduction into park woodlands and plantations of exotic trees and shrubs or of variegated sports and monstrosities; rather let our parks be typical of our native woods and glades, helped along nature's lines by the artistic hand.

Fuchsia Photograph Competition.

We are pleased to be able to present herewith one of the pictures in our "Fuchsia Photograph Competition," as per announcement on pages 588 and 600 of our issue of January 8. The variety of off issue of failings. The variety illustrated is named "Charming" and the plant was grown by Mr. Peter Cronetto, of Millbrook, N. V., from a cutting inserted in January, and subsequently treated as recommended in the number of the American Florist already quoted. The plant is in a 5-inch pot, as indicated by the rule in front.

The Foxglove.

This hardy biennial or perennial, Digitalis purpurea, is one of the showiest plants of its class and very easy of cultiplants of its class and very easy of cultivation. At Schenley Park someten thousand of these plants are under William Falconer's care and have for several years been a great attraction when in flower. That the public takes an interest in flowers as seen in displays of this kind is evidenced in the demand that has sold thousands of digitalis in the city of Pittsburg and vicinity alone since they were brought to notice in this way.

Schenley Park is a great public educator, and such grounds and buildings, with such superintendents as Mr. Falconer and the late Mr. Bennett, should be established in every large city in the land. It can be done if intelligent efforts are put forth. Let the florists' clubs start the movement; get influential citizens and newspapers interested, and when the idea is well before the people have the proper legislation enacted, with the necessary appropriations, and another floral school would soon he founded that should be a great source of pleasure to the community which surrounds it. Boston's public gardens have done wonders in educating the people, and the many beautiful private estates of large and small dimensions in that city and its environs bear testimony to their worth and the appreciation in which they are held by the people.

Herbaceous Plant Notes.

In the latter part of June the gorgeous Iris Kæmpferi begins to open its first blossoms; the weather is not always very favorable for the development of perfect flowers of the largest size and whenever possible in dry spells the plants should be treated to liberal waterings so as to keep the ground constantly moist until all the flowers are past. In commercial places where only plants are wanted, little or no attention is paid to the production of good-sized flowers, but when we grow them for ornament, or for cut flower purposes, watering should not be neglected, as moisture at the roots will not only increase the size of the petals, but will also improve the lasting quality of the flowers. We had occasion to observe the difference in the size and durability of flowers in two patches of this iris on our place last year. One lot was planted in light, dry soil; the other in a moist situa-One lot was planted in Both were exposed to the full sun and the varieties were the same in each patch. On clear, hot days the flowers in the first bed would not last more than four or five hours, while those in the moist patch were as tresh as could be desired and often remained in good condition for three days.

Inula hirta is a pretty, very free blooming, yellow, daisy-like flower; blooms in the second half of June and during July; grows fifteen to eighteen inches high and is decidedly useful as a cut flower. I. glandulosa is a much larger flower, four to five inches or more across and of a deeper golden color. The ray florets are narrow and long, giving them a fringy appearance. The foliage and stem is covered with whitish down and its height is about two feet. This valuable plant is not often seen in collections, but perhaps only because it is little known and does not increase very rapidly. It blooms with us regularly from June to August and is as hardy as an oak tree and succeeds in any soil or position.

The gaillardias have been out since the middle of June. Among the improved varieties we have not only flowers of immense size and semi-double, but also great variations in color; we have pure yellow, yellow with a dark disk, broad rays and quilled rays, red and yellow combined in various ways or shades and some flowers are deep crimson with only a barely visible yellow edge. Flowering freely until frost, their value as ornamental plants for beds, borders or shrubberies is apparent and the flowers are also largely used for cutting. For this latter purpose only the best varieties should be procured, as ordinary seedlings will give too large a percentage of small, inferior blooms which do not sell readily.

Verbena venosa, that persistent bloomer, has been used quite extensively persistent as a bedding plant in the last few years. Several complaints have reached us that this plant was not hardy, but that must be a mistake for we have always been able to keep it uninjured in the open ground without protection of any description. It is true, however, that the old plants seem to be entirely dead in spring and no life is visible above ground when most other plants are well advanced, but if we leave them undisturbed a little longer, we will soon notice strong growths coming up thickly all over the patch. This vigorous growth springs from the long, wiry underground runners which were formed the season before; at nearly every joint a new plant will be produced and it is necessary to thin considerably, else the plot would be over-erowded in a short time. If these runners are dug up in early spring before they start into growth, we may cut them into small pieces and in this way raise hundreds of strong young plants, which, when potted off singly, are ready to bloom by the middle of May, while those left to themselves outdoors will seldom begin to flower freely before the end of June. This method of propagation is cheaper and faster than raising young stock from seed. Campanulas are out in great variety;

Campanulas are out in great variety; for constant blooming few are better than the Carpathica section in their various shades and the lovely C. rotundifolia; neither of them are tall or rank growers; the stems are sent up only twelve to fifteen inches high and come out in succession, thus furnishing a continuous supply of flowers until fall. A mass of luxuriant pretty foliage covers the ground effectually at all times and the old stalks fall over as they decay and are hidden from view, though it is best to remove them as soon as their flowers have faded. C. persicafolia Backhouseana is a great improvement on the type; the bells are larger and of more substance and the growth is more robust. C. persicafolia alba coronata is a very pretty semi-double, white form, which can be recommended for cut flower purposes. The same may be said of C. Trachelium fl. pl., which grows a little taller and has larger and very double bells.

Cephalaria Tartariea, with its longstemmed, straw-colored, scabiosa-like flower-heads, is now in full bloom; it stands the drought remarkably well, though in moist ground the size of the flowers is improved, yet they are of good size here, four inches and more in diameter; five to six feet tall and with luxuriant ornamental foliage. It is admirably adapted to planting in the lawn, where a ciump forms a symmetrical specimen and we need not be afraid of strong winds damaging either the foliage or the tall flower stems.

Salvia sclarea, with its immense panicles of pale, lilac-blue flowers, is a rather large plant, three to four feet high. It wants plenty of space, for the leaves are large and broad; the flowers will continue in fine shape until well into August and it is a grand plant for all purposes. excepting the small, narrow border. Any well enriched soil will suit this plant and where an occasional watering can be administered the panicles will increase wonderfully in size.

Epilobium angustifolium, to do its best, wants moisture, although we have fair success in our dry borders where its average height is reduced to about three feet, while in moist and partly shaded posi-tions we often see them six feet high. The long, tapering, branchy spikes are produced on every growth; the individual rosy flowers are quite large and of a lovely crimson color. The dwarfer white variety, E. angustifolium album, flowers with equal freedom, and both are very desirable for borders, shrubberies or for naturalizing in the wild garden. E. hirsutum blooms in large corymbose clusters some weeks later than the others; bright pink and is of equal, if not of superior value for the same purposes. Height generally from three to four feet.

Chrysanthemum Notes.

Plants set out two weeks ago should now be growing rapidly, and care must be taken that they are never allowed to dry out too much. Neither should they be given too much water for if kept too wet they will make a soft growth, which quickly wilts and burns on exposure to the sun. Remove all the weeds from the soil as soon as they are large enough to handle, and keep the surface of the soil as even and firm as possible.

Some varieties will throw out lateral shoots at every leaf when they begin to make rapid growth and these must be rubbed out as soon as possible. A number of other sorts, from early struck cuttings, will set a bud at this time, which also should be removed, allowing one of the shoots which spring from its side to remain. In order to keep down the red spider and black aphis, as well as to insure luxuriance of growth, a free use of the syringe is absolutely necessary in bright weather.

Do not neglect to stake and tie the plants as they require it; timely attention to this will save many valuable shoots. We have found it impossible to grow fine chrysanthenums under heavily shaded glass. Our houses run north and south and yet we do not shade at all, maintaining the proper temperature so far as practicable by frequent syringing and strict attention to the ventilation. If adequate ventilation cannot be given with the ven-Clators at hand, it would be well to remove a pane of glass here and there along the sides.

All plants intended as specimens for exhibition should be given their final potting now, taking care to pot firmly with ample dramage. Do not water heavily until the plants have had a chance to take held of the new seal, which takes a week or thereabouts, and never pot a plant when it is div. better water it thou oughly first, and allow it to dram off by standing a while. Fine coal ashes banked up around the pots where the sun strikes them will keep the roots cool and encourage growth. The shoots should be pinched before they get too long, otherwise it will be difficult to produce shapely C. W. Johnson. plants.

Palm Leaf Blight.

For several years my attention has been called to a leaf blight upon palms. Recently in passing through a large palm house it was observed that many of the leaves of some sorts of palms, and particularly the fan-leaved species, were badly blighted. Fig. 1 shows a much reduced view of a badly diseased leaf of Livistona rotundifolia made from a photograph. This leaf was almost wholly blighted and the boundary between the dead portion and the part still alive, although indistinct in the engraving, may be seen near the base of the leaf. Fully three-fourths of the leaf was brown and worthless, and more than that was the place where countless numbers of the germs of the fungus were being propa-

the leaf when it is already brown or ashcolored he will find many small speeks. These specks are not easily shown in an engraving of a whole leaf, but in the enlarged piece shown in Fig. 2 they are more distinctly seen. These specks do not come until the fungus, a member of the genus colletotrichum, has practically destroyed the leaf at that spot. They are specks produced by the fungus breaking through the skin of the leaf and in the rupture, usually oval in outline, developing a number of stifl black hairs like minute eve lashes, and between them are produced the multitude of spores free upon the surface of the rift.

The writer dwells upon this spore formation for palm growers are sometimes inclined to think that, if there is any fungus, it plays no primary part. It may be true that the colletotrichum thrives usually while the palms are small or when the house is under conditions most favorable for it; but it nevertheless needs to be remembered that the blight is positively contagious and may become a serious pest if left unchecked. Plants that are badly diseased should be excluded from a house of healthy palms, and all blighted leaves like the one shown in Fig. 1 should be picked off and burned. It is not profitable in any way to let them remain on and spread the trouble to other leaves of the same plant or to furnish spores to be carried to other plants by the process of watering. beauty of a palm is in its strictly healthy foliage, and therefore it should be cared for accordingly. BYRON D. HALSTED.

Carnations.

There should be a closer relationship between the retailer and the grower in this branch of floriculture.

When the grower looks back over the season just past it presents a few bad features and they should be object lessons to us. Last season the crop of carnations was at no time as large as it has been in some years and yet the prices did not rule high enough on first-class stock to leave the grower a fair margin of profit.

As the percentage of profit derived from 1000 carnation plants decreases the grower who depends on this branch for his livelihood has but one redress and that is to increase the extent of his plantations, which, in turn, helps to pull the market still farther down.

It would, of cousse, he impossible on account of the very perishable nature of our stock to expect the same relationship between the retailer and the producer as is maintained in manufacturing circles, but there should be some sort of protective method adopted, that would tend to lessen the gluts that frequently reach the selling centers.

When a lover of carnations goes into a retail store and sees his favorite flower handled and sold by the methods too frequently employed, his whole nature is hound to revolt. Not always, but quite frequently, carnations are thrown down like hunches of beets or onions, the customer looks them over and decides on taking something else. If they are taken and there are any seconds in the bunch they will be found in the package when the customer gets home and the transaction, as a whole, instead of stimulating regard for the flower, has just the opposite effect. This is not a second or third class store scene, either, but one that can be witnessed in many first-class establishments at almost any time.

The carnation is without a rival as a ent flower if it is properly handled. To get the beauty of a dozen flowers they must have a little help, either by means of their own foliage or that of some other green strong enough to assist in holding up the weak stems and show the beauty of the blooms. This matter of greens need not be an additional expense of more than from one to three cents per dozen and it will certainly increase the sale of carnations enough to more than make up that amount. There is no question but that if the retailer pushes the carnation by the best means and sends it from his store fresh and in proper shape the sale of the flowers would be doubled in ten years. Possibly under present methods the production will be trebled in that time, but that will not decrease the profit of the retailer if he will aid in increasing consumption. Over production could be avoided if the retailers, who are in constant touch with the market, would advise the grower what to drop from his list and what to grow, and exchange ideas frequently.

The florists' clubs should be a good medium for this interchange of ideas and should be used more as a means for that purpose than any other. The national society should he used as a means of feeling the market of the whole country once a year. Once a month a short time in the club devoted to the selling interests of our products and an evening of discussion on the same subject in the national society would be of material interest to grower and retailer alike. We have papers on this flower and that; on growing in all its branches and nothing on the disposition of our stock, which is quite as important as the production.

Let us get closer together; we will all be the better for it. Omaha is a good place to meet each other in August; Philadelphia will be a good place next February ary and the club meeting is a good place once a month. If you are not a member, join; make yourself heard, and let us, united, try to make business a little hetter for '99 than it has heen for '98 and keep the ball rolling for the opening of the new century.

"A HOT TIME IN THE OLD TOWN" DEMORAL-IZES THE MARKETS, -STUMPPS SAIL FOR EUROPE.-LANG-HEINTZ NUPTIALS.-JOT-TINGS OF CITY LIFE.

Midsummer conditions already prevail in Greater Gotham and the volume of business goes up or down inversely as the mercury ascends or descends the tube of the thermometer. The earliest signs of hot weather brought depreciation in quality, quantity and value of stock, and the cut flowers which are now coming into this market are very poor, while receipts are each day growing smaller and smaller. There is no fixed price for anything and, while quotations are made upon the usual hot weather scale, in reality everything sells for what it will bring, and no more. To use a trite say-was performed in the presence of a large

For some time Miss Heintz was employed in Mr. Lang's store at the corner of Thirtyeighth street and Sixth avenue. They have a wide acquaintance in the trade and have received a perfect shower of congratulations.

The basket in the illustration which appears herewith stands four feet in height and is made of Beauties, Maids and Brides together with a few sprays of mignonette and a bunch of the giant white daisy. The handle is trimmed with orchids, cypripediums and dendrobiums, together with lily of the valley. The larger roses were placed in a vase of water set in the moss in the body of the basket and afterwards filled with loose sphagnum and wedged at the top with small pieces of sponge, so as to prevent slopping of the water.

The approaching convention is to be the subject for discussion at the July meeting of the Florists' club next Tuesday evening. There is, no doubt, much good to come from the Omaha gathering and it behooves all progressive members of the eraft, those who desire to keep strictly up to date, to join the procession that is shortly to wend its way half across the continent. There is quite a difference of opinion as to whether grafted Kaiserius are any better than those on their own roots. Geo. Anderson claims to have a lot of young virgin stock that are equal to, if not better than any grafted plants. Chas. F. Business continues fairly active but is not and has not been equal in volume for June as compared with former seasons. Prices are also decidedly lower all along the line than ever before at this date. Outdoor roses have been unprecedentedly poor, and their inferior quality has prevented their making much impression on the cut flower market, which is badly lacking in good roses of any kind. Of carnations there is a superfluity in all colors,—quality affected by hot weather, but still presentable. Weddings are still using a good many flowers but the end of the rush is now in sight. Lily of the valley has not moved so readily as it should, the quantity called for being limited and the prevailing prices low. IUNE LEAVES THE CUT FLOWER MARKET FLAT.—A SYMPOSIUM OF PLANT GROW-ERS' EXPERIENCES — DEATH OF MRS. REDFIELD,-JOTTINGS OF PERSONAL MAT-TERS.

A week ago the cut flower market was completely cleaned out of stock, and any kind of a flower would sell. Everyone was satisfied with the school commencement trade; that it was the best ever known in Chicago is the nearly unanimous verdict of both wholesalers and retailers. At present trade is hovering around the zero mark, there being very little demand for anything in the cut flower line, and if there was a call for flowers there is little stock in the market to supply the demand. About the only flowers the retailer has to offer that he is not ashamed of are sweet peas and longiflorum lilies. These are plentiful and of fine quality. There are a few really good Meteor and Kaiserin roses on the market, and also a few fair American Beauties, but most of the Beauties that come in are off color or wide open on account of the heat. A few growers are sending fair Brides and Bridesmaids, but generally the stock of these roses is very poor. Carnations are getting smaller in quantity and size, and poorer in quality. Fakirs have sold them at 5 cents a dozen this week.

John Lang has for a number of years made a specialty of growing bedding He says plants for the wholesale trade. that the demand for this class of stock has been very good this season, as he had a larger supply than usual and sold out of everything except verbenus. grew about 20,0 0 geraniums, of which Bruant and S. A. Nutt were the leading varieties. For single searlet he grows principally Queen of the West and H. K. Klifton, with Mrs. Hill and Jos. Vick, salmon pink, Emile de Girardin and Pink Perfection for pink. He grows about 1,000 fuchsias, more than one-half of them Black Prince. Of his 20,000 pansics all were sold.

August Jurgens is a large grower of bedding plants, and retails most of his crop. His spring plant trade amounted to about the same as last year; he sold more stock, but not at quite so good prices. Mr. Jurgens finds very little demand for any geranium except scarlet, and with him S. A. Nutt and Bruant are most in demand, but he thinks J. J. Harrison a better variety, and will grow it in place of Bruant next season.

August Dressell is another extensive grower of bedding plants who reports trade in this line better than last season. E. Wienhoeber has a very large retail plant trade, most of his stock going to to regular customers of several years standing. Mr. Wienhoeber grows only a few varieties of geraniums, all single and nearly all scarlets. The varieties he grows are principally Queen of the West, H. K. Klifton, Excellent and R. Mason. The latter gives the most general satisfaction. Mr. Wienhoeber states that because of cold weather bedding out did not com-mence this season until about ten days later than usual, but that while the season lasted, which was about a week less than is common, plants sold with a rush and that the total spring business was very large.

E. Hobbs reports the bedding plant trade as satisfactory, fully as good as last season. With Samuel Muir's estate spring plant trade was not so good this season as formerly. Geraniums sold quite as well but alternanthera, verbenas and all seedlings sold very poorly. J. T. Kidwell & Bro. found plant trade not up to last year although they sold out all the geraniums they had grown and had to buy a few hundreds. Andrew McAdam sold about as much stock but prices were not quite up to last year. He sold out of everything except geraniums, of which he had a larger stock than usual.

Mrs. Cora Redfield, widow of the late James Redfield, died Sunday June 26. Mrs. Redfield was the daughter of the late John A. #### Fortunate Unfortunates.

We have received photographs which show all that was left of the estab-lishment of the Humfeld Floral Com-pany, Kansas City, Mo., after the hail storm of May 14. In a quarter of an hour that afternoon they lost 17,509 square fect of glass out of a total area of 21,073 square feet, but they were insured and received the check of the Florists' Hail Association in ample time to meet the bill for the restoration of their transparent roofing. This was the heaviest hail storm on record, and, as the pictures show, it made virtually a clean sweep of all glass in its path. In some of the large rose houses of the Humfeld Company but eleven lights remained unbroken in the southern slope. Their palm house was covered by lath, many of which were broken with the glass. tunately their palms escaped greatinjury, although the loss in other houses was severc.

The Sale of Paris Green and Other Insecticides in Kentucky.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Can you tell me whether I have a right to sell Paris green and insecticides at retail to my trade. I notice that Paris green is offered by seedsmen all over the United States, and they pay no license as druggists. Our druggist says that I must be a registered druggist before I can retail Paris green, and threatens to indict me if I continue to sell it.

Your query as to the right of a florist to sell Paris green and insecticides at retail in Kentucky, is received. I am not conversant with the Kentucky statutes and decisions, if any, but I understand that under section 2627 of Barber & Carroll's Statutes for 1894 (Kentucky) it is made a misdemeanor for any person not a registered pharmacist, to sell certain articles denominated as "poisons" and among those articles enumerated by the statute, appears Paris green. Insecticides are not therein mentioned specifically as poisons, but patent medicines or preparations of which insecticides may be one, are to be submitted to the State Board for examination for them to determine whether or not they are poisons in the meaning of the law, and if so, then they are to fall within the prohibition governing the sale of poisons. Your correspondent will have to be guided by the Kentucky law on that question. There is little doubt but that the state would have the right to regulate in a proper and uniform manner the sale of articles which endangered the public health. H. W. MAGEE.

Boilers.

ED. AM. FLORIST:--We understand that the government uses a common tubular boiler for all heating purposes, and that they have found by experiments this is the best and most economical. The government, however, uses only hard coal. This boiler has a return flue and then again returns the heat over the top of the boiler. Could we use such a boiler with soft coal, or would the soot accumulate badly by so much returning? J. &. S.

The government uses a great variety of boilers, and so far as 1 am aware the kind described is no more used than several others. If a tubular boiler is desired I would use the ordinary form set so that the smoke will return through the tubes. Soft coal can be used with this boiler if a fair draft is provided. If an additional return flue is provided it will be necessary to have a much higher chimney, and with soft coal the results will be far less satisfactory than with the common tubular form. L. R. TAFT.

Scale on Trumpet Vine.

En. Am. Florist:-I enclose sample of scale, taken from a trumpet vine. Can you inform me through the columns of your publication what species it is?

ONTARIO.

The scale is some species of lecanium; it would be difficult to determine just what one. As the young lice are just hatching, in order to get rid of them it would be well to wait a week or so, until they are all out, and then spray with a solution of whale-oil soap, one pound of soap to five gallons of water. The solution must hit the insects to kill them. Spray thoroughly and repeat the application in a week or ten days. M. V. SLINGERLAND.

Piping.

Ed. Am. Florist: - Please tell me through the columns of your paper how much 4-inch hot water pipe will be needed to heat a greenhouse 16x90 feet and 12 feet high at the ridge, temperature in winter from 10° above to 10° below zero. The system will have to be arranged so that the boiler pit need only be about three feet deep.

C. J. B.

If the walls are not more than five feet high and contain no glass, a temperature of 60 can be secured if seven lines of pipe in two coils are used, while but five will be required for 50°. Fairly good results can be secured if a 3-inch main is run to an elevated expansion tank from which 212 inch supply pipes are carried to each of the coils. The 4-inch pipe should be so arranged that one pipe on each side of other beneath as returns. The supply pipes from the expansion tanks should connect with the 4-inch flow pipes. A better way would be to run two 21-ginch overhead flows to the farther end of the house and there connect each of them with either two or three 4-inch returns, the former for 50° and the latter for 60° Unless the 4-inch pipe is on hand, a still better way will be to use 2-inch block pipe for the returns, four upon each side of the house being required for 60 and three for 50. #### Potting Chrysanthemums.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Kindly let me know through your columns if pot-bound chrysanthemums, when the buds make an appearance, should be re-potted or given additional food in some other way? P. N. H.

If the plants are intended for specimens and have been allowed to get so hard and pot-bound as to have set their buds from that cause. I believe it is all up with them so far as good plants are concerned. I do not see how they could form buds if pinched back properly, as the shoots should not be allowed to get long enough to form a bud, but topped back after two or three leaves are made. There are some varieties which are not adapted for pot plants, as they run early into bud and it is next to impossible to make decent plants out of them. This is the wrong time of the year for chrysanthemums to be pot bound; they should now be making all the growth possible, for as soon as they are pot-bound they will become hard and stunted, and then it will be impossible to make good plants of them. I do not see that anything would be gained now by feeding the plants, for that would only hasten flowering if they are allowed to remain in the same pots; they might be given a larger pot, rubbing out the flower buds if the plants give any indication of breaking into new growth. C. W. Johnson.

Grubs in Soil.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-When the soil in which plants are bedded becomes infested with grub worms, what can be done to stop them destroying the roots?

N. P. Co.

The "N. P. Co." are not sufficiently speeific in their description of the grub worms with which they are troubled. It is very likely to be. I think, the larvie of the May beetles or June bugs, which are also frequently called cockchafers. Most of us have had our troubles with this pest, but so far as 1 know positively the loss of a plant is the only indication where the grub worm may be found, and the only cure when caught is a well directed pressure of the foot. Whoever has had a bad loss through the destructive larvae referred to is sure to have a nervous spell if some of them are found when the soil is being handled prepara-tory to its use. If this case is diagnosed correctly, the bark of the plant is eaten off just below the surface of the soil and above the root stock, and as soon as a plant exhibits signs of distress, we must immediately, though carefully, proceed to locate the enemy, and when found remove it with dispatch, for as soon as it has caused the death of one plantit will withour any unnecessary delay move on toward another. These pests are generally to be found the most plentifully in old sad, and in some years they are apparent! much more numerous than in others. When they are found in the soil before planting is commenced it is the sabst way to have some plants in reserve to he up possible gaps. Sometimes in beds we may by close observation notice what appear to be anniature molerums, cuefully follow these up, and the grubs that possibly be located. Anything applied to the soil that would be likely to 11% the grubs would most likely kill or at le som are the peants, excepting proba-bly has alphase of carbon. By the milione of suppose of carron. Try the find some apparation of its death dealing force to anderground parasites, I have had some even, but it has to be used with great order on account of its 1. 1..

Hard Nuts to Crack.

Here and trove sponsile's journe, one or amous, to a note where least expected a true place opher, a man scho, uncorsciously pethops, presents force for thought to his fellows in such a simple, sincere form that they can not escape the conviction that here, surely, is something demanding earnest consideration. a man is he who penned the letter to a triend from which we make this extract:

"I am making out my Dutch bulb list but do not think I shall need 100 as it looks as if people want cheaper plants. Spring trade was good; sold more than in tormer years but didn't make any more money as I had to sell cheaper. florists sell 4-inch geraniums for 60 cents a dozen, and send a man to plant them, one has to begin to hustle. It is almost useless to buy new varieties as some florists go to the different parties and ask for the plants in the fall, agreeing to replace the beds free of charge in the spring. Of course they go only where there are real good things and don't put back the same class of stock. Also they will sell to peddlers at the regular price less 25%. This is a fact. You can guess who is making the money; the peddler, of course. I oftentimes wonder why the wholesale houses set up another green-horn in business only to spoil the trade for a good florist. The consequence is that the florist has to buy in lesser quantities; it is that way with me; I can not risk another 100 azaleas when by the time they bloom cinerarias in 5 and 6-inch pots are offered for 10 and 15 cents. I have to drop off on French Romans when others will sell for 20 cents a dozen. Wonder if we could license the florist business, something as the plumbers do? My next door neighbor has discontinued his store; he says it didn't pay. * * * * You may think I am pav. disgusted, but I'm not, by a long way. I sold all I could raise this spring and a good deal more, but am in a position to build another house. What do 1 want? I only wish I could collect a little more, but, don't you know, people think I am rich because I have a fine store in the

In these terse confidences of friend to friend there is that which should be given thought-hard, deep, earnest thought. To what level is trade sinking when florists will, to secure good stock, solicit the privilege of taking up old plants, offering to put out new ones free the following season? To what are we approaching in this race for cheapness? Are we on the down grade? Has this florist blown the call for brakes? Where is the remedy? Is it in better stock, more stock or less stock? Are we satisfied, as is our philosophical correspondent? Is all well, people esteeming us rich because we have fine stores? Surely these are matters of moment that demand consideration and answers which will do in practice that which we make them do in theory.

OFD SOE SCORCITES THINGS IN THE MIS-SOURT METROPOLIS, -- PLANS FOR THE CONVENTION. —BOWLERS GET PRIZES.

Longings for the blasts of Old Boreas have come to Missourians for the past few days, for the hot wave hit us hard, and the volume of business and price and quality of stock shrunk as would a snow ball in midsummer. There was some demand for roses, but few good blooms were in the market. There was some sale for good white countions, prices from 81 per hundred down, but the supply was not large. Sweet peas may be purchased anywhere at from 15 cents 20 cents per thousand, and other outdoor stock is plentiful.

The I forists' Club will meet July 11 at tip in for a basiness session. Arrangements will be made to attend the S. A. F. convention at Omaha. We anticipate a large attendance from here.

The picnic committee has at last selected Belleville as the scene of the annual pienic, but has not yet decided upon a date.

The bowlers are practicing twice a week, preparatory to going to Omaha, and are making some excellent scores. Last Monday night's three games ended a series of twelve championship contests, in which J. J. Beneke won the most prized trophy with a grand average of 176. C. A. Kuehn was second with an average of 172. Emil Schray won the high score medal and left the mark at 244; John Young was second to him with 234, both very handsome records.

Roses on the Wooded Island, Jackson Park, Chicago.

Visitors to the World's Fair will remember the Wooded Island in Jackson Park, now much more deserving of the title than it was then. The trees, especially the willows, have made wonderful growth, bringing out in faller relief the

One of its purposes of the designers. most attractive features at that time was the rose garden, and under the fostering care of Mr. Fred Kanst this has been so well maintained and developed that the display this season far excels anything of the kind ever seen in or around Chicago. Thousands throng the island daily, and everyone seems to know that the roses are of a very superior quality this year. Mr. Kanst modestly assures us that the gratifying results are largely due to an exceptionally favorable season. While the weather may have had something to do with it, we know that the outcome depended more strictly upon skillful management, And yet, there is no secret about the methods practiced here, and they are essentially the same as are adopted by rose growers in all tem-perate countries. The beds are covered in autumn to a depth of two or three inches with leaves. This covering is removed in spring, and when the plants have been pruned—an operation per-formed when the wood buds are beginning to swell—a dressing of cow manure is applied and dug into the soil, taking care to keep as much as possible of it from direct contact with the roots. When the warm weather comes, and before the flower buds expand, the beds are given a coat of lawn mowings, and this in a general way completes the work. selected the following as the hest varieties for general cultivation: Caroline d'Arden, rose; Pæonia, red; Baroness Rothschild, rose, Facolial, Fed, Bartoliess Rothschild, rose pink; Mrs. John Laing, pink; Comtesse de Sereny, silvery pink; Paul Neyron, deep rose; Camille de Rohan, deep crimson; Marshall P. Wilder, rose and carmine; Margaret Dickson, white; General Jacqueminot, bright crimson; Mabel Morrison, white; Jean Liabaud, crimson maroon; Anna de Diesbach, carmine. In another section of the park a very fine effect was produced with Fairy Queen against an extensive bank of shrubbery. J. T. A.

Shading Greenhouses Temporarily.

As I am now busy painting the rose houses, removing the soil and refilling the benches, I have thought it opportune to give your readers the benefit of my experience in making a rose house a comfortable place to work in when the sun is shining brightly on a hot summer day.

My first trial in this line was in 1889. I had just finished two new houses and it was bright, hot weather. We were anxious to get them filled and planted, but it was impossible to work in such a temperature. I suggested wetting the glass and dusting some flour on it. A pan of A pan of flour was soon procured and dusted over the house. We filled and planted the house in comfort, wondering, meanwhile why no one had tried the plan before. But we never used it again. It had to be taken off, for the roses would not grow without sunlight, and the time spent on the roof of those houses with soda, hot water, cloths, brushes and putty knives, rubbing and scraping, more than counterbalanced the pleasure and comfort we had experienced working in the shade.

The flour baked into bread and we did not run short of that article of diet very quickly, for it could be found on the glass until the following summer. Since then we have been in the habit of mudding our houses, that is, mixing up a bucket of mud and putting it on with a white-wash brush. This answered the purpose fairly well. A shower, however, is liable to wash it off before the work is finished, and one is then compelled to repeat the operation. But when the work indoors is completed, the weather clerk sometimes forgets that his assistance is needed and it becomes necessary to ascend to the roof and wash it off. Then, too, it leaves the nice white paint all stained with mud, which will not come off until it is washed by a number of heavy rains.

This season I have been using shading cloth, unbleached muslin dipped in some preparation to prevent its mildewing. The secdsmen all keep it for sale. This we sew together so as to make one piece cover the front of the house and another to cover the back. It is quickly put up and as quickly taken down. Rains will not hurt it, and with careit ought to last several years. But if it only serves one year it will be a good investment, for the men with its aid will do the work in so much less time as will pay for the material, not to speak of the comfort in doing With this material in place, and the front and top ventilators wide open, the workmen can attend to their duties in the houses with no greater exertion than would be required outdoors in the shade of a tree.

I have sixteen houses to fill and sufficient material to cover two of them. When two are completed, the shading is removed to two others, and it is my intention to proceed in this way to the end. My planting, with less help, is in a more advanced state that it has ever been before at the same date, and the credit must certainly be given to this idea in Joseph Heacock. shading.

CONDITIONS SHOW A SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT. -CLUB PLANS A PICNIC.-STORES KEEP UP APPEARANCES .- FUNERAL ARRANGE-MENTS.

The prolonged dry weather has had the effect of considerably shortening the supply of outdoor flowers, and a slight improvement in the market is the consequence. Whether the improvement will continue remains to be seen, as a heavy thunderstorm has just relieved the drought, but unless followed by others pretty frequently the relief will be only temporary.

The Florists' Club was to have considered the time and place of the annual excursion at the last meeting, but it was judged best to put it off till next meeting,

Iuly 11. The stores keep up a brave show of colored cut flowers in the windows, though it must be done almost altogether for appearance's sake, as the only really reliable demand just now is for funeral work. Speaking of funeral work recalls a large casket cross seen last week, made entirely of white sweet peas and adiantum, which would have been very pretty had the sweet peas been either all dead white or uniformly pearl, sulphur or skimmed-milk blue; but as it was, the tinted whites looked bad beside the pure whites, and cach tint seemed to have a bad effect on its neighbor, thus spoiling what was otherwise a chaste and tasteful arrangement. Spring trade has been good with all the nurservmen here and C. G. Anderson & Co., who started in business a year ago, are so well pleased with their success in floriculture that they are building two new houses, one for roses and one for carnations. The John C. Moninger Company of Chicago, supplied the material and the structures are to be thoroughly modern in every respect. Anderson &

Co. have a virtual monopoly of the trade in this and several adjacent towns and, with their new houses, will have a very fine establishment for a city of this size.

Auburn, N. Y.

It is estimated that hail did $30,000 damage here on June 12. As is usual in such cases the florists were the heaviest losers, A. Patrick alone losing nearly $6,000 in broken glass and ruined stock. Others who suffered severely were Carl Armbruster, J. Elletson, Jacob Wide, James Morgan and Hick & Son, who have, in the aggregate, about 40,000 feet of glass. Besides these commercial losses several fine private greenhouses, notably those of the Misses Willard and Mrs. Osborn, were greatly damaged.

ROCK ISLAND, ILLS.—John J. Mulhern, who had established a reputation as a gardener, died June 20. He was a native of Ireland and was 60 years of age.

SUMMER CAUSES DECLINE IN TRADE.-THE EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT, -FLOWERS IN THE PARKS. - PERSONAL JOTTINGS. PICNIC PROSPECTS AND AUTUMN EXHIBI-TION PREMIUM LIST.

The past week has shown a slight decline in trade and was a forewarning of what we will have from the first of July. Flowers still continue in fair supply. Carnations are keeping very well and candidum and auratum lilies are fine and selling fast. The park flower beds present a very nice appearance now and when Niagara square is changed as the plans now are, will be a grand place. Mr. Olmsted, the landscape artist, was here last week to confer with the park commissioners regarding some changes in the park, Prof. Cowell, of South Park, reports progress in his new greenhouses.

W. F. Kasting took a business trip of a few days to Cleveland, Erie and West-field and brought back John Shoenfelt, son of Fred Shoenfelt, of Westfield, who is enjoying a vacation from the Annapolis Naval Academy. Rebstock is showing a fine lot of Dracena terminalis in his window and is attracting a great deal of

Now that the hot summer months are here I hope that the florists will close at 6 p. m. during July and August and let us all have the benefit of the pleasant evenings, as the trade done after 5 p. m. does not pay one for the light, and everything is closed except saloons and eigar stores. There is some talk now of our annual outing, and we are waiting for President Scott to call a meeting and set a day for the picnic, which has grown to be a very enjoyable affair.

The Buffalo Florists' Club has issued its premium list for the annual autumn exhibition to be held November 9, 10 and 11. There are to be three classes, thirty-seven sections, for chrysanthemums and two classes, twenty-four sections, for cut roses and other blooms. Liberal cash prizes will be awarded in many sections; in the others cups, plates and other articles of value will be given. Lists and entry blanks may be obtained by addressing Wm. Legg, secretary, 1440 Delaware avenue.

Rothester, N. Y.

A gradual falling off in the demand for cut flowers is now everywhere noticeable. The dull season is rapidly approaching, and the retailers will not be overworked for several months to come. All flowers are quite plentiful and very cheap. The retail prices in some establishments are ridiculously low, and it is difficult for the other dealers to obtain a fair price for even the best of stock. Generous and frequent orders for funeral work have kept the store men going for the last two weeks commencements also have material), assisted in the disposal of the liberal supply of flowers, but the present weel opened very dull, and everybody can take it casy.

Sotable a roag the cut flowers in the market at present are the largeclusters of Crimson Fambler roses. They are really magnificer but unfortunately do not command a very high price in these dull days, still they are very desirable because they are now just beginning to bloom, while other outdoor roses are almost post their best and as the Rambler will continue in good shape for three or low weeks, the rose casen will be prolonged to the end of July

Helpful Reminders.

A lot of good potting soil should be provided in a convenient place and all the empty pots should be piled securely out of the way. Most of us have pots rolling over the floor, piled high on the potting bench no matter how small the bench is. Raffia, scissors, trowels, spade, baskets, a few stakes, etc., should always be close to where you are filling orders, but we stumble over a string of pots a dozen times and finally break them. "I haven't time," is allowed to pass for as excuse but it saves time to do work properly as you go along. Provide a place for pots where they can be conveniently piled from your wagon as it comes home with a few; this is where most of us miss it. Arrange to keep the larger pots by themselves; each size should be separated. We are shown some well provided and managed places and we say, "Well, they can afford to keep work done up" This is nearly always at larger places where they would soon be ruined were they to indulge in the slipshod methods some of us are guilty of.

You must have plenty of good soil; mould, sand, peat and mixed soil for general potting. Greenhouses with good soil, usually produce good crops, but with poor soil no one does. What to use and how to prepare it depends on circumstances. The finest soil for general purposes is made by burning turf and mixing with it cand and manuscrops and the soil of the with it sand and manure according to crops. It is always sweet and porous and you cannot go far wrong with such Many other arrangements can be made for some parts of the country, but always aim to get the soil that contains the most nutrition; then arrange it so that air and water can penetrate easily. It should not be a soil that will hold water to the exclusion of air, or, on the other hand, let the water pass through it too readily. It is moisture naturally rising that is made use of by the roots, and this movement cannot take place when too much water is held without the requisite amount of air. To provide this porosity is the only use of sand, and the burnt sod embodies this valuable property and at the same time is very nutritive. Those of you near tanneries can get burnt tan bark. When you do use sand have it clean and sharp. You must consult the nature of your crops to some extent and contrive to make the best use of what may be at your command; but the point I wish to emphasize is, that you eannot afford to burn coal, hire help and pay taxes for crops that are planted in poor soil, and now is the time to provide the best. This is your "goose that lays the golden egg.'

Prepare paper bags that hold one bushel and sell your soil for fifty cents a sack. If it is good soil you will sell enough to pay for the labor in mixing your whole supply.

Go over all your heating pipes and have all leaks repaired at once. Figure up how much coal you burned last year and see if you can purchase next season's supply any cheaper by buying early and C. B. W. in quantity.

For several years he has been president of the Western Wholeside Nurserymen's Association and is Topelia's American Protective Association representative in the state legisla Mr Brooke has long been prominent in horticultural attairs both local and national having been an active member of the tariff and transportation committees of the American Surserymen prior to his election to the presidency of the association President Brooke is enthusiastic over the luture which he before the nursery business in the United States. He reports good spirits prevelent throughout the trade and is confideut that it will lead to good results. He anticipates that next year's conven-tion in Chicago will be the largest and most interesting in the history of his association.

San Jose Scale Legislation.

Bulletin No. 74 of the Virginia Experiment Station contains the Virginia law in regard to this pest. It is gratifying to note that one state has adopted common sense measures toward preventing the spread of this dreaded insect. The inspector is given power to decide whether infested plants shall be treated or destroyed, the owner having the right of appeal to the Board of Control of the State Agricultural Experiment Station, but the appeal must be taken in three days. The destruction of the trees or their treatment is to be done under the supervision of the state inspector but at the expense of the owner. Provision is, however, made that the boards of supervisors of any county may bear the expenses of such work within their county if they choose. It is made unlawful to offer for sale, sell, give away, or transport within the bounds of the state, plants, scions, trees, shrubs or vines infested with the San Jose scale and proper penalties are provided for offenders. This latter provision is the "meat in the cocoanut." It is certainly reasonable and right to require dealers to make our their stock is close and results. to make sure their stock is clean and to punish them for selling any which is not clean. No certificate subterfuge is provided.

HOLYOKE, Mass.-Therose show of the Horticultural Society was held on June 20 and 21 at the Unitarian church parlors. Owing to rain and cold weather the display was smaller than those of previous years and the quality of roses shown was not quite as good as hereto-fore. The attendance was disappoint-ingly light. Rev. E. A. Reed won the sil-ver cup for twenty-four blooms in twelve varieties. He having won the cup for three successive years, it now becomes his property. E. H. Howland's exhibit of toliage plants was excellent. E. D. Shaw and E. S. Waters were represented by fine collections of roses.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Louis A. Le Brun, aged seventy years, a widely known florist, died at his home in Canton suburb on June 13. He had been a resident of Canton for sixty-seven years, and 120 members of the family live in the vicinity. He is survived by a widow, three children and twenty grand children, several of whom are engaged in the florist business.

Hybrid Wichuraiana Roses.

Your Boston correspondent mentioned the fact of Mr. W. A. Manda having exhibited before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society a hybrid Wichuraiana rose with evergreen foliage, but feeling that Mr. Manda might have very much more in his South Orange, N. J., nursery, 1 ran out there the other day.

To those who know the ability and enthusiasm of Mr. Manda, it will be no surprise to be told that he has gathered together one of the finest and most select collections of salable plants in this or any country. It would take a volume of the FLORIST to describe his treasures, in orchids, palms, ferns, greenhouse flowering plants, and hardy perennials and shrubs of the most desirable forms, many of them seldom seen elsewhere.

There are to be found here golden-flow cred, spotted callas; Adiantum capillus veneris imbricatum, known to some as the hardy Farleyense, in fine shape with its beautiful pinnæ, the very counterpart of the familiar tender variety; asparagus in many fine species; seedling anthuriums with pink and white spathes, and the familiar scarlets in many new shades; Abutilon Savitzii with Ioliage as clear and fine as the variegated box elder and standing exposure much better; Peperomia sarmentosa, promising to be a unique and beautiful basket plant, and thousands of other things which I cannot mention, because I want to talk about the roses.

As you know, Mr. Manda has been working with the popular very hardy trailing or climbing Wichuraiana as a seed parent since he started for himself at South Orange, and his set of hybrids sent out two years ago have had a deserved and wide popularity, but it is pre-emi-nently under the raiser's care that the merits of these beautiful creations can best be seen. He has tested them in every conceivable way, on dry hill sides, in the shade, their roots exposed to the winter, and Mr. Robert M. Gray forced a set of them at Julius Roehrs' and found them as free flowering as Crimson Rambler. With their fast multiplying colors and extreme floriferousness, their ease of propagation and consequent greater cheapness, it seems to me this class of roses are likely to run the azalea a hard race for the first place as florists' Easter flowers.

The new evergreen set are even more vigorous but will not probably be in the hands of the trade before next year. Many of you may, however, wish to know what they are like. They are Wichuraianas crossed with Perle des Jardins, Meteor, American Beauty and other forcing roses. To Manda's surprise, I daresay, they retained their foliage outdoors last winter. They are most luxuriant growers, evidently hardy, and worthy of the most extended trial wherever covering plants are desired. To my mind the most beautiful are two crosses of the Perle, Gardenæflora, with beautiful vellow buds, and expanded flowers like Gardenia Fortunei, and Jersey Beauty, a single white flower expanding to three inches across, with big clusters of golden vellow stamens studded over beautiful masses of rich and shining green foliage; it will take the place of the Cherokee rose northward. Evergreen Gem is another dense grower of this set, and besides these are several as yet unnamed such as a cross of Meteor with fine, full, double, light pink flowers. The Beauty crosses had scarcely arrived at a condition for me to talk about, but I would say to florists that they should watch these roses, for I believe they will prove to be among the most useful acquisitions for a wide section of country that we have seen in recent years, and for the class of customers who desire roses for training on walls, or covering bare ground, they should prove of great value.

Trenton, N. J. James MacPherson.

Cincinnati.

STOCK IS VERY PLENTIFUL, WHILE QUALI-TIES AND DEMAND ARE ONLY FAIR .- A FISHING PARTY.—THE ANNUAL PICNIC.

The rush of commencements being over, florists anticipate a quiet time, and after this week summer dullness is generally looked for. Roses have been plentiful the past week, and met with fairly good demand. Carnations are too abundant and the same may be said of sweet peas.

On June 23 a party of five paid a visit to Wm. and C. C. Murphy, at Murphyville, a small German village about eight miles west of this city. It was, as Charles Jones called it, a fishing party, and their fish stories are numerous; nevertheless they report having a good time. Frank Ball caught the largest catfish, weighing nearly eight ounces, and Charles Jones nearly drowned and caught a heavy cold. The party arrived home safely late in the evening.

Considerable interest is being taken in the approaching picnic and outing of the Cincinnati Florists' Club. The sale of tickets has surpassed any previous year, and judging from present indications the fifth annual outing, which is set for July 21, at Coney Island, will be a rousing success. The committee in charge is C. J. Jones, A. C. Heckman, Wm. Murphy, F. W. Ball.

Foreign Crop Conditions.

A leading English house reports, June 11, as follows:

In France beet and carrot are looking well, but the acreage is very much smaller than usual and is all contracted for Owing to the low prices and bad trade during the past two years, the specula-tive farmer has been driven out of the field. Cabbage also is looking well, but the same remark also applies to this, there being very little out. Radish and lettuce have been planted out under favorable conditions and we look forward to a good yield.

In England swede turnips that are standing look well, but, owing to the drought last autumn, several lots missed and acreage is therefore much smaller than usual. Owing to the present high price of wheat, there will be some difficulty in placing out many swede turnip contracts for next season except at much higher figures.

With June the last month of the florists' business season has passed. About the usual amount of cut flower trade was done this year, but as fir as the sales of bedding plants are concerned we have just ended one of the worst seasons we ever had.

Most of the florists are now busy plant ing new stock, none of them, however, are adding any glass this season. young rose stock seems to be entirely free from cel worm, much to the satisfaction of rose growers to whom a few years ago this pest caused a lot of frouble

TO THE TRADE!

WHEN closing December last my arrangements with the Joseph Breck A Sons Corporation to expire on May 31st., 1898. I organized the Braslan Seed Growers Co. to act as selling agents for leading seed growers of the United States and Europe.

While by my agreement then made I do control all mail addressed to that firm at Chicago, whether in my name as manager, or to Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation, yet the Braslan Seed Growers Co. have neither purchased not taken on sale any surplus or carried-over seed stocks of the said corporation in storage, nor do we act for them in any way.

We turn over to that Corporation all such mail not of interest to us and frankly admit that our agreement applies to 1898 crops. As the Braslan Seed Growers Co. propose making their litst season's deliveries of new crop seeds should we receive, which we hardly anticipate, inquiries for seed crops of 1897, 1896 or other earlier years, we will freely pass the same to Jos Breck A Sons Corporation at Boston or their successors, as already arranged for.

The liberal patromage extended to me while interested in that corporation I gratefully acknowledge and appreciate.

I shall in the future manage the new company as selling agents for reliable seed growers of all lines of vegetable and flower seeds. Orders will be invoiced by and shipped to you direct from the producers. Your requirements when placed with as secures to you fresh new crop seeds at practically growers' contract prices.

324 Dearborn Street,

CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A.

From Radishes to Roses.

"I began as a market gardener," said a florist who makes a specialty of mignonette in a recent conversation with the Rural New Yorker. "Changed trade conditions caused radishes and beans. sweet corn and potatoes to be unprofitable crops and as an experiment I tried a house of violets. The first crop was not a financial success but 1 tried again and was more fortunate. Then 1 built two more small houses and have since naturally drifted into floriculture on a wider My product is sold through commission men just as my vegetables were. The New York cut flower trade is the most critical and exacting in the country, and to be quoted at top prices, any flowers, roses, carnations, violets, or whatever they may be-must be graded so as to be of even quality, carefully packed, and shipped early in the day. My flowers reach the commission man by 6:30 a. m. and are usually sold by 8.

"I soon found that the flower trade was far more exacting than trucking. I had to learn, when cold, foggy weather set in, that I could not make up for the lack of sun by extra heat; I triedit and got a bad case of red spider for my pains. Violets are always favorite flowers but they are grown in such quantities that one must raise a superior article to insure any return. The single violets are first in the market in the fall and the varieties 1 grow are Luxonne and California, with Lady Hume Campbell for double. The Marie Hume Campbell for double. The Marie Louise is a good double but the Campbell does not seem so subject to disease.

"I took up mignonette and carnations because I thought that I could grow them cheaper than I could roses but I soon found that successful carnation culture demands first-class houses especially suited to their needs. Mignonettethrived in a cheaper house and I grew smilax quite successfully. Mignonette requires a good strain of seed and the lateral shoots must all be pinched off, throwing all the strength into one main spike. Most growers say that there is no money in mignonette, and certainly there is not if carelessly grown, but I am not willing to give it up. Similarly, it is considered that smilax does not pay as it once did, because it has been supplanted by climbing asparagus, but it still pays me.

"The florist's trade is now so specialized that a man can not spread over a wide range of ground. The plant trade and cut flower trade are entirely separate branches. There is quite a difference, too, between growing plants for a local retail trade and for the wholesale market. Each demands a different class of material.

"If a man were to begin a retail business in a small town he would best start with bedding plants from seed in February, March and April. Pausies could be sown in August and again in February. They always sell well. He could keep violets. sweet alyssum, forget-me-nots and similar flowers in frames. As soon as he could build a small greenhouse, heated by hot water, he could grow carnations, allys sum, forget-me-nots, smilax and sfevia, and in a Separate compartment, he could propagate geraniums, ageratum, colcus, beliotrope etc., moving the overflow into hotbeds as soon as permitted by the weather

"He would better not try roses until he could give them a separate compartment with abundant light, and heat, although he might do well with some of the lesexacting ones, as Bon Silene, Safrano and Supheros. The best of the flowers which can be grown outside for cutting A are pæonies, irises, lilies, gladioli, coreopsis, cornflowers, phlox and other hardy herbaceous plants.

"There is practically no school in which the trade may be learned although the Missouri Botanie Garden maintains a course in gardening and floriculture. The best plan for a beginner is to secure a position in a florist's place. He will have plenty of hard work and is very likely to get discouraged, but the knowledge he gains will be practical.'

BUSINESS NOW ON A SUMMER BASIS.-END OF A SATISFACTORY SEASON.-LITTLE BUILDING IN SIGHT.

Business has, after the usual few final spasms, at last reached the bed rock of summer inactivity. Nothing more is to be looked for until fall unless it be the occasional funeral order that comes to help use up the summer surplus. The last two weeks have been fairly good with most florists, there having been numerous social events, weddings and other affairs, and some of them have been quite elaborate. The past season has been fairly good according to general reports and florists are well satisfied. The prospect for additional building is at present not very bright, most florists feeling the wishing the property bright. dom of going slow in this matter when the supply is already ample for the demand. Glass, one of the principalitems of expense, is held at such a high price as to be a deterrent to all who are not in urgent need of room, so that altogether probably not much will be done here outside of necessary repair work. A.

Kentia Belmoreana and Forsteriana will arrive in a few weeks.

THE FAMOUS FLOWER PARADE PROVES TO BE ARTIFICIAL, -FLORISTS ARE DISAP-POINTED.—REVIEW OF THE SPRING PLANT TRADE.-CONTRACT FOR A PARK CON-SERVATORY.—NOTES AND COMMENTS.

A very great deal has been said and written in advance about the flower parade which was the feature of the carnival held here this week, but the affair proved very disappointing to florists as the display of blooms, while large, was purely of the artificial variety. Local trade was not increased by the carnival for whatever extra demand was created by the festivities was supplied by the fakirs who came up from Chicago. The fakirs who came up from Chicago. show induced thousands of people to visit Milwaukee this week but it was run largely in the interest of hotels and saloons and it is safe to say that not $100 worth of natural flowers more than the normal consumption have been sold. J. E. Hughes, of Mt. Clemons, Mich., B. F. Gregory, of Ludington, Mich., and numerous other florists came to town Wednesday to see the flower parade and viewed with amusement the display of colored tissue paper. The pageant was devised by a woman who makes it her business to interest society ladies and sell them paper flowers at $10 a thousand, making the decorations for each turnout cost from $20 to $75.

All sorts of stories are told about the spring plant trade. Some dealers are sold out, others experienced fair business, while some did virtually nothing, but the season averaged pretty well. Some good geraniums are offered at 5 cents each but a few weeks ago one firm had difficulty in filling an order for 300 plants at seven cents. Flowers were very scarce last week but are very plentiful now. The brighter garden flowers, where well handled, take the shine off the indoor stock. Longiflorum lilies are still in the market.

The park commissioners have let the contract for a conservatory in Mitchell Park to cost $24,473.

The Holton & Hunkel Company and

John Arnold have each put a very attractive delivery wagon on the streets.

Ellis & Pollworth had a very elaborate decoration of plants in their store win-

Mrs. B. F. Gregory, who has been quite ill for two weeks, is much improved.

In addition to the greenhouses there will be a workroom 10x20, an office of the same size and a brick dwel-There is room for an addition which Mr. Smith expects to require in the spring.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.—FLORISTS' CLUB MATTERS .- FLOWERS AT A PICNIC .-JOSEPH SPRING LEAVES SCHENLEY PARK TO EMBARK IN BUSINESS.

Trade in general has been very dull indeed during the past week, notwithstanding that several of the florists have done a reasonably fair business in commencement orders and June weddings. Funeral work has been fairly plentiful, but with those of society who have commenced their summer outing and those who will go in a very short time, the florists have plenty of time at their disposal.

The Florists' Club was to have held the regular monthly meeting on June 20, but failed of having a quorum present; it looks as if the meeting night will have to be changed, for since Monday was adopted the attendance has dropped off very greatly, many members saying it does not suit their work to be away from home on that night. Something will have to be done to stimulate interest.

E. C. Ludwig, of Allegheny Market, whose son has been attending the Mount Troy school, presented each one of the scholars and teachers on the picnic at the close of the school term, with boutonnieres and bouquets of flowers, in all about 1000 pieces. John Bader is one of the directors of the school.

Joseph Spring who has been connected with the Phipps conservatories at Schenley park ever since they have been in operation, most of the time as foreman, but as superintendent during the interval from A. W. Bennett's death until Win. Falconer took charge, has resigned his position and will go east, going into business for himself. Mr. Spring, who, by his quiet, courteous manners and thorough knowledge of floriculture, secured the friendship and admiration of so many of the frequenters of the conservatories, leaves our city with the best wishes of everyone for his success in his new venture. Mr. Falconer has not yet appointed any one to fill his place.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S ANNUAL ROSE SHOW.—PRIZE WINNERS.—FAIR SEASON'S BUSINESS, -STOCK OF GOOD QUALITY. -THE PRONT SHOW A SUCCESS. OTHER MATTERS.

The annual rose and strawberry show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, June 23, was one of the best displays of H. P. roses and extra fine strawberries ever shown in this vicinity, and yet, had the show been one week later, we could have shown even better roses, and the fruit growers say it was a bit early for them to do their best. Competition was keen, and the entries many in all the classes. For the twelve best blooms of H. P. roses, one in a vasc, Ldward Hall was first, H. F. A. Lange, second, and T. H. Merriheld, third. For the six best H. I. A. Lange was first, Lilward Hall, second, and Mrs. E. C. Brooks, third. For the thirty best H. F. A. Lange was first, Edward Hall, second, and Mrs. J. C. Brooks, third. Some very tasty baskets of roses were shown. nothis class II 1 A Lange was awarded hrst, W. A. Fobes, second, and Mrs. Thos. ward, third. The vases of roses of one shade of color were also attractive and contained some exceptionally well done blooms. H.E. V. Lange won first, Ld-Ward Hall, second, and Mrs. A. L. Underwood, third. In addition to the roses there was an exceedingly good showing of pæonies, and H. A. Jones, S. H. Record and F. A. Blake were awarded premiums in the order named.

Weddings, graduations and other local events have kept trade fairly active and I think this season's business will compare very favorably with last year's. Good wedding decorations are not as numerous as we would like to see but we have had a few that were all right from our point of view, and we expect a few more.

The quality of the flowers coming in still keeps up remarkably well carnations especially being better than I have ever before seen them at this season. Roses are plentiful, grown both inside and outside, and are selling well. Lange is cutting some fine Spanish iris and they are very popular, but he calls them Japanese as he has no use for Spaniards of any kind. Red, white and blue decorations have had quite a run, and blue flowers have been hard to get, but now we have iris and Centaurea evanus in quantity.

The weekly exhibitions of the Horticult ural Society maintain their uniform excellence and some good displays are made. June 16 was the date of the popular annual paonia show and some splendid arrangements of cut flowers and fine specimen hydrangeas were exhibited. So far we have experienced good growing weather and outside crops are in splendid condition. Carnations have made an excellent start and bid fair to be extra fine by next September. The plantings of chrysanthemums in this vicinity will about equal last year, notwithstanding the many threats heard last fall about not planting "another blessed mum." A. H. L. blessed 'mum."

La Crosse, Wis-Mrs. M. Guillaume has reopened her downtown store, in the remodeled Stirneman building.

HILLSBORO, ORE.—One of the best rose shows ever held in this county attracted a large attendance here June 11.

Nebraska City, Neb.—Walker Fass, who has conducted a greenhouse for a number of years, has sold out to C. B. Brown, who will dispose of the stock at his dry goods store.

There is something particularly suggestive in the name "Little Beauty" with which F. Breitenbaugh & Bro. havechrisened their fuchsia. A dwarf, compact plant, fairly covered with blooms, it is a beauty in all that the word implies. The plant was originated with them about seven years ago, it being a sport of Gracieux, imported from France and introduced by Mr. Simmons. That it is far superior to its parent many a grower, and I have spoken to several on the subject, will sustain me in my assertion. Another fuchsia equally attractive is Lord Byron, and this variety is also grown here with marked success.

What promises to attract attention in the near future is a new heliotrope, named after a Madame Brewer. It is a fine variety, looks promising, and from all appearances has come to stay. Novelties, however, by no means exhaust the stock of the Breitenbaugh brothers. As growers of roses, carnations and bulbous stock they are very successful, while their palms and decorative plants, of which they carry a large line, are not to be found fault with. Decorative work is one of their specialties. A house expressly adapted for smilax, will soon be in course Номо. of erection.

Moscow, Idaho.—Rapid progress is being made in constructing the new conservatory at the state university. The building proper is 18x50, with stone foundation, brick and glass side walls, iron rafters, wrought iron gutters, cement floor, steam heat and all the other modern devices for successful floriculture.

AURORA, ILL. - Roscoe Saunders has leased his very fine establishment to F. Smely, of Gibson City, Ill., and will take a well earned vacation from busines. Mr. and Mrs. Saunders Jeave shortly to spend the summer in Maine.

VALUE OF THE EOO IN SICKNESS.

The value of egg albumen as lood in certain diseased conditions is pointed out by Dr. C. E. Boyston. When fever is present and appeture is not, he says, when we want an aspite article of diet; the white of an egg, raw, serves both as lood and medicine. The way to give it is to diam off the admitter at the small end of the egg, the yolk remaining inside the shell, and a little salt to this and direct the patient to swallow it. Repeat every hour two. SUMMER SHOW OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY .- NOTES OF THE EXHIBITS .- A CHRYSANTHEMUM EXHIBIT PLANNED FOR NOVEMBER.

The grand annual summer exhibition of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, June 20 and 21, was very success tul, both in point of attendance and in number and quality of exhibits. W. B. May, gardener for J. J. Goodwin, made a splendid exhibition of strawberries, noteworthy in this class being his British Queen, a late variety new to this country. He also showed some very hand-some unnamed sweet peas from seed raised by the California Sweet Pea Company. Robert Patchet, gardener for the Rev. Francis Goodwin, also exhibited a large variety of strawberries, lettuce, sweet peas and cucumbers. Colonel Clayton H. Case made an exhibit of ten varieties of roses. He has upwards of sixty varieties on his grounds in West Hartford. Miss Florence Browne made an admirashis Floride flowing made an admina-ble display of roses. One of her choicest specimens was a Paul Neyron. Mrs. James R. R. Moore made an exhibit of roses and the daughter of Mrs. Moore, Miss Grace Moore, showed a choice collection of wild flowers. Stephen Delbar, gardener for ex-Governor Morgan G. Bulkeley, showed a collection of roses that was viewed with much interest. Mrs. W. S. Seliger made a very fine exhibit of hardy plants. The features of the display were Loniceras Sinensis and variegated Halleana. W. E. Wallace showed fifty varieties of roses and had the largest and most varied collection in the hall. He had magnificent Ulrich Brunners and his Mrs. John Laing were exceptionally well grown. He also exhibited Margaret Dickson, white with pale flesh center and the Paul Neyron, one of the largest vari-cties of rose in cultivation. There were dozens of other good exhibits. A chrysanthemum was presented to each child under 16 years of age, and each one was instructed how to cultivate the plant. The society will award gold, silver and bronze medals to the children exhibiting the best results at the November show.

The annual rose show of the Amateur Horticultural Society, June 21 and 22, was as usual, a great success. Evangelist hall was filled with fine exhibits. Mayor Eldridge, of Chicopce had the largest display, forty-five varieties. He has over 400 bushes including eighty-six varieties, 400 busnes including eighty-six varieties, but the recent heavy rains had so damaged many of the blooms that he declined to exhibit them. Mrs. George H. Wells had the only specimen in the hall of the York and Lancaster rose. The only hardy gladioli were exhibited by Mrs. Abbie Perry, who also staged some fine pansies, spiriea, mignonette, Jacq roses and honeysuckle. Wm Goldthwait, of Longmeadow, had handsome pæonies, candytuft, sweetwilliam, gaillardias and three varieties of Canterbury bell. E. H. Barney and C. L. Simonds exhibited some fine lilies and Ald. L. D. Robinson had, among other flowers, some noteworthy pink and white pyrethrums. Other excellent displays were made by E. D. Stock, Mrs. J. W. Shillingford, Mrs. Charles Candrian, Rev. W. T. Hutchins, Mrs. G. D. Cooley, and several others.

The annual sweet pea show of the Hampden Horticultural Society will take place on July 20 and 21.

The American Florist Company's New Directory.

The best novel feature of the latest edition of the American Florist Company's new directory is the alphabetical list of all persons in the floral, seed and nursery trades of the United States and Canada. All names are still preserved under states and towns, as in the earlier issues of the book, and it contains the usual array of miscellaneous information invariably associated with directories and reference books. The price of the book in stiff covers is $2.00; in flexible leather binding, $3.00.

It will always be the S. A. F. to me in spite of the useless and unornamental appendage lately tacked to the good old name, and I wish to go forward to the front pew, rise before the audience and tearfully say I am sorry for what little aid I gave in making the change. Away down in the hottom of their hearts I believe that nineteen out of twenty of the other culprits are in the same state of mind.

We have had the glittering bait of a national charter revolving before our eyes, and like the voracious pickerel, we gobbled it without stopping to see whether it was good for us or not. What are we going to do with it after we get it, if we ever do, which does not seem altogether likely. What better off shall we be? How much more good can we do the trade? How many more dollars can we gather into the treasury?

I verily believe that President Cleveland was right when he said that a simple trade organization was not entitled to the high honor of a charter granted by special act of the national congress. Now by a change of name and a pretence of being what we are not, and never will be, we are attempting to play a confidence game and get by false pretences what we can not get on our merits.

Let us stop and think of a society of ornamental horticulturists, dignified by a charter from this great government of ours, stooping to sell information to Tom, Dick and Harry as to which of its members pay their bills and which do not. It looks like a mighty small potato with a mighty big name.

Isn't it really about time, or will it not be in August, that we should admit that we have been foolish, drop all this nonsense about a national charter, cut the excrescence off the name and begin to attend to our knitting again? I believe it is.

There seems to be a widespread misunderstanding as to the possibilities of successful work and as to the limitations of the field of action in a national society of this kind. There are, of course, the chronic kickers who are bound to object at all times. These are to be ignored. The fool must be left to his folly, as he can never acquire wisdom. Aside from these, however, there are many earnest and honest men constantly suggesting, with the best intentions in the world, the most dangerous and impracticable things. They seem to entirely miss the proper point of view.

We have a large society whose members are drawn from widely separated localities. Their interests, or what they consider their interests, vary greatly. The binding ties are very loose and the membership fluctuates constantly. The members of its governing body are scattered all over the country and can at best meet but twice a year. These members are changing from year to year, and with a change of membership of this kind in the governing body is quite likely to come a change of ideas and a wavering policy.

Even if it were wise for other reasons to undertake them, strictly commercial enterprises can not be carried out by this or any other society organized on these lines. The Florists' Hail Association has been of much benefit to the trade. The Florists' Mutual Fire Insurance Company we hope to see succeed as well as the other. The Florists' Protective Association, the Telegraph Delivery Association, etc.—well, we do not hear much of them. All of these organizations are, however, separate and apart from the S. A. F., and quite properly so. They are strictly commercial enterprises. To succeed they must be managed on the strictest commercial lines, and the S. A. F. from the nature of things can not do it.

The carnation, rose, chrysanthenium and dahlia societies might well be, and I hope some day will be, united with the mother society, but these others—no.

The recent action of the executive committee in establishing a so-called credit information bureau is to be roundly condemned. There was no need for haste in the matter and its organization should at least have been delayed until the society could have passed upon it.

The idea is utterly wrong from the beginning. It is a commercial enterprise pure and simple and, if to be effective, requires the most careful business management. This management can not be given by four men separated by hundreds of miles, having other business interests and entirely lacking in knowledge in this particular line of work, even though they be such able men as the existing committee are known to be. The idea of this society deliberately selling information as to the business affairs of its members is abhorrent. Finally, the fees provided are so ludicrously inadequate to any kind of efficient service that it is evident that the money contributed by other members for other purposes will have to be diverted for the purpose of supplying to others information of the business standing of the uninterested contributors.

This matter will come up for consideration at Omaha and every member should go prepared to kill it.

The co-operative purchasing scheme is a harmless thing enough which will probably travel peacefully to an early and unlamented death. The members of the society are too widely separated. Much could undoubtedly be made out of it, however, if taken up locally by the various florists' clubs. It is small business for a society of ornamental horticulturists with a national charter, even if the charter is in the bush. W. N. Rudd.

Giant White Daisy.

The vase figured in the illustration is ten inches in height. The small flowers attached to the base are good specimens of the common white daisy, or marguerite, to show the great difference in the size of the flowers and length of stems. The giant variety has stems eighteen inches to two feet in length and flowers from four to four and one-half inches in circumference. A bunch of twenty-five makes quite a vase full, but they do not seem to keep so well as those of the smaller variety nor is the plant a very prolific bloomer.

Notes and Comments.

The transformation of Robert Craig & Son's place from a bower of floral beauty at Easter-time to one of leafy luxuriance at the present time is very nearly complete.

Mr. Robert Craig has come to the conclusion that the best kind of a house in which to grow Cocos Weddeliana is a very dark one. When crowded for room for Easter flowering plants, the cocos were put temporarily under the benches along the side of the walk, and they now are wearing a dark, rich shade of green, evidence that the partial darkness suits them.

Mr. Craig, Sr., relates that he recently saw in a lady's home one of the very best cocos of the species under consideration he has ever seen, and it retained a beautiful, rich dark green color, which he can account for in no other way than that it is growing in semi-darkness, as the place it occupies is several feet from a window, and the plant has been in the same position for several months.

This fact when generally known ought to simplify the growing of this favorite and graceful little palm, and at the same time stamp it as one of the very best plants in the whole list for home adornment. Another experiment the Messrs. Craig are putting into successful operation is the planting out on tables under glass of a number of our best known and most useful decorative plants, such as, Kentias, Pandanus Veitchii, Livistona rotundifolia and the celebrated Boston

In comparison with plants of the same age, the L. rotundifolia growing in pots and those planted out, the latter were fully one hundred per cent better than the former, being broader in the leaf, yet retaining that compact appearance for which it is noted, and at the same time possessing a more thrifty appearance generally. By this method of culture they will have a large quantity that will readily wholesale the coming fall and winter at $1 cach, whereas those growing in pots will not be worth much more than 50 cents.

In a recent issue of the Gardening World reference is made to "a beautifully arranged and highly colored group of crotons," exhibited at the Temple Show by the well known firm of Messrs, James Veitch & Sons, and among the varieties named are many which have proven the most satisfactory in some parts of the Inited States for outdoor hedding, as, Barone's James de Fothschild, Livansia num, Queen Victoria, Hawkeri, Emperor Alexander III. and Mortii. During recent years there has been an increased call for these gorgeously beautiful bedding plants. In addition to the varieties above named, Dayspring, Irregulare, Rubrolineatum, Fasciatus and Aurea Maculatum are good for bedding. The last named is more especially suitable for the edge of beds, being one of the small-leaved section, with green leaves spotted with bright yellow.

Among the newer zonal pelargoniums the Mme. Bruant has made a very favorable impression upon everyone who has seen it. It is quite distinct from anything in this class, the most distinct since Souvenir de Mirande made its appearance nine or ten years ago. The flower is white, veined and distinctly edged with a bright yet delicate shade of solferino; it is very pleasing to look upon and ought to make an excellent market variety. It appears to be a thrifty grower and a free bloomer, with trusses of large size. Whether it will succeed as a variety for outdoors remains to be proven. It is well worth a trial.

Mr. Albert M. Herr says he is trying quite largely for next winter's carnation campaign some of the latest productions in new varieties—seedlings raised in California. I hope he will meet with more success than I did some years ago when experimenting along the same lines. Mr. C. Joseph Haettel sent a number of varieties for trial selected from the standpoint of the Californian and the best the California climate produced at that time, but not one among them proved to be of any value with us. Louis J. Haettel was a seedling of his, and met withsome success in some sections. It was a white with deeply serrated petals and was quite fragrant. This variety, I think, was sent out by H. A. Dreer, and was also tested by the late Chas. T. Starr, and proved to be the most satisfactory, so far as I can learn, in and near Albany, N. Y.

Carnations do magnificiently in California. I remember in the seventies a Mr. Murphy—I think that was his name—who brought them into San Francisco literally by the bushel from his gardens located on the bay near the Presidio. Plants in one season would make a growth on an average of not less than two feet across. California, in many parts of that favored state, has an ideal climate for the successful development of carnations, but whether the varieties produced under the very dissimilar environment to which they will be subjected in the less favored eastern states remains to be proven. Many of the varie ties which I tried were raised near Redondo beach, while others were produced in Piru. I hope Mr. Herr will have flowers of the California seedlings on exhibition at some of the meetings of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia next fall and winter and also at the meeting of the American Carnation Society to be held in the Quaker City next February. #### Odontoglossums for Florists.

It has been said that Odontoglossum crispum is the queen of orchids. Certainly there are more plants of it grown than of any other kind, and the more one has the more one wants, chiefly because there are no two that flower alike, and indeed the same plants vary a great deal each year. It is a cool house species, one that needs very little heat as it grows just below the frost line on the Andes in Colombia. The best situation for it is in a north house such as is used for propagating in winter; one that is kept at about 50° will suit it admirably, as most of the growth is made in winter. The plant blooms in spring and early summer and the sprays are exquisite for all decortive purposes. Whether cut or used in pots, to see them arching out over a bank of adiantums is to see one of the prettiest combinations possible. We have used them very successfully in this way during the past few weeks.

Another good species is O. Rossi, a Mexican plant wi h which may be classed also O. Cervantesii, as both are very much alike. These are winter kinds, easily grown in a cool house in summer, with a little more warmth among the cattleyas in winter. In this way we have brought around some very sick plants, making bulbs as large as hen eggs. flowers are invaluable for boutonnieres for either sex and last well when made up. O. citrosmum is also another valuable Mexican kind for cut flowers, and it may be said that when an orchid hails from this land of sun it, in almost every case, needs abundance of light in winter to mature the growth and make it flower. Our sun is too hot in summer if given in its entire strength, but in winter is necessary in its full power. Many growers dry O. citrosmum almost to death to induce it to bloom, and this is a mistake. Give the growth sun and air and it will flower well without material injury. There are many back walls in florists establishments that might be utilized by cultivating some of these plants wired on blocks of fern root and suspended where they can get plenty of water from the hose in summer; the labor will be small and the returns ample, as some already in the business know and can testify.

We have a great fancy for O. grande; it is an early fall blooming sort and never fails to cause comments from the interesting shape of the crest. It is easily cultivated, at least we find it so, for our plants have been here for about six years and are stronger than ever. This plant must never be dried up or it will suffer quickly. Another valuable class of plants that used to be grouped with this genus is the miltonias, one of which was figured a year ago in M. vexillarinm superbum, and a whole chapter might be written on it alone. Another good kind figured in this issue is M. Roezlii, named in honor of the intrepid collector Benedict Roezl, who saw his first plants, floating down stream on a log, in full bloom. Both the type and the white form are very beautiful, and they require a little more heat than the others, say a palm house, with plenty of moisture from the hose to keep down insects, thrips especially. Under these conditions they will bloom freely in winter.

There are many other odontoglossums which are good and easy to cultivate. They need lots of moisture, and if the above few kinds are taken in hand, it is safe to say others will follow. Always pot the plants when signs of new growth make their appearance, and this is when new roots are emitted and seek a firm hold in fresh, sweet compost, such as fern root and moss in equal proportions. If the plants are watered properly, the moss will grow and form a healthy rooting medium as well as an unfailing index as to the need of water. We usually begin to pot O. crispum in the month of October, taking the plants most advanced first. The hot days are then past and the plants take hold readily without any check such as would follow this operation earlier in the year. Of course, if an orchid of any kind gets sick, it is best to turn it out at once whatever the season, as delay will cause the loss of the few roots that remain alive.

Carnations.

Last week I wrote of the necessity of closer relations between the retailer and the grower. To be a really successful carnation grower there should also be closer relations between the grower and his plants than is usually found. The grower should know all their moods and fancies, their likes and dislikes, their needs and their foes. If you employ a grower see to it that he can answer any questions about a certain variety at any time during the season and if you are growing them yourself see to it that you can answer these questions for yourself. The grower must come into personal contact at least once a month with each individual plant on the place, no matter whether it is a thousand plants or sixty thousand that are grown. To accomplish this during the summer means that he must do all the topping, and it also means a tired back at night; but all these things are part and parcel of carnation growing.

Such a grower can so handle his plants in the field that they will produce their heaviest crops between December 15 and January 15 and for the same dates preceding and following Easter. With heavy crops when the demand is for them there is little trouble in disposing of the cut between those dates in a satisfactory manner as it will not be large enough to make a glut and plenty to keep up a nice To do this is something that no one can instruct you in, as it is solely and exclusively a matter of soil, season and culture. You must learn to know each variety and how to handle it for yourself. The main object to be worked for is to have plants with plenty of good working wood when they are ready to plant in the house. This, of course, will depend on their topping right now and through the season and will vary with varieties and the season. A variety that grows especially strong will require more topping and it we have a wet summer the topping will have to be given closer attention than in a dry one. Aside from topping, proper field culture must be given the plants and this consists in having a perfeetly clean patch with loose soil between the rows and around the plants in the row, this looseness of the soil to be brought about by the liberal use of the harrow (horse or hand) and the hoe. If insects become too numerous on the outdoor plants, it is well to get rid of them; but unless they become a real menace to the health of the plants, it is better to omit remedy, as often the latter causes as much injury to the stock as the insects them-selves; and if nature is left to take her own course, they are usually cleaned out before they do any scrious damage.

There may be one or two instances in a hundred where the careful use of a good bone or commercial fertilizer will be of benefit if applied immediately before a rain in summer, but make sure that you know how to use it, and even then do not apply it unless the plants are not growing well enough to make good specimens by fall.

No matter whether you want to crop your carnations or have them bloom steadily all the season, if there is to be any money made out of them, they must bear plenty of flowering wood when they are planted in the fall; after they are started in the house, it is a matter of temperature and watering in order to advance or retard them. Carnations that crop have usually been looked upon with dislayor by most growers, but when we learn to handle them properly they will produce as much if not more in the dollars and cents line than those varieties that are always in bloom and never in crop.

WOODSTOCE, ONT.—The local horticultural society and florists will give a flower show on August 4 and 5.

Filling Benches.

How to empty and refill the benches with soil with the greatest economy of time and labor is an important question for all large growers. Ingenious operators have at various times devised methods of more or less pretensions, but it would appear that nearly all have come back to the old-fashioned hand barrow plan, plank runs being laid from the ground outside of the house to the height of the bench and along the same. The "scoop" barrow is the form generally used.

Mr. Benj. Dorrance, who is an extensive rose grower, describes his method of removing stock and soil and re-filling rose houses as follows: "Having first removed the stakes or other supports, with a pair of hedging shears I cut all plants off close to the soil, thus leaving top of benches clear for the wheelbarrows, into which the soil is shoveled by three men and wheeled out by two others. These five men empty a house 20x150 feet in about two and one-half hours. The soil being entirely removed the benches are swept clean and the hose turned on with full force, cleaning every crack and crevice.

The house is then closed tight for twenty-four hours to dry, after which a heavy coat of lime wash is given while hot. The lime wash is made by mixing with the lime when slaking, thirty pounds flower of sulphur to each bushel of fresh stone lime. As soon as the whitewash is completed we reverse the operation of taking out the soil. Two men fill the barrows, two wheeling and the third levels the soil, taking about three hours to fill a house. This is my method and my force of ten men, after the first twenty-four hours have passed, keep a continuous stream of soil going in and out until the houses are filled and planted. It should be added that in the end of each house I place a 3x6 hotbed sash, which takes the place of sash bars, and through which we have access to the outside world without removing any sashbars or glass.'

J. N. May's process is similar. Mr. May says that having the new compost close to the door of the greenhouse he can with four men fill a 100-foot house in about three hours, but usually he has five men in the gang. As this work has to be done invariably in hot weather the desire to get it done as quickly as possible is apparent. S. J. Reuter in speaking of the same subject lays stress upon the fact that he does not use his regular men for this work but hires extra laborers to do it. At E. M. Wood's Waban Rose Conservatories they have holes made at regular intervals, say eight feet in the roof and shovel the old soil directly from the benches through these openings, thus getting it out of the way immediately, where it is allowed to remain until it can be conveniently carted away, leaving the way clear for beginning work at once on cleaning, repairing and re-filling the beds. Mr. Jos. Heacock advises that a door not less than three feet three inches wide be located in each end of a rose house when building.

Walter Weisbrod, with Conrad Hess at Baltimore, states that he found great difficulty in filling benches by means of boxes carried along narrow paths. He then took to sliding them along the edge of the bench, and this went even harder until he happily thought of grease. He then procured some linseed oil, which was applied with a brush to the bottom of the box and the edge of the bench, and afterward found the work much easier. He adds that the edge of the bench should be smoothed with a plane before the oil or grease is applied.

Away Down East.

Florists in general probably have little acquaintance with their fellow craftsmen in that away down eastern district designated as N. B., which in correspondence is the Latin nota bene, or note well, but which in this instance is an abbreviated reference to New Brunswick. For the purpose of introducing that somewhat out of the way locality to favorable notice we present herewith two views of the establishment of Miss Ada M. Schleyer, of Fredericton. Miss Schleyer has 5,000 feet of glass, and, as the pictures show, her stock is in most excellent condition. A general assortment is grown and meets with a ready sale. The roses seen in the picture are Brides and Bridesmaids. New Brunswick is a province more than twice the area of the state of Massachusetts, but, according to the recently issued American Florist Company's birectory for 1898, has only an even dozen florists. Is it any wonder that they all prosper?

VERY LITTLE BUSINESS BEING DONE.—EARLY CLOSING SUGGESTED .- A NEW BRAND OF LILIES.—SIEBRECHT & SONS' KENTIA FARM.—REMOVAL OF T. W. WEATHERED'S SON.—KOFFMAN'S "RECEIVING STATION." JAPANESE P.EONIES POPULAR.-A DIN-NER COMMITTEE.-THE ROSARY WAS SCORCHED.

Why do not the New York florists imitate those of other cities and close early these summer afternoons? The shops are deserted by customers and if the clerks were to follow their example and lock the doors and skip, it would be a most sensible move. The wholesalers could quit at 1 p. m. every day during July and August, just as well as at 6 p. m., as is the custom. Most of them recognize this fact and all that is needed is someone to prepare as agreement to that effect and the requisite signatures might be easily obtained. Very little is being done in the way of business and that is completed in the early hours of the day, after which the markets and large wholesale establishments serve merely as loafing places for the Greeks, whose ardorfor flower buying and flower selling has given way, for the time being, to their propensity for throwing craps, with a reckless indifference to the size of the stakes.

Down town among the seedsmen equal dullness prevails, an occasional market gardener after Refugee beans being about the only evidence of life. A certain drummer claims to have struck a lucky find, not in the Klondyke but in Bermuda-a graveyard full of Harrisii lilies that have been growing there undisturbed for half a century and not a trace of disease to be seen. Bulbs from this stock come high; so they should, for the stock of such graveyards is very limited. This versatile drummer has not yet decided on a name for the variety. He was at first inclined to callit "The Graveyard Brand" but has decided to wait and see how his customers feel on the subject about next Eastertide, as under the circumstances, this title might have an application entirely too personal.

Siebrecht & Son are about to add another house, 30x132, to their establishment at New Rochelle. The range now comprises seventy-six houses. Kentias and arecas are grown in immense quantities, no less than forty-eight houses being devoted exclusively to them. Mr. Siebrecht says that seeds recently planted will run the number of young stock up to nearly four million. Fourteen houses are filled with ferns among which is a large quantity of Nephrolepis cordata compacta, which is one of the handsomest and most useful ferns in cultivation. The outdoor nursery department contains an enormous quantity of Japanese maples and conifers of the choicer sorts. The boiler house erected here last year is a model in its way. It is of stone, 45x145. Four one hundred horse-power steam boilers constitute the battery and the main steam pipe is carried to the greenhouses through an underground tunnel seven hundred feet in length.

Thos. W. Weathered's Son has removed from 141 Center street to 46 and 48 Marion street, between Spring and Prince streets, two blocks east of Broadway. This is the old location, where the firm carried on business from 1869 to 1890, but greatly improved when the street widening which is now in progress shall have been completed. The new avenue into which Marion street will be merged will be the finest in the business section of New York. It will be practically an extension of Fourth avenue to the City Hall, but its name has not yet been decided upon.

The new "Receiving Station" of Koffman, the Smilax King, at 52 West Twenty-ninth street was opened with appropriate formalities on Friday, July Mr. Koffman was there in person all day and received his callers with characteristic urbanity, accepted with due appreciation their good wishes and treated them with unlimited generosity. so that they departed in the frame of mind which this notable occasion justified and demanded. The opening ceremonies are to be repeated annually, regardless of the market value of smilax, adiantum and cypripediums.

A slight fire destroyed the awning and and electric sign and cracked the glass in the show window of "The Rosary" on Fifth avenue, on the night of June 28. A lighted eigar thrown from an upper window is supposed to have been the cause. Mr. J. H. Troy, manager of the establishment, is absent from the city, attending to some business in Newport. Willie ing to some business in Newport. Willie Tiffany, one of the proprietors, has fine bachelor apartments above the store but is now in Cuba with Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

H. H. Berger & Co. report a gratifying business in the fine new Japanese pæonies, which, with their immense brilliant flowers, are doing much to develop the reviving interest in this class of plants.

John Scott, J. W. Withers and J. I. Donlan were appointed at the June meeting of the Gardeners' Society to arrange for a dinner to take place probably about September 10, until which time the society adjourned.

ORDERS ARE SCARCE, BUT GOOD STOCK IS EVEN SCARCER.—PROSPECTS FOR A GOOD REPRESENTATION AT OMAHA. - HUGH GRAHAM'S FOURTH OF JULY FLOATS WERE ALL RIGHT.

The lot of the scribe is a hard one nowa-days, as there is very little to write about. Everything is at a standstill, about. Everything is at a standstill, except that when an order has been welcomed the machinery of the whole place has to be set in motion to get flowers enough to fill it, for stock of good quality is very scarce. There are a few good Kaiserins about and some fair Meteors, and these, with an occasional dozen of Alme. Jamain (they cannot be called Beauties now), are to be had provided one gets in ahead of the other fellow. Carnations are still being sent in from last season's plants and are fair in qual-The assortment has dwindled down to McGowan, Scott and a few Portias. Graham has some good Victors, although Daybreak would now be a better name for them. Sweet peas are good one day and poor the next, depending on the weather. Layender and white varieties are much in demand for funeral work. A few asters are making their appearance and will greatly help out the assortment.

The July meeting of the Florists' Club. held last Tuesday evening, was not very well attended, quite a number of the boys being with Commodore Westcott navigating the waters of Barnegat Bay. The question for discussion at the August meeting will be "Climbing and Trailing Roses," and W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., is to prepare a paper on the subject.

The Omaha convention was discussed and it is hoped to get up quite a delega-tion although at present the interest is rather lukewarm. The best rate so far obtained is $56.34, which includes parlor car each way. There is still some hopes of going and returning for one fare, but it is still in prospect.

Peter Barr, of London, has been honoring this city with a visit the past week. Mr. Barr is a genial gentleman with a very varied knowledge of horticulture. He retired from active business some three years ago and now, at the age of 73, is making a trip around the world. He is halc and hearty and moves about like a man of 60. He goes to Canada from Philadelphia.

Hugh Graham's decorated carriages, four-in-hands, drags, etc., made a great display in the parade on the Fourth of July. Asparagus, pampas plumes in colors, artificial roses and fresh carnations and roses, together with gladioli, made up the assortment of flowers used. There were also a number of immortelle designs, crescents, Maltese crosses, wreaths, etc., attached to the wheels. The whole set, some twenty-five in all, were much admired.

AN EXCELLENT SATURDAY EXHIBITION AT HORTICULTURAL HALL, - CERTIFICATES OF MERIT.-TRADE IS POOR WITH GOOD STOCK SCARCE.—NOTES AT THE HUB.

At last Saturday's exhibition in Horticultural Hall the delphiniums were strik-ingly beautiful. Many of the spikes showed two feet and more of solid bloom and the range of color was remarkable. and the range of color was femarkable. The premiums went, first, to J. L. Gardner (Wm. Thatcher, gardener), Mrs. A. W. Blake (Henry Wild, gardener), and Rea Bros. A flower cluster of Dendrobium thyrsiflorum Hinghamiensis, shown by W. W. Lunt, attracted much attention and was recognized with a certificate of merit. Compared with the type, the individual flowers are much larger and the color is richer. C. G. Robeling was also the recipient of a certificate of merit for a fine flower of Lælia-Cattleva Canhamiana alba. Of herbaceous perennials fine collections were staged by W. N. Craig, Rea Bros. and Geo. L. Clarke, to whom the prizes were given in order named. Japan irises were not equal to those shown in past years. The principal exhibitors were J. L. Gardner and Miss M. S. Walker (1'. Cairus, gardener). James Comley showed a number of good seedlings. J. L. Gardner was the only exhibitor of campanulas. Sweet williams from W. N. Craig, Mrs. A. W. Blake and Miss. M. S. Walker were excellent. George Hollis staged a collection of thirty-six named varieties of geraniums. In the section alloted to wild flowers was a vase of Goodyera Menziesii, sent from Seattle, Washington, by Prof. H. H. Henshaw. Over in the further corner of the hall the mycologists, with text books in hand, were congregated around a plate on which were spread some bits of a poor little modest looking fungus labeled "Quality unknown." They spent the entire session in its contemplation.

Seashore trade is just beginning to show some signs of life. Outside of this very little is going on. Flowers of good quality are scarce. In roses about the only first-class stock in evidence this week is Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. This prime summer rose is coming in now in beautiful shape and stands pre eminently at the head of the list. Carnations are in fair supply, but small sized and not in special demand. Fink pond lilies are arriving freely but with prices away down. This flower is no longer in the fancy class.

Chas. W. Ross, of Newton, has been appointed a member of the state highway commission.

Departures from Boston for Europe last week included A. Hutson, C. E. Holbrow, W. Anderson and John Price.

Visitors this week: W. E. Chappell, Providence, R. L.; G. B. Dorr, Bar Har-bor, Me., G. W. Hilliard, Exeter, N. H.

August Dresselhas achieved remarkable success with earnations this season. His plants were good in the fall, came in flower early and bloomed continuously all winter. On July 5, there were only one or two varieties out of about a dozen in cultivation that showed any signs of exhaustion after their long season of forcing. Scott, Albertini and Daybreak are as strong and vigorous now as they have been at any time this season and show every indication of being able to endure the heat and produce a good crop of flowers until time for replanting. The color of the flowers, especially of Daybreak, is phenomenally good for carnations grown under glass at this season of the year. The plants are grown in heavy clay loam; the houses are well ventilated day and night during the hot weather, but no shading has been used. Pressel has this season made a departure from the customary methods of growing roses as he has taken the center benches out of all his rose houses and in their stead has made borders raised about twenty-six inches above the walks. bottom of each border is filled with about twenty inches of stable manure, which, after being well beaten down, is allowed to stand a few days before it is covered with about six inches of soil in which the roses are planted. Mr. Dressel gets all the manure he wants delived free at his greenhouses and it is cheaper for him to fill his borders with it than it would be to fill them with soil.

J. Algots, gardener for Mrs. Geo. M. Pullman, has in front of their conservatory Celosia cristata and Mrs. Parker geranium. The combination of the dark red cockscomb with the light colored foliage of the geranium is very pleasing. Mr. Algots plants the celosia about the 25th of February and grows it in boxes and pots until time to plant out, which is done when he does the general bedding of geraniums and other plants. This year they were planted May 26.

TRADI, IS DULL.—THE PICNIC COMMITTEE'S PLASS - FLOWER SHOW MATTERS IN STATE OF O. -VISIT TO OLD ORCHARD, THE HOME OF THE PALMS AND FERNS,—PLANT MEN PLAN BUILDINGS.

Summer quiet is fast settling upon basiness, and one hears more talk of getting away from town, going to the convention, howling, picnic, and other kindred topics, than of business. Trade is slow and has been so during the past two weeks. Stock is in fan quantity but poor quality. Asters are the latest blooms that have appeared in the market. They have been coming in quite freely for the past ten days and are selling at from I to cents. Acry little cut stock is shown in the retailers windows, they are mostly arranged with plants, the Boston fern showing to good advantage in all of blower show matters are rather quiet, the chairman of the finance committee reporting some increase in the subscriptions to the special prize fund, but very little more is expected until fall, when eanvassing will be resumed with vigor, and it is expected to easily put the amount over $2,000. So far about fifteen persons have signified their intention of going to Omaha; it is expected, however, that this number will be considerably increased as the time for departure approaches.

The picnic committee held a meeting during the week and decided to hold the annual outing on July 20. A programme of events has been arranged and will probably include a shooting contest for the morning. Arrangements have been made for a special train over the Air Line and a good time is promised all who can attend. The announcement and programme is in the hands of the printer and will be mailed shortly, giving everything that the committee wish to say in regard to the event.

A very pleasant morning was spent by your correspondent last week visiting the greenhouses at Old Orchard, Mo., that are conducted by E. H. Michel. The place has undergone quite a change in character of stock grown since passing under its present management, as green stock is now grown to the exclusion of flowering plants, and a fine collection of palms and ferns in commercial sizes has been assembled. Latanias, Kentias and arecas predominate among the palms, while a specialty has been made of the nephrolepis among the ferns. Bostoniensis, exaltata and cordata compacta are the main varieties; handsome specimens of them can be seen in from 12-inch pans down. A large lot of Bostoniensis are being worked into 6 and 8-inch pans for fall trade and should prove profitable. Aspidistras are also grown in quantity, an importation of 10,000 leaves having been received and is starting to make its growth. Judging by the number of plants of salable aspidistras that are labeled sold, there will be very little of this season's stock on hand in the fall. Some minor changes are being made in the heating system, which, when finished, will make the houses an ideal home for this class of stock.

Carl Beyer, of Grand avenue and Gravois road, is building two new greenhouses. His specialty is plant trade, both Easter and Market plants. It is also reported that Gus Eggling expects to put up two additional houses before the season commences.

NEWPORT, R. L.-A large number of the gardeners and florists of Newport at-tended the funeral of John Milne on Thursday, June 30. The Newport Hor-ticultural Society was represented by James McLeish, Jr., Jas. G. Kyle and Harry Wesley, as pall bearers. There were many fine floral tributes. Mr. Milne was for many years head gardener in charge of the estate of Mrs. F. O. French.

PATTRSON, N. J.—The Paterson Florists' Club held a spirited meeting on June 22 and it was voted to call a special meeting of all the local florists for Tuesday evening, July 5, at which time a protest against farmer competition on market days and a petition for some form of protection against their methods will be presented to the Board of Aldermen.

According to the Gardeners' Chronicle one English grower sent to market 1,820,000 blooms of the double white narcissus in three weeks. One day's shipment was 248,256, weighing nearly three tons. How a cut of that extent here would make the Greeks smile.

Hydrangeas After Flowering.

ED. Am. FLORIST:-You will greatly oblige by kindly stating the proper way to treat hydrangeas in pots after flower-

They should be cut back to within two or three inches of the previous year's wood, shifted into pots a size larger, removing a portion of the old soil in the operation, and plunged in an open position outdoors when they have started into growth, housing the plants again in September or early in October.

MARYLAND HAS A TOUCH OF SUMMER WITH THE THERMOMETER BOILING OVER AND NO RAIN.—BUSINESS GOES DOWN AS THE MERCURY GOES UP .- PLANTING IS PRO-GRESSING.

Another rain has alleviated the drought, but earnations and outside plants generally will need more than a temporary help if they are to be in condition to fill the treasuries of the florists next winter.

The man who is prepared to water his planted out stock is to be envied this season, for the heat has already broken the records of the weather bureau by getting up to 104° last Saturday. It may be imagined what condition unwatered plants are in when there has only been two showers in six weeks, and then only enough to moisten the top of the earth. Well, the weeds don't grow, and no one can say there was not enough clear weather to do his glazing and repairing, so we may as well make the best of it.

There is beginning to be a shortness of some things apparent in the cut flower market and the only thing that prevents it developing into a famine is the shortness that is apparent in the demand as well. First-class stock is becoming harder and harder to seeure, owing in great measure, no doubt, to the number who are replanting their houses; still the stifling heat is responsible for a good deal of the small product that some greenhouses are putting forth.

Planting is going merrily along and from present indications there will be abundant material for the usual chrysanthemum glut in the fall. MACK.

Asters and California Violets.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-You will oblige by stating to what extent asters underglass require shade; also, whether it is proper to remove the runners of California violets from now on?

It is a decided mistake to shade glass under which asters are growing, for to give shade to these sun-loving plants is to defeat one of the main objects for which they are planted inside greenhouses, namely, to hasten the erop for cutting. Give them full sunlight, taking care not to allow them to suffer for the want of water, nor yet to give them more than is absolutely necessary, for that again would have a tendency to defer the semi-ripening process which the plant should go through under the artificial treatment to which they are subjected in order to gain time in their flowering. Another reason for growing them under glass is to circumvent the ravages of the black beetle, which is the bane of aster growers in many parts of the country, but in the words of Rudyard Kipling, that is another story.

Respecting the removal of runners from the California violet, it is always better to take them off, for in that way the energy of the plant is concentrated in the crown, from which we expect to gather the flowers next winter. E. D. L.

The Planting of Cemetery Lots.

Cemetery planting, when attempts are made to follow so far as possible the wishes of the individual lot owners and at the same time not violate the general olan of the cemetery, is an exceedingly difficult matter and is nearly always a failure, artistically at least. The difficulties are so great that most cemeteries have given it up as an impossibility and allowed the lot owner to practically go as he pleases, subject only to a few general rules. Some few have taken the matter entirely out of the hands of the lot owners and allow nothing except with a view to general effect and without regard to its relation to individual lots. The former method results in a crazy patchwork effect, while the latter is too apt to estrange the lot owner and destroy his active interest, removing any sense of personal responsibility on his part.

The American cemetery superintendents as a rule are extremely well posted and intelligent men, and without exception ready and willing at all times to give the lot owner contemplating improvements, the benefit of their knowledge and experience, and every one of them are anxious to have their cemeteries as a whole and each individual lot in the best possible condition. The ideal method of handling this perplexing question would be by friendly consultations between the lot owner and superintendent and in avoiding subjects which would be out of place, selecting only such as would enhance the general beauty of the grounds as well as each particular lot. There are some few lot owners in every cemetery who will do this, but they are in a small minority. The great majority fail to recognize their own absolute lack of knowledge, and, ignore the fact that a lifetime study of this class of work by an intelligent man entitles his opinion to careful consideration.

It may be said that by the establishment of rules the ignorant and obstinate lot owner may be forced to consult with and be guided by the superintendent. Unfortunately the courts do not look with favor on such rules. They fail to take into account the community of interests that exist in a cemetery, and that an unsightly piece of planting in one lot is as damaging to the adjoining lot as though it were planted on the latter. Their tendency in decisions, nearly always, is to guard jealously what they are pleased to term the property rights of a lot owner, and they will not uphold a rule which is not general in its effect. For instance, a rule prohibiting the planting of elm trees anywhere in a cemetery would be upheld, while a rule prohibiting their planting, except where the cemetery authorities eonsider advisable, would, if tested, probably not hold, the idea being that if one lot owner is allowed to do a certain thing, all must be given equal liberty. A talse sentiment is often responsible or exceedingly bad planting. The fact for exceedingly bad planting. that a deceased friend had an especial admiration for some variety of tree or shrub or flower will cause a lot owner to insist on planting it in quantity in the most unsuitable locations. Any protest on the part of the superintendent will cause him to be considered a hard hearted monster and bring forth as a response, "I have bought and paid for the lot and shall do as I please." The outside gardener is also responsible for much of the bad work done, sometimes through ignorence or carelessness, but more frequently, through deliberate disregard of everything except his wish to dispose of a quantity of his plants at a good price. Many who have fairly well-planned and well kept residence grounds, and hence feel themselves perfectly competent to superintend their own cemetery planting, fail miserably, through a lack of appreciation of the different conditions. The average cemetery lot is not over eighteen feet square, probably of a considerably less area, and this small plot has no fence and no background against which to mass groups. All planting is viewed from every direction instead of from one or two asin a majority of the residence lots.

The owner generally visits the place but a few times in a season, hence the care devolves upon the cemetery management, who are unable to give the minute attention to little things and the daily inspection and care which are naturally given on his home grounds, except at an expense entirely beyond the ability or inclination of the lot owner to pay. The cemetery lot has no protection from buildings and fences. Trellises, stakes and the like, as they soon decay and are not repaired or replaced by the average lot owner, are tabooed. These condi-tions, their lack of space, lack of background-lack of protection and, to a certain extent, lack of care, inability to use trellises and stakes, and more than all else, regard for the general appearance of the grounds and a decent respect for the rights of adjoining lot owners-forbid the use of a large proportion of the plants, shrubs and trees which are so beautiful under other and appropriate conditions.

The fortunate owner of a larger plot has a somewhat wider range for choice, but it is still limited. The most common mistake made is in planting too many things; next, in planting those which reach too great a size; then in planting those unsuited to the conditions of soil, sunshine or shade and moisture, careless or improper preparation of the ground and slovenly execution of the work, poor grouping and imperfect color combinations where flowers are used. #### Hardy Herbaceous Plants.

1h tract of a paper read before the Toronto Horticultural Society, by J. McPherson Ross.]

Herbaceous is a name commonly applied to all plants with perennial roots and As a general thing in the past hardy berbaccous plants have not received the attention they deserve, but I am glad to see that there is a growing interest now taken in them, particularly by the professional gardeners, who as a class have rather despised them. Perhaps this may be attributed to their easy growth, calling for no special care in their propagation or after cultivation. Leaving the profession out of the question, we might say that public indiffer-ence is largely due to pure and simple ignorance of their value; but the main reason may be better attributed to the common practice of indiscriminate plant. ing, to that hit or miss style which can be seen anywhere and everywhere with but very few exceptions. It is evident now that this indifference is passing away for mearly every floral publication issued recently contains reference of some kind about the beauty and value of hardy herbaccous plants. It is sometimes urged that there would be more of their planted if their flowering season were longer, that the majority of them last such a short time in bloom that to have many flowers would require very extensive collections to king up too much space in small yardens, and that, therefore, their general couples ment you dobe most sorted for extensive grounds or parks. There is very little in this argument. That we see them fade with regret and turn with zest to the season of flowering of the next favorite, forms, to my judgment, their chief claim to attention.

Then there is the foliage, so attractive in its varied forms and colors. I find also that the artistic delight in color is growing with the public so that there is a real source of enjoyment in the study of the endless scale of greens. At least one very elever gardener assured me that he took almost as much pleasure in comparing the varying shades of the foliage as he did in the flowers. I think, myself, that the renewed interest taken in herbaceous plants is partly owing to too much carpet bedding and ribbon planting with which we have been dosed so heavily during the past twenty years; and really, in many cases, artificial plants would answer just as well as natural ones in the formal arrangements where the individual characteristics of the flowers are lost and only the color effects shown. which could also be more easily and just as satisfactorily secured by painting the various forms on the sod with colored calcimine. We turn with relief to our herbaceous plants after this exhibition of floral fireworks. No other system is so effective in displaying the beauties of herbaceous plants as that of grouping each kind in masses without definite form. Always avoid circles, squares and rows, and by keeping this in mind when planting collections you will produce the effect of the plants growing and spreading natnrally. The various kinds can be cultivated just as conveniently by the commercial grower in irregular masses and systematically labeled and dug for packing and shipping in the selling season as if they were grown in straight rows. In this way they also are shown in the most attractive manner to a customer, and the most suggestive for his or her own plant-

A proper selection of the different species will give us flowers from earliest spring to latest fall, forming a constant source of pleasure and gratification to the grower, so that starting with the earliest flowering dwarf irises, pansies, forget-me-nots, the sprightly daisy, phlox subulata, the graceful racemes of the bleeding heart, and many others, we have nearly two months of flowers before it is safe to plant out such greenhouse stock as coleuses, geraniums, etc. Besides the renewed interest now shown in well known varieties of herbaceous plants, there is also a general awakening to the fact that many of our native wild flowers are exceedingly beautiful and descrying of a place in our gardens. The hardy trillium is eagerly sought after and brings high prices in Europe, also the dog's tooth violet, hepaticas, lady slippers and many other native plants that heretofore received but slight attention are now collected and grown with zeal and care. This popularizing of the neglected herbacoons plants will be productive of good. New varieties will be produced at a rapid rate, and as an example we may note the endless varieties of the columbine and proppy now in cultivation. We cannot yet estimate the value of herbaceous plants. In order to do this accurately we must consider their hardiness, the small amount of care required after planting, their adaptability to any situation, thriving in poor as well as rich soils, sandy or clay Then there is the question of expense, their low cost and permanence often rendering them preferable in comparison with our bedding plants which require renewal every season. In herba ceous plants we do not lack for contrasts in growth, for in size we find in the plants, from the dwarf phlox to the gigantic polygonums, every variety of color and form of bloom and foliage. In this assortment we find plants suitable for any location, small beds and borders in the contracted city lot as well as large plantations on big estates and public parks.

It would be impossible in the limits of this paper to fitly describe the beauties and characteristics of each plant, or even to mention without description the numerous varieties. The subject is entirely too large to be treated in one evening as there is an abundance of interesting matter to make a paper on herbaceous plants alone for every meeting of the society. The flowering season of these plants, in many cases, can be prolonged by cutting back the old flower stems, which will have the effect of throwing out new flower spikes later on. This is true notably of phlox and larkspurs. It is not necessary to mention soils most favorable for their growth, for as I said before, the majority of them will grow anywhere, though like everything else they rejoice in a rich clean soil and in all other good conditions of it. Nor have I much to say regarding their propagation, as they grow so freely from division that it is not necessary to go to the trouble of raising them from seeds. There is no special call for art or skill in their planting or proper disposition. In such a case the purchaser of plants would be required to learn the habit and nature of each so as to plant the creeping or dwarf growing plants in situations suitable for them; as for instance, the moneywort on rockeries, margins or borders, the moss pinks on hillocks, etc. The rule most generally followed in planting early flowering species and varieties is to put them in the most conspicuous point of observation, such as by the gateway or in the border by the pathway leading to the residence. This desire may be explained by stating that there is almost an anxiety on the part of everyone to show early flowers, and after the long dreary days of winter it is a positive pleasure to see the first flowers of spring. Tall growing plants are usually placed in the back of the border next the buildings, trees or fences or in the center of large groups, as the case may be. Where the grounds are large enough to permit it, the grouping of thirty or forty plants of one species together makes a fine effect; a large bed of paronies, for example, produces a very fine effect in themselves. A bed of holly-hocks with Bocconia cordata in the center, then a broad circle of pæonies, next irises or campanulas, then Achillea aurea or Spiræa filipendula, finished off with an edge of cerastium always commands admiration. Of course, other and better combinations may be made, but it is always best not to observe uniformity.

Worcester, Mass.

Business has finally reached the low summer mark and about all the storemen have to do is to keep cool and talk learnedly of how the war should be carried on. With the grower things are entirely different, for, stripped of superfluous clothing, he is repairing benches, planting roses, keeping down the everlasting weeds and doing the thousand and one things that the thrifty manfinds to do at this time.

Carnations have finally succumbed to the hot weather and are getting small and will soon be worth less than the water it takes to keep them alive. Roses are holding out well and we are getting good Kaiserins, Bridesmaids and Brides. Outside summer flowers are plentiful and useful to keep the store windows looking respectable.

The Horticultural Society's exhibition,
June 30, was one of the best and largest of the season, as more than 1300 vases were filled with the various flowers called for in the schedule, and there was not a poor vase in the hall

The display of cut flowers was up to the usual high standard, and the premiums were awarded to H. F. A. Lange, F. A. Blake and H. A. Jones in the order named. For hand bouquets, H. F. A. Lange, A. A. Hixon and Mrs. Thos. W. Ward were winners. There was a very fine display of Campanula Medium and first prize was awarded to F. A. Blake, second to E. A. Underwood and third to T. E. Fisher. The display of Dianthus barbatus was unusually large and fine. T. H. Bennett had a splendid exhibit and captured first, F. P. Alexander second and T. E. Fisher third. F. A. Blake was awarded first for foxglowes, T. E. Fisher second and W. G. Fobes third, and they made a splendid showing. The display of H. P. roses was almost equal to that of last week and Edward Hall took first, F. A. Blake second and Mrs. H. A. Jones third. The attendance was very large. Á. H. L.

OHIO FLORISTS ENJOY THE HOSPITALITY OF THEIR HOOSIER BRETHEREN AT THE MID-SUMMER MEETING AT RICHMOND .-A VISIT TO HILL & COMPANY'S FINE ESTAB-LISHMENT.

On July 2 President R. Witterstaetter, of the Cincinnati Florist's Club, and W. Murphy, Win. Mann, E. Forder, E. G. Gilbert, Geo. Bartlett and H. Schwarz, accompanied by their judicial friend, Theodore Bock, of Hamilton, were the guests of the Indiana State Florists' Association at its annual mid-summer meeting, held this year at Bichmond. meeting, held this year at Richmond.

The Buckeye party was met at the station by John Evans, of ventilator fame, whose silver cup the bowlers will strive for at Omaha, who escorted the delegation to the session, where President Witterstaetter arrived just in time to be presented with a finely upholstered rocking chair. S. Stuart, of Anderson, who acted as chairman of the meeting, made the presentation speech in happily chosen, well turned phrases and told the surprised Ohioan that the soft seat was but a token of the association's appreciation of his services as judge at the annual chrysanthemum shows, a position he has filled for the past three years. Mr. Wit-terstaetter responded feelingly and others of the visitors gave short talks of a felicitous nature.

At 1 o'clock, the business session having been very brief, the visitors were dined at the Wescott Hotel by the Richmond florists. Following the repast the party visited various points of interest, notable among them being the establishment of E. G. Hill & Co., where the range of houses would serve as the model for a perfect plant. Mr. Hill has 165,000 carnation plants in the field but he makes roses his specialty and 100,000 teas have just been potted up. One of his houses contains 36,000 Brides and Bridesmaids in fine condition. A house 25x175 is filled with Latania borbonica in 5-inch pots and growing splendidly.

H. M. EARL is inspecting the seed crops on the Pacific coast for W. A. Burpee & Co., of Philadelphia.

Ix the vicinity of Charlotte, Mich., there will be a shortage in the clover seed crop. The plants did not blossom.

SWEET PEAS are now being harvested in California. Present indications are that about half the list will be filled in full while the remainder will be from twenty-five to seventy-five percent short, averaging forty per cent.

ERFURT.-Writing under date of June 15, a correspondent refers as follows to German pansy seed prospects: "The continuous cold weather from March until May retarded the development of plants. The few warm rains lately experienced started a better growth, but even with this advantage the new crop of seeds will not be ready before July 20. Up to date only one picking has been made, with small results."

The Harrisii Lily Disease.

We are informed on excellent authority that the British government has sent a Kew man to Bermuda to investigate the Harrisii lily disease, and if possible to take such steps as will insure its eradica-This expert is of the opinion that tion the mite or insect, to the presence of which the disease is due, thrives in any land that is over fertilized with chemical manures, and is not peculiar to Bermuda or the Harrisii lily. The real trouble, he claims, lies in the fact that the stockitself is weakened in vitality. The bulbs in the past have been forced to such an extent by the aid of chemical fertilizers that the scales employed for propagation are unable to produce healthy bulbs. New stock from another source, Holland, for example, it is stated, would prove sufficiently bulbs. ciently robust to successfully resist the attacks of this pest.

The Dutch Bulb Outlook.

The Holland houses report, June 24, quite unfavorably on this season's crop. They say this is especially the case with all hyacinths, and intimate that it will be almost impossible to supply the usual amount of stock in regular sizes when the time comes to execute the orders of the present season. They do not state, however, whether the prices at which they have taken early orders will be reduced to correspond with the sizes which they will be ofdiged to deliver. A few articles are said to have done well, such as crocuses, scillas and narcissi in general, although double Von Sions have not done quite so well as other narcissi. The cause of the damage to the hyacinth crop is attributed to the severe frosts in Febru ary and March and the continued unfavorable weather following. The leaf growth died off at least three weeks, too early and at the very time when the bulbs should swell and increase in size. The tulip crop, while not so unfavorably influenced will as compared with that of hypeinths, be far better

The business conducted under the above firm name was originated by the undersigned, who was also responsible for the capital and credit of the concern. In addition the said undersigned supplied all the advertising matter, compiled the various catalogues, made all purchases and was sole manager of above business in its entirety.

The position of C. H. Lippincott in said business was purely of a clerical character, and for family reasons and the use of her name she was given a one-half interest in the same. Some two or three months ago it was agreed between us that we dissolve partnership, but up to the present date no such dissolution has been effected, the said C. H. Lippincott refusing to accept a "give or take" proposition. From the notice to which reference has already been made it would appear that she does not wish to settle the matter amicably, but would compel the subscriber to place the business in the hands of a receiver for adjustment.

The undersigned therefore begs to notify the trade and public generally that he shall not be responsible for any contracts made by C. H. Lippincott after this date.

There were present thirteen from Indianapolis, two from Anderson, one from Kokomo, seven from Cincinnati and one from Hamilton.

The business session was short and nothing of importance was put upon the minutes. The matter of the annual chrysanthenum show was deferred to the September meeting, although it was virtually decided to hold another exhibi-

A fine chair was presented to President R. Witterstactter, of the Cincinnati Florists' Club, as a mark of appreciation of his services as judge at the previous Indianapolis shows. KENTUCKY FLORISTS HAVE FOUND PROS-PERITY .- OPTIMISTIC VIEWS FROM THE BLUE GRASS REGION. - MUCH BUILDING IN SIGHT.-A GOOD SPRING PRESAGES AN EVEN BETTER WINTER.

The "hard times" song with its dispirited accompaniments is no longer sung in Kentucky. Instead you hear the buzz of the saw and the clang of the hammer, sounds indicative of a general revival of activity among the florists. I say "general" because there is scarcely a florist in the city but is making some improve-ments about his store or greenhouses. Jacob Schultz, the dean of the florists, has in course of erection two additional houses, one intended for miscellaneous stock will cover 32x152, and the other one, for violets, 12x140. It is needless to add that the houses are being built in the best possible way and will prove a creditable addition to his already extensive plant. Mr Schultz reports an unusually good spring trade and it is his opinion that the coming season will keep us all hustling. Mr. Schultz, by the by, is one of the staunchest conservatives in the trade.

J. E. Marret does things well while about them. Five additional houses are now being pushed to completion. The best up-to-date methods are being employed and when completed Mr. Marret's establishment will be one of the finest of the kind in the south.

Geo. Schultz, the Goss avenue florist, will soon commence building an additional house of 20x104. As usual, George's place is a model of neatness, everything about his establishment looking spick and span, and his stock being in the best of condition.

Joseph Coenen & Co. are building three additional houses for roses and carnations. A fall from a roof has kept Mr. Coenen's partner confined to his bed for the past six weeks. It is the more unfortunate because Mr. Coenen himself has barely recovered from a similar mishap.

Chas. W. Reimers, of palm and American Beauty fame, will this summer enlarge his already extensive place by one more house. Mr. Reimers has no kick coming, his trade being on the increase while the outlook, in his opinion, is decidedly encouraging. Florist Kunzman will add one more house to his plant and has recently opened a flower store at 806 West Jefferson street.

There is something inviting about the establishment of Wm. Mann, the calla lily king. There is no chaotic, topsy-turvy state of affairs here; busy or not busy, neatness and order obtain everywhere. Mr. Mann is a very successful, all around grower, and his flowers never go a begging.

E. G. Reimers, if the runtor be true, was born under a lucky star. While many are complaining about palm seed being a failure this year, his came up in fine shape and his houses are literally packed with thrifty looking seedlings. Business has been time with him all along the line.

S | Thompson and his staff of able assistants were kept quite busy on funeral work during the past week. Mr. Thompson's flower store keeps pace with the times, that is, it has been equipped with all the modern improvements such as a tine show window, incandescent lights, and a commodious ice-box. Business, says I red Haupt, has been unusually brisk with him all along Accompanied by Mrs. Haupt and little daughter, he will shortly leave for a month's sojourn in a Michigan summer resort.

Pittsburg.

PROBABILITIES OF A LARGE PARTY FOR THE TRIP TO OMAHA. BUILDING INDI-CATES PROSPERITY .- J. F. GIBBS SELLS HIS FIFTH AVENUE ESTABLISHMENT.-MRS. KLOPFER'S NEW STORE, -SMOKY CITY NOTES.

There is no change for the better in trade to report. For the past week everything has been quiet, and the only demand has been for funeral work, and that not to excess.

A few of the florists are endeavoring to work up interest in the S. A. F. convention and are busy trying to secure a lower rate of railroad fare to Omaha, also trying to have the florists in western Pennsylvania go with the Pittsburg elub, and are meeting with fair success.

Gustave Ludwig has received a letter from Messrs. W. T. and F. P. Butz, New Castle, Pa., stating they will be too busy to attend the convention, as they will be putting up two new rose houses, each 20x125, and this with their other repairs will prevent their leaving home. M. I. O'Brien, Sharon, Pa., also informs Mr. Ludwig that he will have to forego the pleasure of being with the Pittsburg contingent at Omaha, as he will put up over 5,000 feet of glass this season, and must be at home when the houses are being erected.

L. F. Gibbs, of Woodville, has disposed his Fifth avenue establishment to E. Poland, and will hereafter give his personal attention to his extensive plant at Woodville. Mr. Poland has been for the past nine years in charge of the greenhouses at Morganza, the State Reformatory of western Pennsylvania, and is thoroughly equipped to make a success with his new venture. It is not definitely settled yet whether Mr. James Dell, who has been with Mr. Gibbs at Fifth avenue, will continue with Mr. Poland or not, but the probabilities are that he will do so.

Mrs. S. Klopfer has recently opened a cut flower store at 220 Ohio street, Allegheny City, under the firm name of The American Florist and Decorator. This is the first flower store started in that part of Allegheny, and Mrs. Klopfer believes, judging by the business already secured, that she will succeed in working up a good, healthy trade.
Lincoln 1, Neff has returned from an eastern business and pleasure trip, and says he is now ready for all the business he can get. The trip evidently agreed with him.

O. A. C. Oemhler, formerly of Pitts-burg, but now with Mr. Gasser, of Cleveland, with his family, spent the Fourth with his relatives here, returning on Tues day morning. Mr. Demhler is very well pleased with Cleveland and the business Rega.

Abyssinian Banana.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-I have an Abyssinian banana which stands about twelve feet high, but cannot make it bear. Can you suggest such a course of treatment as will enable me to make it fruit?

P. N. H.

The Abyssinian banana, Musa ensete, is cultivated solely for the beauty of its foliage and not for its fruit, which is dry and not eatable as it contains only a few hard seeds which seldom ripen in this country even on old and large plants grown in palm houses or large conservatories where they may attain a height of twenty or more feet. If "P. N. H." has accommodations to keep his plant growing it will, in time, show a fruiting condition but its beauty will be at an end; the stem will soon decay and the plant die.

American Seed Growing. SELECTION OF PLANTS FOR SEED BREEDING.

Every living organism has a character distinct in a greater or less degree from that of every other. This individuality is the outcome and expression of the balanced sum of the influences it has inherited from its ancestors, plus that of its environment, but in different individuals the influence of a common ancestor is not necessarily of the same numerical value in the making up of the sum of influence; it is rather as if the influence of each ancestor was represented by a digit and the sum of influence was expressed by these digits written in an order which varied in each case, the individual character depending upon the relative potency of the influences which go to make it up.

Of a lot of pigs or puppies born of the same parents and in the same litter one may be like the father, one like the mother another like some ancestor several generations back, and still another be a curious blending of the characteristics of the other three; again two of them may be so alike in appearance that they cannot easily be distinguished, but while all the prog-eny of one may be like itself, those of the other may bear little resemblance to their sire or to each other. This same law, or seeming lack of law, in hereditary influence which is so easily seen in animals exists just as truly in plants, though it is not so easily traced. Of eight peasfrom the same pod four may produce plants practically identical with the one on which the seed grew, while each of the others produce plants very unlike those from the first four, or each other, and of these all the seed of one may give plants like itself while that from the others produce plants of endless variety of form and color.

This varying degree of power which every living organism has to impress its characteristics on one or all of its descendents is correlated with life itself and is a part of its mystery; we do not understand it, nor the laws which govern it, we may never be able to, but we can and should recognize the fact of its existance and use it to our advantage. ability to reproduce itself is a quality which we cannot discern by our senses even if we bring to their aid the most powerful of microscopes or the most delicate chemical tests, it is just as much a characteristic as is color or form and is of the utmost importance in securing uniformity of product.

That prepotency can be fixed so as to become a characteristic of a strain of seed is certain. How it can be done may be best shown by an illustration. In the case of the successful breeding of a certain variety of corn which was referred to in a previous article the seed breeder went into the field with a carefully prepared description of just what in every particular an ideal plant of the variety should be and how much variation from that ideal would be permissible in a breeding plant. He selected the ten plants which came the nearest to his description, and the seed of each was saved and the next spring planted separately, but in contiguous blocks. In the fall each lot was carefully examined plant by plant to ascertain in which one of them the largest proportion of the plants were within the prescribed limit of variation and from that lot the breeding plants for the next year were selected and this selection of breeders from the lot which furnished the most uniformly good product was continued from year to year. Generally, he could make a selection of better plants from all the blocks than could be found in the chosen one, and often a better ten could be found in a block where a smaller proportion of the plants were of the desired type, but the breeding was rigidly held to the line which showed by its uniformity that it had the greatest prepotency and in this way a wonderfully uniform stock was developed.

In the fourth or fifth year of this selection one lot showed a very remarkable ability to resist drought. The plants were fairly true to type and this new quality was so desirable that the seed breeder was tempted to save his breeders from that lot but resisted it and saved them according to rule, but he also saved the ten best plants from the new departure and planted the seed in a lot by itself. The result was that only a very few of the plants showed the drought resisting quality so noticeable the year before and all of the ten blocks varied more and had a smaller proportion of plants true to type then had any single lot since the first year. Had he yielded to the temptation to improve his type and taken his breeding stock from this lot he would have lost the good of four years selection. less by selecting the best plants from the lot which furnished the most drought resisting plants and continuing such selections for several years a new and valuable variety might have been established but, as we have said, the most important work of the seed breeder is the development of a stock which will come true to type rather than the production of a new sort, no matter how desirable, of which only a small proportion will come true. A long experience in seed growing convinces me that the formation of a clear and well defined idea of just what a plant of any variety should be, a rigid adherence to just that type in selection, and breeding only from those plants which show a strong tendency to reproduce themselves is the only way to produce seed of the greatest value.

INTERIORITY OF TYPE.

Mr. Tracy's articles on seed growing and plant breeding are extremely interesting, pointed and valuable. Personally I know very little about seed growing, and my observations on plant breeding are mostly from the work of other men. But the man who grows plants of any kind and pays close attention to the way in which they develop is bound to draw some rather positive, and, I believe, fairly accurate conclusions as to how they are bred.

Now there are two things for which the seed grower and plant breeder may strive-new forms and purity of old forms. In other words he may originate new varieties, or he may fix them after they are originated. I say he may fix them, for unfortunately he does not often do that. While there is a very laudable and effective activity in this country in the production of new varieties, there seems to be an unfortunate insufficiency of effort in fixing good types, especially the more highly bred and persistently variable forms. It thus occurs that while we have an abundance of new varieties which, when true to type, are very satisfactory and very creditable to the originators, a very large number of them are so variable and unstable that they can not be depended on, especially when they fall into unskillful hands or receive indifferent cultivation. They do not hold to their tancy characters, but break up and revert to several very inferior types.

To be sure there is in this no moral misdemeanor on the part of the seed grower. It is merely a question of business. The seed buyers seem willing to pay a great deal more for new varieties than for well fixed varieties, and as the former require less work in their production, no one can blame the plant breeder for working merely for new types. But seed buyers make a very serious mistake in taking this attitude. Take muskmelons for example. A grower is much better off to grow a well fixed strain of Hackensack or Jenny Lind than to spend his time on some much fancier variety which, however, shows only fifty to sixty per cent of the highly bred type, with forty to fifty per cent of mediocre, ur-uniform reversions. The same thing is true of sweet peas, asters, zinnias and all flowering plants where the production of new varieties has come to be a commercial object. The grower will always get more satisfaction out of a good variety which runs uniformly true to type than he will out of fancier but unfixed varie

The fact is the seed buying public in America has not yet de ided to pay the price for seeds true to type. Even after they shall have progressed so far it will be necessary still to determine what are proper types of standard old and new varieties, and then to by these types by years of careful selection as described by Mr. Tracy - Here is an example of preont conditions we have been growing this year the variety of Lobb's mastrictium known as Asa Gray. We have a from two leading American seed our. One describes it as "pide sulphur veltoes very delicate, the other as "crea white, blotched suphur marroon." He are expressed two widely different ide ed what Valories maximizing oughers. he that the plants dossemed has lots were equally mixed with five or six separate forms, some cream white, others showing a distinct tinge of buttercup yellow, others blotched with a very light searlet, etc. I have no doubt that the cream white is the proper type for Asa Gray, but not more than one-fourth of our plants show that color, and one of the seed dealers did not even think that to be the type.

What I started out to say more briefly is just this: It seems to me that we could better spend a greater proportion of effort in fixing the varieties which we now have, and give a little less to the production of new ones.

FIXING VARIETIES.
The papers on "Seed Growing in America" by Prof. Tracy, of Detroit, have given me much pleasure and profit in the reading. I am unable to speak from personal experience upon the vegetable side of the subject, although I have had some opportunity of looking into the methods employed in the seed pea growing territory of Canada. Herethetrade amounted to nearly $200,000 annually till the Me-Kinley tariff shut off the American market to a large extent. A number of new varieties of peas have originated in this locality and there are a few in process of development, in other words, being

It seems to me that one of the weak points in connection with variety making in vegetables is that the variety is placed on the market before the type is fixed, in the hurry of the producer to get to the front. This defect in American seed growing is no doubt also due, as pointed out by Prof. Tracy, to the lack of a clear conception of the ideal type. In some of the newer varieties of beets and cabbages it is not difficult to select half a dozen types from a row thirty feet long. The process of selection has not been carried on long enough and too little regard has been paid to the characteristics of the ideal. As a rule the seed grower depends upon sports or variants for his working stock. In selecting after this method the mental picture—as it very often is—may change slightly from year to year; and there is less chance for wide comparison at the beginning, than there is if crossed seeds are sown. In the case of spring wheat I have watched the behavior of a number of crosses between Ladoga and Red Fife, the former an early Russian variety, and have seen a fixed type intermediate in time of ripening produced in eight years by rigid selection. When a bearded wheat was used as the female and a beardless variety as the male, the larger proportion of the first progeny were bearded, thus following the older and more stable type. In the second sowings, as might be expected, both types sport freely, and the work of fixation is in consequence comparatively slow.

As Prof. Tracy says, in substance, the more difference in the parents the greater the number of types will be produced in the progeny and the slower will be the work of selection. For this reason proportionately fewer beneficial results have flowed from violent crosses than have attended experiments carried on within narrower confines. It is true that in fruits the California wizard, Burbank, has obtained wonderful results from hybridization; but this is probably due to the marvellously extended range of his operations.

Codonopsis Clematidea.

It is surprising that this deserving plant has not found its way long ago into collections of hardy plants. It is very rarely mentioned in catalogues and little has ever been said about its unquestionable value as a border plant. Like the Walilenbergias, it has a thick, fleshy root, from which the eyes start out in the spring. Young plants do not grow very strong for a year or two; they remain dwarfand decumbent, though they bloom persistently even when small; but when once well established the growth is much more robust, the stems being able to support themselves in a more upright position, and more of them are produced from each root. The leaves are very neat, oval oblong, of a glaucous green, about an inch long and rather closely arranged along the stem. The flowers are produced on the tips of the many slender axillary branches for a long time in midsummer, and resemble those of an ordinary drooping campanula; they are about an inch long and measure about the same across the open part. The color is white, slightly tinged with pale blue, and the bells have a distinct, well defined, star-shaped black-ish purple blotch on the inner side at the base of the stout pistil. Along the stronger growth of the older plants, two feet or over in height, the side branches are produced freely, almost at every joint from the ground up to the very tip, and each branch or branchlet is adorned with the dainty bells, which, on their slender support, keep in a constant motion in the slightest breeze. Division is the best way to increase the stock, but seed sowing may be resorted to if it is obtainable, though it takes a number of years for the seedlings to develop into strong speci-mens, while division usually gives quicker and more satisfactory results. As to the hardiness of the plant, I may say that we never lost one from the effects of frost. Even in snowless winters, with some of the carelessly planted crowns fully exposed to the action of the weather, we could not notice the slightest injury, but it would not hurt them to receive a liberal covering of manure every winter, this material to be forked in between the plants when spring arrives. It delights in rich soil and the growth is stronger there, though we have no trouble and can make it live and flourish even in dry ground by merely taking the precaution to plant a little deeper. An irregular patch in the border, planted among early flowering bulbs, makes quite an acceptable display in summer, and the plants hide the yellow or decaying foliage of their companions effectively, without interfering with the spring show, for they start rather late.

The Japanese Iris.

These beautiful flowers are now attracting considerable attention and will undoubtedly be largely planted for outdoor decoration. While not new the beauties of the Kæmpferi types are not known as their very showy and exquisitely lovely blossoms demand they should be. They seem to require no special culture, growing and flowering profusely along with other lawn and garden plants. For cut flower decorations they are very effective tor a short time, but their period of usefulness closes with the day as the individual blossom lasts only till sundown. K.

Chrysanthemum Notes.

One of the most important things in caring for the chrysanthemum at this season is to keep them free of black aphis and greenfly. The hot weather we are having now making it impossible to fumigate, we have to resort to spraying with tobaccoextract which we find, when used with a little judgment and more as a preventive than as a cure, to do the work well. We use about a wine glass full of the extract in an ordinary bucket full of warm water, allowing it to stand for a few hours before applying with a sprayer late in the afternoon after the

Some varieties are more difficult than others to rid of insects and once the pests get a good foothold it is a hard matter to dislodge them. We have found Major Bonnaffon to be particularly subto greenfly, which seems to thrive well on the young, curly foliage, the formation being such that the insects are sometimes not noticed unless the plants are examined closely. Grasshoppers are beginning to get troublesome and the only thing to do is to catch and kill them the same as with catterpillars which, if not looked after, will spoil the foliage of a plant in very little time.

Specimen plants should be given every encouragement to keep them growing healthfully. Ample syringing two or three times a day is what they delight in, and see that they never want for water. It is time to stop pinching back specimens of the late varieties or they will not be ready for show time. Early varieties can go one or two weeks longer.

Now that the specimens are in their flowering pots they should have a few stakes to spread upon and to protect the branches. Young stock intended for single stemmed pot plants should be removed from the sand as soon as rooted and shaded for a few days, after which they should be placed as near the glass as is practicable, as they need all the light possible and plenty of ventilation. They should be shifted as quickly as they require it so as to give them ample time to become well rooted in their flowering pots before the time comes for them to set their buds. This will enable them to stand feeding better and hence give more pleasing results. C. W. Johnson.

ter flowering. The stems are stout, erect and from one to three feet high, with leaves dark green, tinged reddish beneath and from six to eight inches in width. Flowers pale pink and one and a half inches broad.

Plants two years old are best for decorative purposes, as they then send out numerous flowering shoots from such portions of the previous year's stems as have been retained. Older plants are not reliable. In propagating I prefer to take the cuttings in spring, if they are obtainable. These will make nice specimens the following spring. Usually, however, it is impossible to procure good material for cuttings until the old plants are cut down later in the year, and when started so late they seldom make fully developed specimens before the second year.

For this and most other winter-flowering begonias I use a rather coarse compost made up of good loam, leaf mold, cow manure and sand, two parts loam to one part each of the other constituents, with the addition of a small quantity of charcoal. Good drainage is very necessary, and during the winter months the plants should be kept in a temperature of 60. Robert Shore.

Carnations.

A drought extending over something like eight weeks gives us an opportunity to learn a few lessons from the field. The first of these is to plant the carnations early enough in the spring to get the benefit of the spring rains in starting. Carnations planted in this section during April and the early part of May are now April and the early part of May are now fairly good sized plants and give promise of making fine stock by fall. Of the stock planted after May 10, tully one-half is now dead and the other half in such shape that even with the best sort of a season from now on they can not make plants such as a good grower should have for his houses by September 1. Another thing brought home with a good deal of force by a protracted drought is the advantage derived from having the plants free from insects when they are transferred to the field. There is nothing like a prolonged period of dry weather for the increase of all sorts of insect pests, and the plants have a hard enough struggle against the drought without having to battle for life with all manner of vermin. And yet the dry spell has its redeeming feature in the elimination of rust and spot where the plants are affected. It even seems to almost eradicate bacteria, but not so completely as the other two diseases. Rust is practically destroyed by dry, hot weather; between the sun, wind and the radiation of heat from the surface of the ground, it quietly takes its departure. Just why this should be so remains unsolved, as under practically the same conditions inside the houses, and at the time it is leaving the plants outside, this disease spreads on the indoor stock. That it does leave the plants in the field is not the supposition of a season but an actual fact of three years' careful observation,

Perhaps the most notable lesson to be learned from the field is the difference between cuttings grown under different conditions before planting them out. A cutting taken from a plant that has been forced to its utmost limit to produce fine flowers-this forcing consisting of an increase of temperature or the applica-tion of all the manure the plant can stand, either dry or liquid—will, during a drought, throw out curled and deformed shoots, the lower leaves of which turn vellow and eventually drop off, giving the plant a miserable appearance, as well as seriously affecting its product of bloom the following winter. A cutting propagated from a plant that is just right for a parent in all particulars and planted in soil too heavily fertilized, so as to present a fine appearance when sold, will go the same way if it strikes a drought during the summer. The cutting taken from a plant grown in a rather cool temperature and in soil only moderately rich, and after it is rooted allowed to grow with-out any undue forcing, either by heat or extra manure, is the cutting that will stand the drought and bein shape to give you results next winter. Its growth will be clean and healthy from root to tip, and when the rain does come it is ready to go ahead without having a lot of diseased and crippled parts to doctor up.

There is only one conclusion to be derived from this, viz., that the growing of cuttings and the growing of fine flowers are two separate and distinct branches of earnation culture. One may get along by trying to do both, but when separated, the result will be found in greater prog-ress, and the day is not far distant when the successful grower would as soon think of taking cuttings from his flowering stock as from a plant filled with rust, bacteria and spot. Other lessons can be learned from the field if we use our eyes and judgment. If we do not love our carnations well enough to watch them in the summer as well as in the winter, we do not deserve success, and the sooner we get into some other business the better it will be for ourselves and the earna-ALBERT M. #### For Dinners and Weddings.

The accompanying illustrations show the decorative abilities of Ella Grant Wilson, "Floral Artist," of Cleveland, Ohio. The Century Club is Cleveland's leading social organization and the Palm Garden, or dining room, is upon the fif-teenth floor of a business block, commanding a magnificent view of Lake The large room is so divided by arches heavily draped, as shown in the picture, that a number of sequestered nooks are the result. The arches are all covered with prepared ground pine, which will retain its color and shape for an entire season. In a number of places where it was impracticable to employ living plants prepared palms were used, but in all the numerous vases are fine genuine specimens of latanias; dracenas. arecas and Cycas revoluta, two very large vases containing excellent variegated century plants. Several of the semi-private corners are made destinctive by decorations of a particular flower. Crimson Ramblers being employed in one. nasturtiums in another, and so on.

An octagonal bay window formed the base of operations for the wedding decoration shown in the second illustration. The ceiling is heavily festooned with asparagus with a back-ground of fluted asparagus with a back-ground of nuted pink cheese cloth. Standards in each corner, draped with white satin, support flat baskets of Bride roses and asparagus grown on trellises, palms and ferns fill in the base. The mantle is also decorated with the same plants and in the center of the bay swings the inevitable wedding bell, except that in this instance it is a chime of three bells of white roses entwined with a garland of Brides and a lover's knot of white ribbon. A shower wreath is pendant from the chandelier. This excellent decoration, and it was of equal luxuriance in the dining room, was merely for the wedding reception, the church decorations having been even more elaborate. A bank of tall palms and tree ferns filled the entire pulpit platform to a height of nearly twenty feet and four arches of white roses and smilax formed the bower in which the ceremony was performed.

LIGHT BUSINESS AND SLOW COLLECTIONS.

EXCURSION.

Very light receipts and no buyers is the record of the wholesale marts at present. In the retail stores an unbroken stillness prevails, and the few who have not gone away for a brief recreation find time heavy on their hands. The selling of flowers is a secondary consideration with the wholesalers; collecting overdue accounts is a more important duty. Judging by what one hears in wholesale circles the credit business is rather overdone here. The New York Cut Flower Co. has taken the initiative in limiting the amount of credit which customers may enjoy, and in following up collections closely. It would be a most sensible move if the wholesalers of 28th street and other localities were to follow this good example and adopt a policy that would ensure prompter settlements. Long credits are the worst feature of the flower trade to-day.

W. A. Manda has just received news that a verdict in his favor has been rendered against Ludwig Moller, editor of the Garten Zeitung, of Erfurt, Germany, for certain alleged libelous statements that were published in that journal at the time of opening of the Hamburg exhibition. The sentence imposed was a fine and imprisonment in addition to 1000 marks damages and a retraction of the offensive allegations.

Fleischman has opened a down-town branch in the Arcade, 71 Broadway, corner of Rector street. This establishment is fitted up on a scale worthy of the high class office trade which is its objective point.

The popular Leslie's Weekly for July 7, contains a picture of Willie Tiflany in a photograph of Troop K, Roosevelt's Rough Riders. The picture was taken before Santiago.

Bogart's employees had their annual fishing exertsion on July 14. A big crowd participated, and all enjoyed themselves. The steamer Isabelle never carried a happier party.

A SCARCITY OF ROSES AND OF ORDERS.—
TRADE CONDITIONS.— FLORISTS' CLUB MAKES ITS FIRST SUMMER EXPEDITION.—
NEXT TRIP TO BE TO REINBERG BROTHERS' PLACE.—NOTES AND COMMENTS.

There are still two great scarcities in the market—scarcity of roses and scarcity of orders. A few roses are being cut from young plants. Brides and Bridesmaids are small and short-stemmed. Meteors, though small, are of very good color. Beauties from young stock are improving in quality. Carnations are coming in freely from outside grown plants; the crop of colored ones is shortening somewhat, but there are still plenty for the demand. Sweet peas are in profusion, and good ones sell at from 4 cents to 8 cents per hundred.

The Florists' Club visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hilmers at Blue Island last Sunday, and one of the largest crowds which the club has ever turned out for a similar excursion responded to the call for this, the first pleasure trip of the season. There was an unusually large number of ladies present. About an hour and a half was devoted to the inspec-tion of Mr. Hilmers' houses, in which the visitors found little to criticise, but much to praise. The Hilmers brothers grow a wide variety of stock, shrubbery, trees, very fine Hydrangea grandiflora for cut flowers, herbaceous plants, irises, perennials, Coreopsis lanceolata, delphiniums, centaurea and all the marketable roses, etc. Several of the rose houses had just been replanted, but there are two houses of Brides and Bridesmaids in which the last year's plants are in fine condition and producing excellent blooms. Later in the afternoon an exceptionally tempting lunch was served upon the lawn. After Edgar Sanders had, on behalf of the club, thanked the host and hostess for the entertainment, carriages were taken for a trip to the establishment of Heim Bros., half a mile away, where many things were found to repay the party for the trip.

The next onting will be to the establishment of Reinberg Bros., the largest place of its kind in the country, on July 24. The party will take the Northwestern train at 1 p. m., arriving at Summerdale at 1:20. The Reinbergs will make this an occasion well worth every member's participation.

The Messrs. Freidman & Allen have withdrawn their suit for $200 against the millionaire managers of the great horse show, the wealthy gentlemen in question agreeing to pay $25 and the plaintiff's costs and attorney fees. The flowers over which the dispute arose were used to decorate the stalls of Joe Patchen and Star Pointer.

The retail florists have followed the lead of the wholesalers, the down-town dealers having agreed to close their stores at 6 o'clock each evening until September 5.

E. Hobbs, the well-known Indiana avenue retailer, left Thursday for a two months' visit with his mother at Bristol, England. Mr. Hobbs has been in the business here for nearly twenty-five years.

Ed. Winterson has concluded that, with the present retail trade conditions, he can find all the rest he wants at his store, and has returned from his Wisconsin cycling trip, leaving C. S. Stewart to continue his outing

S. S. PENNOCK VISITS CARNATION GROWERS.

—NEW BEAUTIES IN SIGHT.—WALKER

—EUROPEAN TRAVELERS.—NOTES.

S. S. Pennock has just returned from a trip in the carnation belt of Chester county, and through a part of Lancaster county where there are a number of cultivators of the flower. He reports the growers in good spirits and apparently well pleased with the business of the past season; in fact the feeling is better now than a year ago. Considerable additions are being made in many places and not a few new establishments are being built. Mushrooms and tomatoes are being grown quite successfully by many as a side crop in the same house with carnations.

American Beauties from houses planted for summer cutting will be ready about the first of August and will prove a welcome addition to the very poor assortment now to be seen in the refrigerators of the storekeepers of the storekeepers.

John Walker is learning to ride the "bike" and has his hands full these evenings. He ran into an organ grinder and his monkey one evening last week and there was a lively time for awhile.

Joseph Heacock says he finished planting two weeks earlier this year than last, commencing at the same date, and did the work with two less men. He attributes this quick work to the use of the shading cloth on the outside of the houses which were being operated in and says it has proved to be a labor saver as well as a great comfort to his men, who generally considered this the hardest and most exhausting job of the year.

The story in last week's Florist of the Graveyard brand of the Bermuda lily, reminds us of an incident in the first shipment of the bulbs to this country. Jos. Kift, Jr., was the first commercial florist to discover the home of the lily and in endeavoring to secure the bulbs he had a varied experience. The liles did not grow wild and were only to be found in private gardens whose owners were loth to part with them. In order to increase his stock he offered to buy at a certain price all the bulbs brought to him and some of the idle darkies took advantage of the offer. Soon some one discovered that the bishop's lot in the cemetery had been vis ited and that baskets of the lilies had been carried away. Mr. Kift was arrested for the theft but soon proved his innocence. However, he was very careful of his after purchases.

Chas. Sims sailed for Europe by the steamship Etruria for a six week's sojourn. mostly in Scotland Mrs. Abram Knowles and family went abroad by the steamer Waesland, sailing from this city July 9. They expect to be gone about three months, spending most of their time in England.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Craig and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. K. Harris have been spending a few days at Asbury Park. Harris says he can be counted on for Omaha if his health will permit him to make the trip, and those western bowlers must not forget his 240 point game at St. Louis. It was the high score of the tournament.

ROSES ARE POOR,—CARNATIONS ABUNDANT AND LITTLE DOING .- SATURDAY EXHIBI-TION OF HOLLYHOCKS. - DEATH OF PHILIP WIELAND. BRIEF NOTES.

Many rose growers have thrown out their stock and have begun replanting. This reduces the quantity of flowers on the market considerably, and of the stock left little can be said in approval, for much of it is about as rubbishy as it can be. If one wanted any number of really first class roses he would find great difficulty in locating them. There are but few such calls, however, and the supply, such as it is, mostly finds its way into the hands of the street fakirs, who manage to get something out of it, a feat which would be impossible with a store florist. Carnations are still in supply much too heavy for the call. They are good for the season and the weather, but bring very little in the market, as there is practically nothing going on. Auratum lilies, irises, gladioli and other outdoor flowers are abundant. Lily of the valley finds a very poor market at present, and this is also true of pink pond lilies.

Saturday, July 9, was hollyhock day at Horticultural Hall, but hollyhocks might as well be dropped, it seems, from the schedule. A few years ago the displays were superb; we can raise them no more until some one discovers a way to master the hollyhock disease. The show of wild flowers was good, although Mrs. P. D. Richards, who has for so many years held foremost place in this department, was absent owing to the sudden death of her husband. Next saturday hydrangeas, gloxinias and achimenes in plants and tuberous begonias, aquatic flowers and hardy ferus, cut, are on the schedule. Saturday, July 23, will be sweet pen day, and a fine display is looked for.

Philip Wieland died at his home in Dedham on July 8, aged 65 years. Mr. Wieland was engaged in the retail florist trade in Cambridge formerly, but for the past twelve years has been employed in the Boston and Metropolitan park departments, most of the time on the Back Bay Lens and Charles River embant. ments, where his thorough training, obrained in Germans, in all departments of horticultural made him a very valuable man. COOLER WEATHER FAILS TO REJUVENATE TRADE.—PICNIC COMMITTEES.—RUMORS OF NEW WHOLESALE HOUSES.—THE SEA-SON OF SUMMER PILGRIMAGES.

A most welcome fall in the temperature accompanied by cool north winds has been the special feature of the past week. It has not, however, had any effect on trade, everything being very quiet. Good stock does not exist hereabouts, and it is hard filling orders for critical customers with what is on hand. About the only thing that can be turned out in presentable condition is funeral work, and that is not as plentiful as it has been.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club is expected to be well attended as nominations of officers for the coming year are in order and final details for our annual picnic will be announced, for which comprenic will be announced, for which committees have been appointed as follows:

Rumors are thick in regard to wholesale houses that are to be open here this tall. So far, however, no positive information can be obtained in regard to any of them, although there seems to be an opening for another first-class wholesale florist and supply house.

The last pilgrim to leave town is Wm. Hucke, who has closed his store on South Grand avenue for the summer and is making a tour of the lakes. He will reopen his establishment with the regular season, probably some time in September. Hiram Beming is also taking a two week's vacation. He, however, is combining business with pleasure and will visit many of the consignees in Hlinois and Indiana of the St. Louis Cut Flower Company, with which he is connected. R. F. T.

Providence. R. I.

The usual inactivity that follows the commencement season arrived on schedule time, but we have no cause for complaint, as this year saw an unprecedented demand for flowers. Fancy baskets seemed to be in better demand than usual, although loose bunches and bouquets held their sway. Flowers were abundant and prices were away down, giving the retailer a chance to do a good job at a reasonable price.

The last meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club was one of the most enjoyable and held. joyable ever held. It was of a social nature and the attendance was unusually good. The club voted to have a field day in August when the members with their families will enjoy a sail to Seacourt.
President Cauning is the right man in the right place; he has introduced many innovations that make the meetings worth attending.

Some of the flower stores down town are contemplating putting in nickel in the slot machines or some "flim flam" to compete with dry goods stores, jewelry stores and meat markets that sell plants, cut flowers, and lastly lawn mowers for $1.90.

As small as she is "Little Rhody" will have representation at the Omaha convention.

LITTLE RHODY.

Bloomington, Ill.

A range of ninetcen houses, comprising over 35,000 feet of glass, constitute A. Washburn & Son's greenhouse plant situated a short distance from the city limits. Everything in the line of cut flowers, worth growing at all, is grown here with marked success. Mr. Washburn has been especially successful with his Marie Louise violets, of which he grows five houses. Last season's crop could not possibly have been surpassed, and this year's success promises to be fully as great. A noteworthy improve-ment about the Messrs. Washburn's greenhouses is that of replacing the old boilers by four of new construction, each of fifty horse power capacity. These will soon be placed in position.

A new departure worthy of special mention is the manufacturing of grape and fruit boxes carried on by the Washburns in the large basement of their seed and flower store. The machinery devised for the purpose and the general facilities for producing boxes in large quantities and thereby make them yield good returns, are of the very best.

W. T. Hempstead has commenced building a rose house.

1. D Robinson has left for a short trip cast.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.-The Grand Rapids Horal Company rented a load of palms on July 7. It was four days later that they sent for the stock and discovered the swindle. It was the same game which has been perpetrated a dozen times throughout the country this spring and doubtless was "worked" by the same operator.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY'S favorite flower is a pink carnation and be always wears one on the lapel of his coat.

One of our correspondents raises an interesting question, viz., "Why does Mme. Salleroi geranium never bloom?" He adds: "I have grown it for years, and never saw it produce a single flower or bud."

Honors are pouring in upon Assistant Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson, of Merrimac fame. At the recent show in Boston a particularly gorgeous party with petaloid anthers was labeled the "Lieutenant Hobson."

THE English rose growers, Paul & Son, have in their new rose, Una, a cross between Rosa canina and a tea. The growths are said to have attained a length of twenty-five teet. The flowers are semi-double, four inches in diameter and of a rich cream color with a buff tint.

The clever gentleman who rents palms which he never returns is still pursuing and pursued. He was last heard from in Michigan, where several florists learned at considerable cost to verify orders brought by strangers. The swindler invariably represents himself as the "man" of a well-known family.

The Nebraska State Horticultural Society and the Southwestern Iowa Horticultural Society will hold a union meeting at Omaha, July 26, 27 and 28, which promises to be one of the most interesting gatherings of this character of the year. A programme of unusual interest has been prepared.

Mr. A. L. Winton, says the Gardeners' Chronicle, gives the following details relating to violets: One thousand plants contained in pounds, 257 pounds of water, 52 of organic and volatile matters, 7 of other mineral matter, equal 316. Of nitrogen, the quantity works out at 1.5; potash, 1.74; soda, .55; lime, 62; magnesia, .25; phosphoric acid, .37; sulphuric acid, .32; chlorine, .27; other matters, 2.76, equal 6.88.

The Omaha Convention.

The AMERICAN FLORIST is in position to secure the best possible rates of fare to Omaha, route to be fixed later. We shall be very glad to have the names of all who are thinking of making the trip so that we may submit route and very best rates when arrangements are completed. Berths will be secured on application.

Eel Worms.

There has been some discussion on the use of silico fluoride of ammonium in the Iournal of Horticulture (English). In an article by Mr. G. Abbey, it is stated that experiments conducted by him show conclusively, that one ounce of this substance to a square yard of ground will completely destroy eel worms and many other noxious insects. As its effects are injurious to some plants (although not so much to the roots as to the leaves), he advises treating the ground before planting. The substance soon decomposes and thereby becomes harmless to vegetation while, as it contains about 19 percent of ammonia, it leaves in its decomposition a valuable fertilizer.

A Leaky Roof.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What can I do to prevent my greenhouse from leaking? It was built three years ago. Last fall the putty began to scale and I had it scraped and mastica run on. The latter now has scaled worse than the putty. L. E. P.

Although the letter does not say so in so many words, I infer that perhaps L. E. P. may have placed the putty and mastica upon, instead of beneath, the glass, as when glass is properly bedded, as has been the practice for fifteen or twenty years, in either putty or mastica, there should be no trouble from leaks for a number of years. If the glass has been carefully laid and is securely fastened in place, it can with a little labor be made fairly water-tight, but if not it will be better to take it out and relay it. To repair the roof without removing the glass, after scraping off all the loose putty (and, if it is on the outside, a good job cannot be done without taking it all off), fill the cracks at the sides of the panes with either putty or mastica, using a "gun" for the purpose. If the glass is lapped it will be desirable to back-putty beneath the panes. The best putty is made from whiting and linseed oil with seven or eight per cent of pure whitelead. The sash should then be "drawn," using a moderately thick paint and taking care to fill all cracks. In drawing the sash it will be well to allow the brush to lap over upon the glass for one-eighth or one-fourth of an inch. When properly glazed and repainted every year or two a roof years without reglazing. L. R. Taft,

The Dutch Horticulturists.

At the June meeting of the Dutch Horticultural and Botanical Society, held in Amsterdam, the floral committee made the following awards: First-class certificates to E. H. Krelage & Son for Acalypha Sanderi; J. H. Kersten & Co. for Anemone coronaria fl. pl. White Lady; J. H. Schoher, for Epidendrum purpnreum; and J. C. de Lange for Lilinm rubellum. Certificates of merit to E. H. Krelage & Son for Brodiæa Howelli lilacina and H. D. Willink van Collen for Lupinus Noot-Botanical certificates to E. H. katensis. Krelage & Son for Calochortus Maweanus major, Iris nigricans, Kniphofia Tucki and Tulipa Sprengeri; and to Baron von Boetzelaer for Masdevallia rosea and M. Ephippium, who also received honorable mention for three varieties of Odontoglossum crispum. E. II. Krelage & Son were awarded a gold medal for a collection of cut flowers from bulbous and tuberous plants.

The Price of Free Seeds.

There appears in the Congressional Record of July 9, 1898, a speech delivered by Hon. David H. Mercer, of Nebraska, Thursday, January 13, 1898, in which are given some very interesting facts concerning the free distribution of seeds by the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Mercer produced a letter from the Secretary of Agriculture including a tabulated statement showing the amount of money expended by that department for free seed distribution and statistics from 1853 to 1897, aggregating $3,477,801.32.

The combination of the statistics and seed distribution appropriations ceased, apparently, in 1864, and from 1865 to 1897, inclusive, $2,850,897.11 was expended in the free distribution of seeds alone. The appropriations for experiment stations between 1888 and 1897, inclusive, amount to $6,774,372.62, a grand total of $10,251,173.94 for seed distribution and experiment stations, including the small amount spent on statistics from 1853 to 1864, inclusive.

"Palmenzucht und Palmenslege."

Messrs. Trowitzsch & Son, Frankforton-Oder, Germany, have sent us a copy of this new book on palms by Dr. Udo Dammer. Many years ago, the late Benjamin S. Williams, of London, England, in one of his volumes on stove and greenhouse plants, gave us a very good account of palms and cycads, with some excellent cultural notes. In the interval we have had nothing of this character in similarly compact form, although many interesting and valuable communications on these plants have appeared in the horti-cultural journals. It is therefore a great pleasure to receive Dr. Dammer's work under the above title, dealing with the propagation and cultivation of palms. Most of the cultivated species and varieties are well described and many of them admirably illustrated. Very minute directions are given regarding propagation and culture. The amateur grower will find the directions for the treatment of plants grown in rooms and dwelling houses extremely useful, and the professional gardener is given many practical hints on matters with which he is rather unfamiliar. We rank the book among the most important on greenhouse plants which have made their appearance within the past ten years, especially as palms in recent times have become so popular with all growers of ornamental plants. The text is in German.

More About Rose Soil.

In order to grow fine roses the first requisite is good soil. That rosegrowers use loam taken from ground that has been sown to grass for several years is due, in the first place, to the fact that it contains a larger percentage of nitrogen than would ordinarily be found in loam from a cultivated field. In the second place, the mechanical action of the soil is much improved by growing grass on the land, thus providing for the roses, when the sod is properly composted, a soil rich in plant food, free from harmful ingredients, and better suited to the requirements of the plants. Roses, however, can be well grown in any good, heavy loam, providing it be properly prepared and a sufficient amount of fertilizing material added, but in either case care should be used in its preparation, and on no account use sod or loam directly from the field. It should be composted for at least two months before using and even a year is none too long.

In other words, everything being equal as to care, etc., the roses planted in good, well-rotted loam from an old pasture, will be much finer and be more easily grown than when ordinary loam is used. Bay Side, N. V. JOHN II TAYLOR.

After the Evans Cup.

Serene in their confidence in their prowess the knights of the lignum-vitae balls who howl upon the alleys of the Chicago I lorists' Club are resting upon their oars before the big convention contest which shall decide for the year the possession of the Lyans Challenge Cup. The Chicago bowlers are making no boasts but feel prepared to "roll" three of the "warmest hand of games and it is safe to say that the team which wins at Omaha will have to make a better score than did Philadelphia at Providence when the boys from the City of Brotherly Love captured the beautiful saver trophy with 2501 points, or an average of 179

There is more than usual interest taken in the game this year and a splendid contest may be anticipated at Omaha. Chi engo St. Louis, Indianapolis, Philadel phise Pritisburg, Omaha and probably sev eral other clubs will compete and will all put up strong games. Out at the conven from city there are bowlers who threaten to rob the east of her self-esteem, for A Longhue St. J. H. Hadkinson, R. H.

Davey, L. C. Chapin, S. B. Stewart, and several others are rolling weekly scores which, if they can be duplicated in the face of the enemy, will set a pace fully swift enough for any team in the country. The trophy, which all clubs covet, must be won three times to become permanent prop-

Hot summer evenings are not the best that could be for any physical exercise, but Chicago, in common with other cities, continues to have a fair attendance on bowling night, although several of the best players are at present enjoying vacations out of the city. At the last meeting the following score was made:

Among those who are proficient at the game but were not present last week are F. E. Winterson, who holds the high record for the season, A. L. Vaughan, George Asmus, P. J. Hauswirth, G. Lange, F. Robinson, Oscar Kreitling, Robert Schenck, C. Hughes, Charles Held and a half score of others.

TORONTO, ONT.—The Canadian Florists' Association will hold its first annual convention here in September. The executive committee met at Hamilton July 6, and perfected arrangements.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. A L BROOKE, Pres.: E. ALBERTSON Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C SEAGER, Bochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

Austria has issued a proclamation prohibiting the importation of American nursery stock. This action is taken in fear of San Jose scale.

R. C. BERCKMANS, Augusta, is a member of the Georgia National Guard and has transfered his attentions from growing stock to mowing Spaniards.

HERBERT OSBORN, State Entomologist for lowa, has issued a bulletin calling attention to the new law requiring the inspection of nursery stock. He asks the eo-operation of the trade in carrying out the purposes of the legislation.

Belleville, Kan.-E. Howard and Miss Minnie Noble were married at Goff, Kan., July 5. Mr. Howard will shortly engage in the nursery business here.

NEWARK, N. Y .- As a result of a quarrel Antonio Allen, an employe of C. W. Stuart & Co., nurserymen, stabbed James Burns, a fellow workman. The assault was committed when Burns' back was turned.

Plant Propagation for Parks.

A paper read at the Minneapolis meeting of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association by Fred Kanst land-cape gardener for the South Park's tem, Chicago

The subject of plant propagation for parks is one which is often brought before park officials for consideration, there being few parks throughout the country so well supplied with native trees and shrubs that none need be procured.

In the majority of parks, and especially small ones, it is usual to obtain plants by collection from the surrounding country, or by purchase from nurseries. In larger parks, where thousands of plants are required, it is very essential in order to obtain the best results, as well as for economical reasons, that a park nursery be established where such trees as the elm, oak, ash, linden, negundo, birch, maple, may be kept growing in a healthy condition until such time as they may be These trees when young can be purchased from nurseries very reasonably and when in nursery rows they can be had at any time they are wanted, thus saving delay, as the seasons of planting are usually short. Another advantage is that the trees will have become acclimated. But the principal object of a park nursery is to furnish quickly and in large quantities such varieties of trees, shrubs and plants as will be mostly used in the plantations, such as spiraras, cornus, ligustrums, philadelphus, ribes, sym-phoracarpus, lonicera, poplars and willows. These and many others may be readily increased from cuttings obtained from plants already about the park, by collection or by purchase.

A place for cuttings should be prepared in the fall by covering a piece of ground with manure or leaves to keep the trost out, sandy places being the best for the purpose Cuttings of about ten inches in length should be taken in the winter The old, tough wood does not root ensity. therefore cuttings taken from young, ripened woods repretendle. But the cut tings in the prepared ground, removing the leaves or in onnie as fast, as space is wanted. After the cuttings are in place the covering can be put back to prevent hard treezing as it is necessary to retain all of the vitality possible.

should begin when the heavy frosts are over, or about April 15, when most of the cuttings will have calloused in their winter quarters. A suitable piece of ground for the nursery can usually be found in some incompleted portion of the park. The ground should be well plowed and pulverized, and ample provision made for water. Cuttings should be planted in rows running north and south, so that the sun can penetrate between the rows, as they make better plants and grow straighter than if planted east and west.

For park purposes cuttings may be planted from twelve to fourteen inches between rows and from six to eight inches apart in the rows, or about 50,000 to the acre. One man with a good hand cultivator can attend during the summer about 100,000 plants. At one year old cuttings will have grown into fine stock ready for use in the plantations, and at that age the cost is very little compared with what it would beif the plants were allowed to grow another year or two in the nursery. They are easy to handle and only a small hole need be dug to insert the roots. In plantations where the ground is as soft as it should be one man ean put out about 500 per day.

The raising of their own plants, as before described, has been practiced by the South Park Commissioners for years past, and over 400,000 trees and shrubs, all grown in this way, are now in different parts of the park and all in finecondition. There are also 150,000 cuttings, which were made last winter, growing in the nursery at the present time, which will be ready for next spring's planting.

Worcester, Mass.

There has been no improvement in business during the last week although trade is up to the usual summer standard. Considerable funeral work has helped us in disposing of what flowers we are get-The supply has shortened considerably, but we are still producing all we require.

We need rain badly and unless we get it, and very soon, things will begin to be serious. Field crops are almost at a standstill and lawns are commencing to burn badly where the hose is not kept busy the greater part of the time. Carnations have done finely up to the present and a good soaking rain now would almost insure fine plants this fall.

Potter & Cousins, who have been run ning P. Gormley's old place on Cambridge street, have leased the Warner establishment at West Boylston and will make carnations for the department store here their principal crop. A. H. L.

BUSINESS HAS REACHED THE LOWEST LEVEL OF THE YEAR. - RETAILERS INAUGURATE A SEMI-EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT.

There is really nothing transpiring in florist circles here. Trade is at the lowest stage of ebbtide and is as dead as it possibly can be. Stock is in short supply and of poor quality and the only business in hand is the preparation for the approaching fall season.

The florists who conduct retail stores have arranged to close evenings at six o'clock until the season opens. This is a step in the right direction. It is to be This is a hoped that all will see the benefit arising from such a move and maintain their position. It does certainly seem as though the average florist works a great deal longer hours than would be necessary if they could all agree to close as other stores do. It is purely a matter of educating and accustoming the public to get their flowers at reasonable times instead of causing them to harbor the impression that a florist's establishment can be found open at any time, like an all night restaurant.

Converting a Steam Boiler Into a Hot Water Heater.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-I would like to ask through your paper how a Furman No. 3 can be converted into a hot water boiler? L. G. G.

The principal difference between a steam and hot water Furman boiler is in the size of the outlets and inlets, which are much smaller in the steam boilers. The steam boilers also have a safety valve, water column, etc., which should be taken off and the openings plugged The regular tapping for a Furman No. 3 steam boiler has two 2-inch outlets and one 2-inch inlet. The outlets will answer for 400 square feet of radiation, and rather more if the flow pipes are increased to two and one-half inches at the boiler. It will be even better if the outlets are tapped to two and one-half inches. For tapped to two and one-half inches. the best results the returns should be of the same capacity as the flows, and it will be desirable to have a 2-inch inlet to each of the outer rear sections in addition to the one now in thecenter section. If the outer sections cannot be tapped, or replaced by sections made for hot water they can be taken out, connecting the returns and the dome of the heater with ordinary black pipe. As this will cause considerable expense it may be best, in case the radiation does not exceed 400 square feet, to use a closed system under twenty pounds pressure and connect with the present 2-inch inlet. The main returns should be of the same capacity as the flows until they reach the boiler.

Saginaw, Mich.

One of the leading florists of this city was recently the victim of an unquestionably smooth swindle by an Englishman, "you know," who was about thirty to thirty-five years of age, medium complexion, about five feet six inches tall, smooth face, weight about 160 pounds, and of a workingman-like appearance. His little scheme is to order for a prominent citizen, one of our customers, a number of palms for a few days (in this case it was about one dozen valued at about $30), to be used for decorative purposes.

Previous to ordering the stock he obtains permission to place the plants in aforesaid prominent citizen's yard by saying that he has bought a lot of flowers and wishes to sell them in the neighborhood, but not having a wagon of his own is obliged to ask a place where he can leave them in safety for a few minutes. On the arrival of the wagon with the palms, for which he has been watching patiently, he tells the boy to drive around in the back yard with them, saving that he has to wash the pots before taking them into the house. As soon as the wagon has gone he sells the stock to the neighbors at any price he can get. This is the last seen of him, and the florist's chagrin can be better imagined than described when he goes after his palms and finds that he has been cleverly swin-

Since this was worked on me I have found that the scheme has recently been used extensively in other parts of the country and several times in Michigan within the past two weeks. If any florist should have any dealings with a stranger of the above description he will do the undersigned a great favor by having the police authorities hold him and communicate with the authorities in Saginaw, who hold a warrant for his arrest on the charge of obtaining goods under false pretence, and greatly oblige, А. Уістім.

FIRST Lilium Harrisii bulbs arrived in New York July 11. It is a disputed point whether earliest or prematurely dug stock is of any real advantage to the florist over those which are allowed to fully mature in the ground.

At its recent convention the American Seed Trade Association passed appropriate resolutions upon the death of Reinhard Maitre and F. E. McAllister, two old and valued members who had gone to their reward since the previous annual session.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—S. Y. Haines has made application in the district court for a receiver for the firm of C. H. Lippincott, of which he is a member. Haines alleges in his application that Carrie H. Lippincott has excluded him from the management of the business, a function which he was to exercise under the terms of their partnership agreement. Judge Harrison has issued an order restraining the defendant from disposing of any of the firm's property pending a settlement. The assets are valued at $3,000.

Californian Crop Prospects.

Eb. Am. Florist:—I find celery is nearly a tailure. Lettuce very poor, acreage light. Onion there is not growing thirty per cent of the usual acreage; will not yield 150 pounds per acre. Salsify a fair crop. Radish crop very light; much destroyed by lice and birds. Carrot will not harvest over one quarter crop. Spinach extremely light. Sweet peasmuch shorter than heretofore reported; leading varieties such as Blanche Ferry, Countess of Radnor, Blanche Burpee and Mrs. Gladstone are nearly a failure. The sweet peas now being harvested will not thresh out an average of 100 pounds per acre. I believe that October must see higher values than now prevail on many California products. Some contractors of sweet peas will be unable to make deliveries from 1898 crops.

deliveries from 1808 crops. Chys. P. Brashays. San Francisco, Cal., July 11.

Under date of July 14, C. C. Morse & Correpent. "Omon crop promises full average, but a reage not over twenty per cent of last year. Present holdings of 1897 (rope are very small owing to the heavy den and in the spring. Some growers hold 1896 yeed, which is undesirable. Celery and arror are full, but the acreage is quite small. Lettuce below the average radishes poor, spinach rather short, sweet peas shorter than anticipated, especies the standard varieties."

SUMMER INACTIVITY FOLLOWS THE MOST PROSPEROUS SEASON IN MANY YEARS. CONDITION OF STOCK .- GROWERS ARE PREPARING FOR THE FALL CROP.-PER-SONAL GOSSIP.

The summer dullness settled down upon the trade in this section about the first of July, and the monotony is only occasionally interrupted by funeral orders or a wedding.

Some Kaiserins and Meteors from new plants are being cut and are fairly good. Beauties also are of fair quality and retail readily at $3 to $4 per dozen. Bride, Bridesmaid and Perle are scarce and poor. Some very good carnations are still being cut and the quality was never excelled at this season of the year. Daybreaks fade quickly but are popular nevertheless. Scarlet carnations are searce and in brisk demand. Auratum, album and rubrum lilies are in good demand, being used mostly for funeral work. There are no longiflorums in market but our growers will next season carry over some of these valuable lilies for summer blooming. Sweet peas are now abundant and of extra good quality. Ample moisture with warmer weather has brought outside stock along in fine shape.

The growers are now making repairs, planting roses and chrysautheniums and getting everything in shape for another season's business. While we hear of no extensive building improvements. Nearly every one is making some repairs. The season just past has been the most prosperous for many years and several mortgages have been lifted in consequence. There is a big demand for roses and earnations which cannot be supplied at home and another good season seems in sight.

J. Hoitomt, formerly in the business here, has enlisted in the army.

C. Anderson, doing business as the "Hill Florist," has disposed of his store fixtures and discontinued.

Aug. Vogt, Otto Hieserlborn and C. F. Haupt were recent visitors at Milwaukee. E. F. Lemke is building a new office and store room.

C. Bussjaeger has his new rose houses about completed.

R. C. Seeger will build a violet house this season.

Messrs. Sluis and son, of the seed firm of Sluis & Groot, Eukhuizen, Germany, were recent callers on the trade here. FELIX.

Filling Greenhouse Benches.

Referring to recent correspondence on this question, Mr. John Burton writes as follows:

Our houses are all built with the center walk opposite the door; this walk we use for taking ont and putting in the soil. For doing this we use wheelbarrows, which we can empty directly into the center tables on each side of the walk we are wheeling on. The front and back tables on the outside of the house are generally small, and we shovel the soil into these from the center tables. I think this plan the quickest I have seen for taking in soil. We can, with ten men, fill the benches in a house 150 feet long by 21 feet wide, in one hour and fifteen min utes. To do this the men have to work very hard, which they seem to prefer rather than have so hot a jobdrag along for several hours, we of course appreciate this, and allow them an extra half beau or so on such days.

We find that the taking out and the putting in of the scal does not occupy so much time as the cleaning up and get ting ready for the new soil. We think this should be thoroughly done. After the old soil is out, we carefully scrape off all that remains on the benches with trowels and hoes, then sweep thoroughly, do any repairing necessary to the benches and afterward put men or boys under the benches to scrape out the loose soil wherever it may be found in the house. We then whitewash thoroughly with a thick coat all the woodwork in the house that is not painted. Then we sprinkle air-slaked lime on the floors all over the house. If the house is not adjoining other houses with plants in them, we burn five or six pounds of sulphur in it, with the hope of killing any insects that may be left, and then consider it ready for the new soil.

Helpful Reminders.

If you have hydrangeas in pots, they should be given plenty of elbow room, a top dressing of fertilized earth and plenty of water. They are best set on the ground or in pots sunk in the ground, as benches become too dry and hot in ordinary houses. Hortense T. Hoyt and such varieties that have been blooming are in most cases of no value now except for next season's use and it is best to cut them back. Shake out most of the soil and re-pot with good rich soil, light enough in its texture to insure good drain-Where the plant has made a strong arre. growth and increased in strength give it a size larger pot; where they have not become not bound put them back into the same pot: place in a position pro-tected from wind and they will make a growth now which will form the most desirable buds for next season's development. As the leaves turn color in fall, water should be withheld to gradually dry them out for storing in a cool house. Such plants will be just right for Easter blooming without further treatment more than an increase of temperature and water. For later blooming, it is well to select some of the best plants and give them a shift just before buds begin to expand; it is safer than relying on applications of liquid manure and careful watering of a plant which is in any way crowded at the roots. The cuttings taken off at this time are worth caring for if you wish to increase your stock. Select only the perfectly healthy branches, put them directly into small pots, plunge in a spent hot-bed and shade lightly. This insures them constant moisture and a temperature more uniform than an ordinary cutting bench. When well rooted they can be dried off and placed with other plants. They will make good single blooming specimens for next season.

It is well to start bouvardias now and a bench on which Perle roses do well will be satisfactory for this useful but neglected plant. It is common to plant out and move in, as carnations are handled, but they are hetter for being started on benches no later than now. They require good soil, careful staking and considerable pinching back at first, and red spider will take possession if you do not water them properly.

Old plants of euphorbia, poinsettia and such like should be given fresh soil and started into growth now. The difficulty commonly experienced with these plants is in maintaining an even temperature during September and October before firing is commenced. They will turn yellow and drop their foliage it not kept warm and will not be worth the space they occupy, but, like many pretty things, they are so much better for the proper treatment that you ought to arrange one house with which to meet the requirements of such stock.

It is now time to sow several perennials you have use for them. The best if you have use for them. method for arranging a supply for most florists is to prepare one or two long beds of good rich soil and sow the seed in open ground in rows, selecting such varieties as you have most use for, Choose the time that they bloom and form seed and sow themselves as this will always fulfill their requirements and they will adjust themselves for their winter's sleep together, no matter what the varieties are. They can all be covered with leaves and you will not have any care of them until April, when you can uncoverand lift a few of each variety into pors for late spring sales. C. B. W. for late spring sales.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE GREAT CONVEN-TION BOWLING MATCH.—KRUG PARK THE SCENE OF THE SPORT.—CHOOSING OMAHA'S REPRESENTATIVE TEAM.

The bowling florists met Tuesday evening, July 5, to consider methods of choosing players for the team to represent Omaha in the big championship contest at the S. A. F. convention, and the following plan was adopted: It was agreed that the six players making the highest scores in the next fifteen games be the team, and the individual making highest score during this series be captain. Krug park, a pleasant suburban retreat, was chosen as the place to test the skill of the players. This park is pleasantly located on high ground and has a fine bowling alley, new and in tip-top condition. It is above ground and the pleasant Nebraska breezes fan the players as they

As seen by above, Mr. L. Henderson holds first place and Mr. J. A. Shaw the honor of highest score made. Considerable interest was added to this series by A. Donaghue, Sr., putting up a fine gold headed cane for the highest score, which J. A. Wilcox promptly offered to match with a silk hat. Monday evening of each week was chosen as the time for these

J. Austin Shaw is at the exposition in charge of Siebrecht & Son's exhibit of palms and plants, the only display of this haracter made by any florist east of the J. 11, 11. Mississippi.

DETROIT, MICH.-A. Strittmatter, the city florist, has a very pretty piece of work in the bedding about the city hall. The plants used in the work are said to have a value of $6,000. There are some splendid specimens of palms, a rare collection of eacti, hundreds of cannas and whole regiments of geraniums and other bright bloomers. The lettering about the soldiers' monument is another of florist Strittmatter's successes.

Refined Coal Oil as Fuel.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Will some of your readers kindly advise me in regard to the use of refined coal oil for fuel? Can it be successfully used in a small return-flue boiler? What would be the comparative cost of renned oil at ten cents per gallon, hard coal at ten dollars per ton and soft coal (very poor grade) at from three dollars to three dollars and fifty cents per ton? Crude oil not obtainable.

I have never seen a burner adapted to the use of kerosene that would answer for a large heater, but as we now have wickless kerosene burners, made in something the same way as gasoline burners, which would answer for small heaters, I can see no reason why larger ones could not be used. If the fire pot is a large oneit might be possible to place three or four burners under the boiler. I have had no experience with oil as a fuel for heating greenhouse boilers, but should think it would be more expensive at the figures named than coal. L. R. TAFT. than coal.

TRADE SLACK WITH NO SIGNOF IMMEDIATE IMPROVEMENT, — DROUGHT ENDANGERS FIELD STOCK.—FLORISTS GO VISITING.— SUICIDE OF BELLA BECKER.

Trade still remains very slack and will. in all probability, continue so until fall, at least none of our florists look for any improvement before that time.

The weather has been very unfavorable for outdoor stock for some time, day time very hot and nights much too eool for growth, while lack of rain will soon necessitate watering, a very troublesome as well as an expensive measure in most cases. The trees in the parks are showing the effects of the dry weather, too, many of them dropping their leaves as if it were autumn.

On Sunday a number of the florists, with their wives visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoffmeyer at Carnegie. There were about twenty five in the party, and they were so royally received that they will, in the near future, call on others of the florists. Mr. Pischer, of Castle Shannon, will be the next to be visited.

Mrs. Bella F. Becker, who has been conducting the floral establishment in the East End formerly run by her husband, H. Becker, committed suicide on Saturday last by drinking carbolic acid. Trouble of a social and business nature was the cause. REGIA.

CANANDIGUA, N. Y.-One must search afar to find a neater small establishment than that of A. C. Cappon, who grows an infinite variety of stock beneath his 5,000 feet of glass. He has a down town store and reports an excellent season's business with prospects of a large fall trade.

Faulty Eaves and Gutters.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-We would like some one in the business to explain some good way of building a greenhouse so that the drip from the eaves will not run down the walls and rot them in consequence. We have our buildings erected as per sketch accompanying this query, and though they do not always leak when glass sweats, they invariably do so when rain falls. We have drip catching strips under the plates, but these do not suffice. The gutters are very troublesome. All the plates are well joined and packed with canvas at the lap joints. Last summer all the gutters were painted with good white lead and oil paint and sanded lightly, but even after several coats, and letting it get very hard, it cracked up, between buildings especially, where the heat seems to be greater, and loosened and now leaks very badly. Is there nothing better than paint for gutters? We have tried asphaltum, but on wood it only dusts and rubs off. If you can name some one who has discovered a remedy for both these troubles, we shall be greatly obliged. Subscribers.

When first constructed, our side-hill house, with a slope to the south of thirtyeight feet, gave us some trouble by the failure of the drip groove on the under side of the plate to catch the water that came through the cracks between the butted glass in heavy rains, but it was easily remedied. The groove was en-larged with a plane until it was threeeighths of an inch wide and fully as deep. A three-inch tin gutter was then fitted beneath the plate and the water from this was carried to the outside of the house by means of small conductor pipes. When gutters are to be spliced it is desirable either to put the parts together with long mitres or to have them together with square shouldered joints. If the joints are well painted and put together with screws they should not draw apart. When a water proof paint is desired one of the best for either wood or iron is the L. R. TAFT. graphite paint.

Clipper Bar.

With this bar you can make a roof that is absolutely free from drip, and glass cannot be torn out by the wind. Butted glass makes a tight roof, a warm house and saves fuel. It lasts longer, looks betterand costs less than the old-fashioned roof. But do not think that this is the only bar we sell, for it is not; we furnish what people want and there is nothing in greenhouse material that you cannot get from us, and all of open-air-dried Cypress clear of bright sap, stained sap, knots and all other defects.

Railroad Route Chicago to Omaha.

All members in Illinois and tributary territory, as well as eastern members, who will attend the Omaha Convention, are invited to communicate with the AMERI-CAN FLORIST or with the undersigned before selecting a railroad route between Chicago and Omaha, as there is in progress a movement which will certainly result in securing for us a rate of railroad fare much better than is yet offered from Chicago west.

Sweet Pea Novelties of 1898.

We are now able to report on sweet pea novelties in this section. But the hot wave, which reached 100 in the shade last Sunday, has forced our vines into bloom beyond their strength, so that on light soil all the varieties have fallen below their normal size, both of stem and blossom. But we have everything as true to color as this climate allows. We true to color as this climate allows. represent a latitude from which a very large sweet pea patronage comes and my report must be somewhat severely just tor this reason. And from frequent conferences with our most skillful growers l must say that with each succeeding year our patience and preseverence are being more and more sorely tried. By whatever method I plant I wish before I get half through the month of July ! had tried some other. Still God's world is the same old world, and the fault must be ours, if we do not succeed.

Everything is in bloom now. As I look over the last Eckford list of novelties his 1898 set-1 see that three of them received first-class certificates, and two others awards of merit, at various English shows. Having seen Mr. Eckford's place in full bloom, and retaining still in mind a delightful picture of his vases of novelties at two of the English shows, I can well understand how he has received the above certificates and awards of merit, and that they were justly given. But it is a simple fact that all we can do the first year with these expensive packets is to get an idea of their color. And never have we had clearer proof than this year that the English climate and ours have very different effects on color.

Here in this set are the Prince of Wales and Colonist. At four feet distance we cannot tell them apart. Both are a bright rose after the order of Her Majesty. The Eckford description of Colonist is "a soft lilac overlaid with bright rose," which l have no doubt the English climate made very beautiful. But grown on even an ideal soil, such as some of our growers have, Colonist and Prince of Wales would puzzle me to distinguish them. Our climate, I suppose, emphasizes the bright It is evident that we can attach but little value to any but the decided self colors. Then there are two "orange" varieties in this set. Chancellor is the most decided orange, and is the best one of the set. Lady Mary Curric seems but a repetition of Penzance. The supposed shade of rosy blac in the Currie disappears in our climate. Duchess of Sutherland, a pearl white, has the misfortune of being so near like two of the Burpee set that it can hold no place. Duke of Sutherland, which is doubtless made out of Monarch, can be duplicated by well grown stock of the latter. Black Knight, of which I well remember seeing a magnificent row at Wem, while perhaps being a little deeper in color than Stanley, will practi-cally be only a rejuvenation of the latter. and it will be as easy to hold one up in size as it will the other.

And I ought here to revert to last year's set of Eckford's. It is a disap-pointment throughout. We have Calipointment throughout. fornia grown stock of them, so that they ought to show up well. They practically give us nothing new. Queen Victoria, although it has a black seed, gives us only a weak primrose tint. Lady Nina Balfour, instead of having a more delieate color than the true Radnor, comes very badly. The American strain of Radnor, called New Countess, is very fine in color, and must hold the place as a delicate lavender. Countess of Powis is erowded out by Burpee's Oriental. Salopian does have a richer shading of blood-red than Mars, but does not give us that novel shading towards dark cherry which I saw at Wem. Neither do we get from Shazada as dark an effect as we expected. And Triumph is nothing. Prince Edward of Vork is perhaps brighter than the old Princess Victoria, but hardly better.

All this is an injustice to Mr. Eckford. He is not to blame for our elimate. If our American climate registered no temperature higher than 85° and we had a moist occan air instead of our inland dryness we could duplicate the delicate shadings seen at Wem, and our blossoms would answer to the Ecktord description.

Turning to the American novelties our enthusiasm is kept alive, certainly not by all that are being offered on this side of the water, but by the best of them. Probably in some localities the best Burpee novelty this year is Stella Morse, -a beautiful light buff cream. But in this section the best one is Lottie Untchins. It at once attracts admiration. I am happily disappointed in it. Its yellowish, eream ground sets off the soft rose stripes and flakes very prettily. Oriental is a splendid orange salmon and has only Chancellor to complete with. Modesty bouquets beautifully, and there is no question about its deserving a place. As to Sensation, it is unfortunate just now to have so many sorts just hordering on white crowded upon us. Duchess of Sutherland, Sensation and Countess of Aberdeen are not needed, if we retain Dolly Varden and Wassona add no value to the set. The former probably owes its peculiarity of color to the run out condition of the old Butterfly stock, and the mauve stripe of Wawona we have had more or less of in our various Radnor stock. Pink Cupid is a decided improvement on the white, but it refused to germinate well with me in a border, doing well enough in pots. The Burpee Earliest-of-All strain of Blanche Ferry vindicates its name.

I speak with some diffidence of the Walker novelties, being somewhat prejudiced against the introduction of striped sorts, and preferring that the recognition of Mr. Walker as a novelty maker should depend on a wider endorse ment than my personal interest in him. This he is having, and I think his conscientions work deserves it. He has favorable Oregon conditions and for seven years has been in close correspondence with me. He is working his way patiently, lacking the Eckford prestige and his name as yet carrying no such warrant as the great seed house that is giving us Morse's finest selections from an immense acreage, and that is able to introduce a set of novelties on the largest scale. If a man gets out a catalogue, and there is any merit in his work, so that his introductions appear in our shows, we must recognize him. Bertie Hamilton has a more fixed type than I had thought, the fine wayy markings being of ox-blood red. Mrs. S. T. Walker gives us one-half about like Countess of Aberdeen, and the other half a pretty, faint rosy tinge which I take to be the type of the variety. Minnehaha is simply a good flower of very fine pink veining, and Light Gaiety is of the same order. Of course Mikado breaks up into almost everything of this sort, and altogether these red and rose cemed sorts make our rows look as if we have too much of it. The valuable novelties are not along this striped line. If we have good stock of Gray Friar we do not want Dawn

Among the trial sorts sent 1 find some excellent things. The new blue which the Sunset Co mark "A" is the best blue yet introduced, and is quite original. The new orange of Burpee's called Gorgeous is grand. Pink Friar is also very pretty I see no advance made in yellow except as the butt cream of the Stella Morse gives us a richer effect. The buff cream ground shading into soft rose is one of the new trials. One or two odd things, selected apparently from Laxton's Etna are noticeable. It is useless for us to tollow the idea of giving minute details of shading or form, for all that can be relied upon is pronounced color and good vigor of habit. The battle now a days to get there into bloom and hold them up till show time is too much of an anxious sus-pense, for us to care much for the art snadings, or the subtle overlaying of one har catches us after we get the vines into library inches us wonder where our a hibiti a flowers are coming from. Ireland, where he remained but a short time, going thence to Richard Smith & Co., nurserymen and seedsmen, at Worcester, England, managing their seed department for some years. It was at Worcester that Mr. Barr launched his own canoc upon the business sea, under the title of Atkinson & Barr, but the arrangement did not prove congenial and Mr. Barr retired from the firm to assume the management of the seed business of Mr. Wood, of Worcester, with whom he remained three years. Having by this time become thoroughly experienced and being ambitious to find a larger field for his endeavors he went to London and started as seedsman with Butler & Me-Culloch In the autumn of 1861 he began on his own account under the title of Barr & Sugden, King street, Covent Garden. In 1882 the partnership lapsed and the settlement was a contentious one, but was finally arranged and the firm name changed to Barr & Sons, as it is at the present time

Mr. Barr's first great work for the advancement of horticultural interests was in connection with the lily family, of which he succeeded in gathering probably the largest and finest collection in exist ence at that time. The work of cultivating and classifying this important family of plants occupied some years and resulted in a largely increased interest and in the diffusion of much popular knowledge on the subject, as may be seen from the elaborate catalogues he pub-Ished about this time. This labor by Mr. Barr no doubt facilitated the work on the more graph of the hly family by J. G. Balas and the magnificent illustrated monograph issued at a later period by I H. Llyes - Mr. Llwes showed his appre-ciation by presenting Mr. Barr with an autograph copy of this splendid work. The plant with which Mr. Barr's name is most closely associated, however, is the dattodii, a flower which he took up in the or the and with which he continued his arresting labor of live for twenty sathout much public recognition until 1 - $4 when the flower rose in public At this time a deputation of the Horncultural Society called on The Earn to ask his opinion as to the it of a grand contrience on the daffodil. He stated that it would no doubt be successful provided the committee could get Mr. Burbidge, of Dublin, to read a paper, as that gentleman had made a specialty of daffodil literature, and the conference was called that year. It proved a grand success. From that day the flower became more and more popular with the general public and reached its climax when Oscar Wilde gave his lectures on the beauty of yellow as a color. Other artists took up these ideas and the daffodil was accepted as a flower of the first importance from that time. Mr. Barr thinks the only exception to this was the Narcissus Telamonius plenus or Von Sion daffodil, which has never been accepted as of high rank by the connoisseurs on the other side of the Atlantic. He has been greatly surprised to find what immense quantities of it are grown and sold in the United States as grown and soid in the United States as well as in Covent Garden. The historical matter on the daffodil by Mr. Burbidge and a descriptive list of all known daffodils by Mr. Burbidge dils by Mr. Barr was published by the latter gentleman under the title of "Ve Narcissus," and the book helped to still further popularize the flower.

Mr. Barr began his travels abroad in 1887 in search of daffodils and was successful in enriching his collection with many fine sorts hitherto unknown. At Oporto in Portugal he found two new species and a hybrid of N. Bulbocodium, also the Oporto, yellow, and the hybrid Johnsonii. In Galacia, Spain, he found the beautiful Santa Maria and a hybrid between N. triandrus and Santa Maria. Mount Perdu furnished a fine lot of the beautiful little N. Pseudo-narcissus moschatus figured by Parkinson but lost to cultivation since 1629. In the French Pyrenecs he found N. abscissus, another plant known to Parkinson; also N. variiformis, and a hybrid of X, poeticus and N. varilformis.

'In the following year he traveled the north coast of Spain from Bayonne to Corunna, finding but three hybri's and five bulbs in six weeks, but his long journey was rewarded when he turned back into Galacia and found the beautiful Queen of Spain, a hybrid of Santa Maria and N. triandrus. On his return journey through central Spain he found the N. Bulbocodium citrinus and N. minimus, the latter already known but not generally in commerce. In after years Gibralter, Tangiers and other points in Spain and Portugal were visited, but no new daffodils of importance were found, although several new species of pæonia were added to our collections, the most important of which was Paconia coracea, a plant then unknown except in herbariums. In 1896 Mr. Barr went through Norway and Sweden, and in the next year through Sicily, Italy, Switzerland and Germany, but the plants found were only of hotanical interest.

Mr. Barr is at present on an extended journey through the United States and Canada, and will eventually go to Japan and China, Australia and New Zealand, and home by way of South Africa. He has already visited New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Pittsburg and is now journeying toward Montreal and other Canadian cities, Buffalo, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago and other important cities will be visited by him enroute to California, where he expects to arrive in October.

In all his travels Mr. Barr says he has never experienced such courtesy as has been shown him in America. The Americans he characterizes as the most generous and hospitable people on earth; most wonderfully progressive and highly civilized; away ahead of anything the average Britisher has any conception of, and with promise of such a magnificent future for their great country that one becomes lost in amazement in contemplating it.

Those who may have the pleasure of a call from Mr. Barr during his present trip will find him a hale and hearty old gentleman, spry as a cricket and carrying his seventy-two years better than many men two decades his junior. He is full of good stories, and his delightful chuckle after telling one of his dryly humorous yarns is something inimitable. Ispent three days with him at Atlantic City and found him a most agreeable and entertaining companion. He was greatly interested in the splendid physique of the American bathers, both men and women. His favorite expression was "W-o-n-der-ful!" "Wonderful!" Every time he got that off I thought of Dominie Sampson's "P-rodigious!" It is pleasant to hear from this keen observer that there is nothing to fear for the future of the Americans physically. They're all right. I wish I could reproduce some of his amusing and shrewd comments on men and things from women and metaphysics down to dogs and black olives, but I could not do him justice. Here in I'hiladelphia we shall always remember his charming presence, and hope he may long be spared to enjoy his well-earned holiday and to move through life's autumn carrying with him the sunshine of smiling good humor and finding a cheerful and hearty welcome universal.

THE VICTORIA MEDAL.

This gold medal has been awarded to sixty persons who have rendered distinguished services to horticulture during Queen Victoria's reign. Alr. Barr is one of the sixty. This is the first time a cut of the medal has been published, but the portraits of the recipients were issued as a supplement to one of the horticultural journals last year.

New Evergreen Hybrid Wichuraiana Roses.

The growth of these plants is remarkable for its freedom, a single specimen four vears old covering a space of 240 square feet, with shoots twelve to twenty-five feet in length, completely covering the ground, with its bright glossy foliage and showy, fragrant flowers. The same plant is making thirty eight new growths of great strength. The foliage of all is leathery in texture, glossy and not only proof against insects, but evergreen. The large, fragrant flowers are produced very freely, and they are extremely useful for cutting purposes, especially when in bud. For trailing or covering ground where nothing else will grow, to cover roots, stumps and stems of trees, walls and trellises, and for forcing as pot plants during spring, especially for Easter, the following varieties will be found valuable:

EVERGREEN GEM-WICHURAIANA · MME. HOSTE.

Not only evergreen, but growing during mild weather in winter. Stems long branching, rich bronze color, covering the ground closely. Foliage fine rich bronze color, closely matted. Flowers produced singly on stems, yellow, buff in bud, opening to almost white, two or three inches in diameter, perfectly double with delightful sweet briar fragrance. This will be found most valuable for landscape work as well as for cutting.

JERSEY BEAUTY—WICHURAIANA · PERLE DES JARDINS.

Extremely vigorous grower, foliage glossy and of thick leathery substance. Flowers large, single, three inches in diameter, opening pale yellow, with cluster of bright yellow stanens, very fragrant, and produced in greatest profusion, covering the plant entirely, and having the appearance of a yellow Cherokee rose. Great acquisition and the most striking variety of the set.

GARDENIA—WICHURAIANA X PERLES DES JARDINS.

Strong grower with large green foliage, flowers produced singly on stems six inches to one foot long. When in bud hardly distinguishable from Perle, bright yellow, and when open, cream color, and three to three and a half inches in diameter, incurving toward evening to perfect imitation of a gardenia as to shape and color, hence its name. Flowers are delightfully fragrant and produced freely. A grand rose for any purpose.

Carnations.

Last winter I visited thehouse of Chas. Swayne, Kennett Square, Pa., best known to the readers of the American Florist as "The Slope" and described too often to bear repetition now.

The house was planted to violets in the lower, or cool end and the balance to carnations, both violets and carnations looking as well, or possibly better, than with most of the legion of growers in the vicinity who have the regulation style of houses. There were, however, several growers in Kennett Square who had better stock than that in this house, but, had the paths in "The Slope" been wide enough to permit of properly working the stock and the carnations themselves been planted only about two-thirds as thickly in the beds, there would have been better results.

The chief point of merit in this house is its superb ventilation. By opening the top and the lower side at the same time a current of air strong enough to move the leaves on the plants can be obtained and such a current of air admitted among the earnations whenever the outside temperature is 50° or more is of incalculable benefit as it puts the stomata, or little leaf ports, in good, healthy condition and generally tones up the plants.

The chief objection to this house is the fact that the roof, being one continuous expanse, allows the heat to all rush towards the upper end of the house and makes the heating of it somewhat uncertain on a very windy night.

Mr. Landis, of Landis & Co., of Lancaster, Pa,, has a slope almost identical with Mr. Swayne's, but instead of building a continuous roof he is constructing a set of houses on the ridge and turrow pattern, leaving the sides between the houses open. In this manner he will get the benefit of the superior ventilation and in a measure, counteract the rush of heat to the top, as each house will take its own heat toward the top of that house instead of sending it all to the upper end of the slope.

To get the best results from a house of this kind the slope must be toward the south or, better yet, slightly toward the southeast and the more of an incline it has the better, especially so for the solid bed system of growing carnations. It is necessary to terrace for each house as the building itself should be level, or if the slope is too great for that, simply make each bed level. The days of sloping beds are over so far as all good growers are concerned.

The beds for these houses were thrown up and planted to earnations early in the spring but the glass will not be put on until the last of next month, thus giving the plants the benefit of outdoor culture and not the check which results from replanting in the fall. They have suffered from the very long drought we have had in this section as the place has not been piped for water until this week, but I shall watch them with considerable interest.

Notes and Comments.

It is stated in a recent publication that smilax is never satisfactory in pots. Nothing could be farther from the truth, for I have myself grown equally as good smilax in pots as can be grown in any other way. These were grown in 6-inch pots, and the strings were from seven to eight feet in length, well furnished from the bottom up. I exhibited some plants of that description before the Germantown Horticultural Society some years This statement is not made for the purpose of advocating the growing of smilax in pots generally, but only to eall attention to the fact that it is not safe to make such sweeping statements, and at the same time I thought it would not be out of place to endeavor to remove any doubts that may exist in the minds of those who may have thoughts about the matter and hesitated to put them into operation, fearing for the results. And again there might be occasions where a few plants growing in pots could be made a telling feature at a decoration, besides having them in available form for sale should some good soul wish to buy some in that shape. The plants I have reference to were plunged in a solid bed as close together as they could be placed with convenience.

AVERAGE TEMPERATURES.

We frequently read in dissertations, more or less learned, upon the growing of plants that an average temperature of should be maintained. This also was forcibly brought to my mind recently, when, under the head of smilax and asparagus in boxes, it was stated that 63° will be a fair average temperature in which to grow them during the winter. I would like to know the idea intended to be conveyed in such statements. How are we to arrive at an average in such matters, and especially a "fair average?" What and especially a "fair average?" What can a fair average mean in this particu-lar. Practical growers never make use of such vague expressions. They are explicit as to the maximum and minimum temperatures if it is essential to the success of growing plants under glass, and it generally is, or they will state that a night temperature of not lower than is necessary. Let all writers upon cultural topics hereafter specify the temperatures at which the particular subjects under consideration succeed in best during the night and also during the day, and let a difference be made between bright and cloudy days. The up-to-date horticulturist has no use for meaningless generalities.

The Crimson Rambler Rose.

The rose Crimson Rambler, as seen here in the nursery of Messrs. Ellwanger & Barry, is a magnificent sight just now. For several weeks it has been in full bloom, and in spite of hot and extremely dry weather is still in first-class condition. The plants were put out a few feet apart twelve months ago last spring, and they have made a splendid growth. A trellis had to be erected to support the many strong canes which spring from the base of each plant, and this summer the breaks on these canes are so numerous that the whole forms a perfect hedge. As every side growth terminates in a large, well-shaped paniele of beautiful bright bloom, the whole trellis is a grand, solid mass of crimson roses in all stages of development, from the tiniest bud to a full-sized, open flower. In Mr. Ellwanger's private grounds a similar trellis has been in full bloom for the same length of time, but the growth here is even stronger than in the famous old nursery grounds, and this season's canes are surpassing those of last year in thickness and length, promising to give still better results another season. It is wonderful how persistently the petals adhere to the full blown flower; they do not drop until they are nearly dry, and as the clusters are dense and many-flowered, we cannot notice when a dozen flowers have lost their beauty, because others have filled out the space and covered the unsightly old calyx with their spreading petals. This is truly a grand rose for every imaginable purpose, outdoors or under glass. It behaves well in either case, and we can readily dispose of it at any time of the year either as a pot plant or in the cut state. It is especially recommendable for ornamental purposes in the garden, for we have no other plant of its class which could be equally satisfactory in every respect during June and July. We can train it ten feet high, or, if so desired, we may keep it down to four or five feet by prining or pinching, and in either case we can rely on a most profuse show of bloom. J. B. K.

Omaha's Great Exposition.

If one wishes to breathe the air of the Riviera with no fear of the Spaniard, he need only sit beneath the snow-decked branches of the fragrant oleanders which surround the east end of the lagoon at the wonderful Trans-Mississippi Exposition. There is a charm cast over the scene as the evening clouds close over the dying sun and you are ushered into an unknown land. One seems to have fallen One seems to have fallen asleep and is only awakened by a voice coming across the flashing waters of the gem-lit basin below. Hark! What is the voice? Ah, we are surely not in Nebraska! This deep blue, studded here and there by the tardy stars of night, as if ashamed to show themselves to their brighter clustered rivals, which, sentinel-like, illuminate the water's edge; no, not Nebraska; but yes, "Land of the flowing waters," for this is what the Indian name implies.

Filled with legends is this land. Within its precincts were the famous seven cities of Cibola in the land of Quivera, the mystic city of the westlands. These have all long since vanished and are only brought to mind by the annual pageants of the Royal Knights of Ak-Sor-Ben illustrating the mysterious rites of the more mystic people who are said to have inhabited this broad land of blowing winds and ripening grain. But here has arisen another magic city, the Columbian Exposition's only rival, or is this the Phemix arisen from the ashes of the White City on the lake? These fluted columns and stately colomades and splashing fountains that send forth liquid jewels of rarest huc only to sink into the limpid azure of the rippling mirror to again appear in dreamy blue that suggests the mist of mountain top; changing then to golden rain, now to ruby gold. Are they the memories of the past here taken shape and substance before our eyes? The rich voice of the Venetian gondolier half startles one who sits entranced as in a dream. Venice, fair Bride of the Adriatic, could you but arouse your sleeping doges, you would not rest until you had brought back the column of Neptune in front of the government building at the far end of this western Court of Honor.

NOTES ON EXHIBITS.

Horticultural Hall is one of the largest and grandest buildings upon the exposition grounds. The ornamentation, in a frieze extending along the front and sides of the building, is especially attractive and, in connection with the statuary and grand entrance, has an unusually pleasing effect, aside from the plant and fruit decorations, which harmonize so well with the general plan of the building. vaulted dome, supported by its manyfluted Corinthian columns, holds a peculiar charm for the Trans-Mississippi visitor. Herr Hesser, of Plattsmouth, has arranged a fine display from his famous palm gardens. His Cyeas circinalis is the grandest plant in the building, and there are many fine specimens on exhibition.

Hadkinson's seedling canna, The Shell, is attracting more than ordinary attention from visiting floriculturists; bright green tolinge, erect habit, vigorous growth, spreading heads of light straw-colored florets, resisting the heree rays of the noon day sun, which they seem to actually enjoy, it is just the thing for hot climates. A T. Liwin, a former graduate of Shaw Gardens, St. Louis, has taken notes and a number of snap shots of the various exhibits this week. He pronounces The Shell a triumph in mass planted effect I pon his return he will be connected with the Arkansas University and Experiment Station, Layetteville, Ark.

CONDITION OF TRADE.—STILL BUILDING GREENHOUSES.—A GREEK'S ADVENTURE.— A VISIT FROM PETER BARR.—DISPLAY AT COTTAGE GARDENS.—BRIEF NOTES.

The heavy fragrance of auratum lilies hangs over every wholesale flower store in the town this week and reaches far out into the street. The wholesalers are glad to part with them, and likewise the longiflorums, for a cent apiece but buyers are not flocking in response. A few boxes of roses come in every morning but not many of them are worthy of the name and the blooms like the boxes get smaller and smaller every day. Roses grown especially for summer demands are not yet in evidence to any great extent and the only stock seen in most places is the degenerate refuse that comes on the plants that have been worked hard all winter to make the pot boil for their proprietor. It has been a rather disappointing season all through for the flower grower and he feels correspondingly dejected in consequence but nevertheless he is adding another house or two again this season, from force of habit possiblyand even the sky-high price of glass will not stand in his way. If the retail man didn't make his money in the winter he cannot do it now; it is unquestionably one of the dullest seasons on record even for this dullest of all months. The Greeks, alone, do not complain and for the moment their principal occupation seems to be following around a lame member of their fraternity who was the only one left out of six who sailed on the ill-fated Burgoygne, and who is duly conscious of the unique pedestal upon which he stands in the eyes of his contemporaries.

Peter Barr, of London, famous as a daffodil specialist and entertaining talker, is in town having just come from a visit to quiet Philadelphia. He who has the honor and pleasure of a couple of hours chat with this renowned horticulturist is lucky indeed and the time passes swiftly in listening to his ready discourse. He is keeping his eyes open as he travels through the 'land of the free' and has already come to the conclusion that Americans are marvellously abstemious and temperate in their habits as compared with their Trans-Atlantic cousins, a discovery which he naturally pronounces "most extraordinary." Mr. Barr's services in the cause of horticulture are attested by the Victoria gold medal which he proudly displays on his breast.

A truly wonderful sight may be seen now at the Cottage Gardens, Queens; acres of geraniums in great variety and comprising all the new and heautiful sorts that have just been introduced. Of geraniums, cannas and carnations together there are not less than ten acres and with Mr. Ward as an escort an inspection of them is both entertaining and instructive.

THE APPROACHING CONVENTION IS A MATTER OF MUCH INTEREST.—BUSINESS IN THE PALM LEAF STAGE.—BOWLING MATTERS.—EDWIN REID'S SOUTHERN TRIP.—VIOLET CULTURE IN VIRGINIA.—A LARGE INDUSTRY EIGHT MILES FROM A RAIL-ROAD.

The Omaha convention is now the chief topic wherever the faithful are gathered and if the fare is reduced to a single rate for the round trip the number going is likely to be materially increased. The bowlers and shooters, as teams, are assured of this rate as they come under the same head as theatrical companies and baseball clubs. Were it not for the distance we believe Philadelphia would be as loyal to the S. A. F. as in former years, and, asitis, we hope to send a good delegation.

The transportation committee, of which John Westcott is chairman, has issued a circular stating the arrangements thus far made for the trip to Omaha. The Philadelphia party plans to take the Pennsylvania train leaving New York Sunday, August 14, at 2 p. m., leaving Philadelphia at 4:30 p. m., reaching Chicago at 5 p. m. Monday and leaving for Omaha fifty minutes later over the Burlington Route. The round trip fare will not exceed $41.34 upon the certificate plan, and it is yet possible that a one way fare for the round trip may be obtained, which would be about $10 less. The sleeping carcharge is $7.50 each way.

Business is in the palm leaf stage; they are growing in the greenhouses and waving in the stores. The quality of flowers is much the same as last week; no better, and in the case of Beauties worse. The stock of this rose is now at its lowest ebb, but in a week or so the summer houses will be commenced upon and the quality will gradually increase. Carnations are small and poor in color. Robert Craig & Son have a bench of Flora Hill which is still producing very fine blooms, very much better than any other white. This stock readily brings $2 per hundred. Prices of all flowers are about the same as last week.

We hear considerable about bowling these days and some scores are noted, which, if made on regulation alleys, are meritorious indeed. It is said that an average of 139 will not be sufficient to win the prize. This is not a high average for a good bowler, but as compared to averages made under the same conditions in Providence it is quite high. The match there was rolled on strictly regulation alleys; width forty-two inches; length to head pid from toe line sixty feet; pins twelve inches apart from center to center of spots; no ball to measure over twenty-seven inches in circumference. Under these conditions when a game of 200 is seored a bowler has something to be proud of. We are glad to see so much interest being taken and hope the contest will be a record breaker both in number of clubs taking part and in the scores made.

Edward Reid, of this city, has just returned from a visit to his trade in the south. He reports business in the main satisfactory, most dealers saying that they had a good season. With better railroad and express facilities much more trade could be done south of Mason and Dixon's line. Orders, particularly for funerals, have to be filled mostly on a few hours notice. As there are not many good roses or other choice stock grown in the south on account of the soil not being suitable they are compelled to depend on northern cities and complain of the many delays incident to indirect routes of shipment.

Mr. Reid paid a visit to the violet growers of Green Spring Basin, near Gordonsville, Va., about 100 miles south of Washington. This industry was first started by Miss Taylor who commenced with twelve sashes and realized from them the first season $19 per sash. Now, the number of sashes in this immediate neighborhood is about 1000, the largest grower having 200. Violets are all grown in cold frames, being planted in the frames in the spring so they suffer no change from moving in the fall. The variety grown is Lady Campbell, Marie Louise not doing well there. They had considerable trouble with black spot last season, but their greatest grievnace is the low figure to which the flowers havefallen. In many eases shipments did not return enough to pay picking and express charges and it is said that if prices are not better this winter quite a few will give up the business. The growers are mostly well to do farmers and having given the violet considerable attention they have been very successful in getting large crops of flowers. Their shipping facilities are very poor it being eight miles to the nearest railroad station and there is but one train a day. Several streams of considerable size have to be forded, there being no bridges. Violets from this section are received in great quantities during the season in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and other cities. They arrive in Philadelphia about twenty hours after they are picked and while the quality of the flowers is good as to size and color, they generally lack fragrance, and are too short stemmed.

Mr. Reid found time to try his hand at fishing off the Virginia coast and hooked a monster sea turtle, said to have weighed 350 pounds, but after consider able struggling the line broke and all that was left is the story.

SATURDAY EXHIBITION.—FINE SHOW OF HYDRANGEAS.—R. M. GREY COMES TO NORTH EASTON.—VISITORS.

The schedule did not cut much of a figure at last Saturday's exhibition; neither hydrangeas, achimenes nor gloxinias were in evidence. There were some good hollyhoeks, however, from several exhibitors, those from John L. Gardner being particularly fine. Tuberous begonia flowers from E. S. Converse and Jas. L. Little were very good. R. & J. Farquhar made an attractive display of auratum and longiflorum lilies, and there were interesting contributions of promiscuous flowers from various exhibitors, of whom the veteran Edwin Sheppard was one. When he returned to his home in Lowell he was accompanied by his bosom companion, F. L. Harris, of Wellesley, who went with him to "spend Sunday."

A superb display of large hydrangeas in tubs decorates the lawn about the residence of W. E. Doyle at Cambridge. It is

SUPPLY AND DEMAND.—ROSES ARE NOT PLENTIFUL BUT ARE FAIRLY GOOD.—SWEET PEAS A GLUT.—REINBERG'S WILL GIVE THE FLORISTS A HEARTY WELCOME.—SIGHTS AT THEIR CITY OF GLASS.—NOTES OF PERSONAL DOINGS.

During the first days of the week demand was somewhat less than for the week previous, but in the last few days the slight fall in the temperature has in a measure revived the market and things are moving along in fine style. At no time during the week has there been any considerable over supply of anything except sweet peas, and on one day N. G. Axtell, who has a place at Evanston, sold 36,000 of this favorite flower. However, each day has seen basketsful of peas passed over to the tender care of the street fakir.

The supply of carnations is growing somewhat shorter each week and the quality, as a rule, shows a corresponding deterioration. They have sold freely for the past few days but at no fancy price. With some growers the blooms are reasonably good as to color but are small in size, while with others the colors and size are equally off.

Roses, as usual, occupy the center of the stage, and, of course, Beauties play the star part. As a general thing roses are poor and searce, although from here and there come lots of excellent blooms which sell well at good prices. Beauties are said, by several growers, to be better than is usual at this season of the year, but they are quite scarce. Brides and Meteors are fairly good, but Bridesmaids do not seem to withstand the heat well and are generally undersized, although their color is good.

Reinberg Brothers have invited the Florists' Club and the trade in general to visit their great establishment at Summerdale to-morrow, Sunday, July 24, and will supply an entertainment which will probably eclipse anything which the florists ever encountered upon their numerous similar expeditions. The party will go by the one o'clock train upon the Northwestern, the hosts having provided a special car, free of expense, for their accommodation. There will be much to entertain the visitors. To begin with, the establishment of the Reinbergs is undoubtedly the largest of the kind in the country. The two brothers have over 600,000 feet of glass and devot citalnost entirely to growing roses and carnations. They will this year bench upwards of 175,000 roses, principally Beauties, and about 70,000 carnations. Planting on the benches is, of course, far progressed in the rose houses and the opportunity to inspect their wonderfully well-kept houses and well-grown plants is not one to be neglected. They aim to have all their carnations benched at the beginning of September. The houses will be made as comfortable as possible for the 200 or more who will doubtless make the tour of inspection on Sunday.

In the line of amusement there is to be a ball game between teams chosen from the players present. This feature of the afternoon is in charge of Phil Hauswirth. The splendid veranda about the home of Peter Keinberg will be utilized for the occasion, for here the refreshment tables will be spread and there will be a bountiful supply of many good things both eatable and drinkable. The party will return by trains at 5:37 or 6:53. The Messrs. Reinberg and their families are desirons of extending a particularly cordial invitation to be present to the ladies of all florists' families.

Some of the finest beds at Lincoln park this year are those of Portia carnations bordered with centaurea. Mr. Stromback says the former have been flowering quite freely of late, and they are certainly attractive as bedding plants.

The aquatics in Washington park are now very fine, nelumbiums, nymphæas and the Victoria regia flowering freely. Where the nymphæas have been given artificial heat, it is noticeable that the flowers are much larger than those grown without such aid.

A. L. Wheeler, M. D., of Mason City, Iowa, local surgeon of the Iowa Central Railway, of the Wheeler Floral Company, was a recent Chicago visitor enroute home from an eastern trip. He reports flower trade as excellent and is building a new rose house with 2500 feet of glass.

The Skabeura Dip Company reports a trade which is very gratifying; in fact they have so much business that they are unable to handle it advantageously in their new factory and must soon make still further improvements and additions to their present facilities.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, who, with his family, is in Colorado, visited the Omaha exposition while on his way west and was greatly pleased with what he saw.

A. E. Crooks, of Benton Harbor, Mich., was a recent caller upon Chicago friends and reported excellent trade upon the cast shore of Lake Michigan.

A GOOD TRAILING DUCHSIA. NEW FORGIT ME SOIS BRACE CALLAS SURSTILL'HE LORORANGE BLOSSOMS GARDEN USE OF BULLAND MOSS TULIFFA GREGE LER HELV PUR PROTERANDROUS LEOWERS

One of the best fuchsias for hanging baskets which I have seen is that known as I rance? Queen. Some very effective plants of this ariety are now to be seen here and there, and so far as known, they require no point treatment. A single I fine bulbons plants from Central Asia,

In Sarothamnus scoparius we have here a fine flowering shrub, and it is now in full bloom in the Royal Botanic Garden. When this plant is grown near the sea, it attains a height of from twelve to fifteen feet, and during May it is so thoroughly covered with its large yellow flowers that not a leaf or twig is to be seen. In the interior the plant is killed to the ground by the severe frosts which occur about once every three or four years. It likes a sandy soil.

A new forget-me-not, Myosotis alpestris stricta, sent out by F. C. Heineman of Erhurt, is attracting considerable attention, and it was awarded a silver medal at the last meeting of the Berlin Horticultural Society. The plant is erect, eight to ten inches high, and densely branched. Each individual specimen measures about three inches in diameter, a mass of bloom from bottom to top. There are three forms of the plant, varying in the color of the flowers, which are either blue, white or rose.

Besides the common callality (Richardia Ethiopica), many other aroids with dark spathes are now cultivated quite extensively. These "black callas," are much esteemed by some amateurs, although their odor in most cases is not altogether agreeable. A good plant of this class is Ischarum eximium, with small lanceshaped leaves. Arum Discoridis, however, from Asia Minor, is much more worthy of attention. In general appearance it resembles the white calla, but the spathes are deep purplish, spotted with green at the apex.

Orange blossoms for wedding decorations cannot be had here during the winter months in sufficient quantity, and to meet the demand Staphylea Colchica, is forced as a substitute, providing abundance of white flowers which in appearance and fragrance soclosely resemble the genuine article that the laity cannot tell the difference. It is said, also, that the flowers of Prunus Chinensis are made to do duty for those of the myrtle. Staphylea Colchica is a shrub which thrives very well in the open air and blooms here during May, some time before S. pinnata, the flowers of which are much like those of the lily of the valley.

For shady situations there is now used a new material, viz., Cetraria Islandra, the Iceland moss, which gives good results when used in the right way. I have seen this plant in the yards of hotels, surrounded by large buildings, where one ray of sunshine hardly every penetrates, and it produces a fine effect with the grass and gravel. A good turf is only possible in such situations when renewed frequently; flowering plants must be replaced weekly, and only such plants as Phornix Canariensis, Araucaria imbricata, etc., will survive for any considerable time. But the Iceland moss seems to prefer these conditions.

Tulipa Greigi is by far the most elegant plant of the genus in cultivation, distinguished as well by the immense size of the flowers as by the brownish tint of its flowers. It is said that the bulbs make no offsets with us, so that it is necessary to import new stock every year from Central Asia. Whether this be true or not, once imported and properly planted, the bulbs supply a profusion of excellent cutting material for many years without further attention. This is one of the parents of many desirable hybrids, all of which are easily recognized by the tinted foliage of Toreigi. It is a pity that many of these line bulbons plants from Central Asia.

collected by the famous traveler, Dr. Albert Regel, are not more generally cultivated.

Experiments have shown that the best fertilizer for fruit trees is a mixture of nitrate of potash and phosphoric potash in equal parts. It should be applied to the ground underneath the trees at the rate of four ounces to each ten square feet of space. This fertilizer is now much used in orchards as well as in vineyards and tobacco fields. Some other artificial fertilizers under various names are used in this country successfully, but all are manufactured after Prof. Wagner's formulatwelve to fourteen per cent phosphorie acid, twelve per cent nitrogen and twenty per cent potash. This compound has a remarkable effect on the flavor of fruits. Pears, for example, which under ordinary circumstances have only a low culinary value, are equal to the best table fruits when efficiently treated with the fertilizer.

Last spring I was rather surprised with the behavior of a young peach tree on the grounds here. The variety is called Amsden, and while the tree flowered well, it did not set a single fruit. On investigation it was found that there is no other peach tree in the neighborhood, and all the flowers of the tree in question proved on examination to be what botanists term proterandrous, that is, the anthers ripen and shed their pollen long before the stigma of the pistil is ready for tertilization, and thus fruits are impossible, unless pollen from some other source alights upon the reproductive organs at the proper time. But all the flowers of this tree developed at about the same time, and there was no pollen available when it was needed. As the Amsden is an American variety, it would be interesting to learn whether it is proterandrous in the United States. I found that another variety. Reinette, also bears proterandrous flowers, but this remains so long in bloom that it produces fruit every vear without external assistance. proterandry of flowers is a good argument against confining the plantations of a crop intended to fruit or seed to one variety, especially fruit plantations. The florist business for two or three years past did not rush any of us to an unconfortable degree but the boom which struck the mining camps this spring put more money into circulation and all of us are getting some of it.

In this somewhat remote section the prices for roses, lilies, chrysanthemums, vallies, etc., run from $1 to $1.50 per dozen during the winter or rainy season, and somewhat less in summer.

R. T. Robinson, of the Georgia Street Nursery, took an outing through California this spring and made the trip the opportunity to pick up some very fine stock for their establishment. They are building a large rose house, which will be a very considerable addition to their plant

The Vaneouver Floral company has a very complete range of houses and late in June 1 saw a fine lot of chrysanthemums in bloom in one of them. They said that the flower was selling well, even at this unusual season of the year.

Our own trade has been better this season than ever before, especially for ornamental and bedding plants. We have had an exceptionally large shipping trade and are still shipping large numbers of plants to the interior cities. M. J. HENRY.

Railroad Rates to Omaha.

Notwithstanding the statements to the contrary, thus far no rate has been made to the S. A. F. by the railroads from Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, norfrom points like Buffalo and Pittsburg west to Chicago, any better than the ordinary oneman thirty-day rate allowed to anybody and everybody. This is manifestly unjust to an association like the S. A. F., with an average attendance of over 600 for the past ten years. Prof. Taylor at the Providence convention certainly made broad promises of liberal rates on account of the Trans-Mississippi Exposition, and instead of realizing on them we are confronted with the highest fares ever known in connection with the annual meeting. The present Chicago-Omaha round trip being $20, it will be impossible to muster anything like a representative gathering to push this pioneer work in the Great West, but the American Florist has West, but the AMERICAN FLORIST has promised its readers the best possible rate and it still confidently expects to have the fare reduced to $14.75 or less before August 1, with proportionate reduction from all other points. Efforts are now being made to this end through trunk lines whose managers fully understand the value of such a convention to the west, and when fair rates are secured it will be ample time to select a route, and in such selection we must remember the friends who have aided us in securing these concessions, and we must ask our patrons in all sections of the country to support us in these efforts in their behalf. At the earliest opportunity the American FLORIST will announce the result, pending which please let us have your name for earliest advice by mail. We learn as we go to press that a $14.75 rate from Chicago and return is practically assured. Write us for route.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-If chrysanthemum cuttings are inserted now, will the plants bloom the coming fall? J. A. Y.

Cuttings can be rooted now, and the plants will bloom in fall. Both plants and flowers, however, will be small. On the other hand, I have seen attractive pots of chrysanthemums from cuttings inserted as late as the middle of August. In this case five or six cuttings of a variety, preferably a dwarf one, were inserted in a 4-inch pot and grown on without repotting, each cutting or plant being confined to a single stem and one flower, thus producing five or six small blooms to each 4-inch pot. #### The Trade Exhibition at Omaha.

We have received the following communication from the superintendent of the trade exhibition to be held in connection with the forthcoming convention of the national society:

I take great pleasure in presenting this circular to you and wish to call attention to a few advantages Omaha has for the S. A. F. convention and trades display. First, we have the great Trans-Mississippi Exposition which is well worth a trip aeross the continent to witness. Omaha is the metropolis of the great and growing west, the resources of which are not yet known, with people possessing plenty of money and willing to buy that which their fancy dictates. Third, our local club is in fine condition and all its members are on tip-toe waiting for a chance to show our eastern brethren what the west can do. Fourth, if you have trade in the west it will be a good idea to come out and meet us and vou will be satisfied with results, for all who are on the ground will be in a position to get new business as well as protect what they already have, and will have no cause to complain.

Our exhibition hall is in a fine location and President Gude and Secretary Stewart consider it the finest place the S. A. F. has ever had. Trusting that you will give this matter of trades display your immediate attention and will make an early application, so as to give you good space and good attention, I am, pectfully, S. B. STEWART, Superintendent Trades Display. Respectfully,

A Reply to Mr. Esler.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Brother Esler in a very pleasant way calls me a kicker and couples me up in one sentence with a Texas mule. To be sure he says my "kick is of a higher order" (does that constitute me a high kicker?), which takes away part of the sting. One question of great interest, is, where will Mr. Esler be when the scrimmage he so vividly describes, takes place? Will he be among the sheep or among the goats or safely in the rear, saying "sick 'em" when any of the contestants show signs of weakening?

However, the object of the present writing is not to take Mr. Esler to task for calling the writer names in such a charming sort of way, but to point out in one of his statements. an error says: "He kicks because the Executive Committee of the S. A. F. endeavored to turn the society to some practical use, There was no mention or thought of what the Executive Committee endeavored to do. It was what they did do which was objected to. Believing earnestly that the action was a serious mistake, it seemed proper that attention should be called to it in advance, so that the members might consider the matter carefully and prevent its being carelessly approved at a lightly attended business W. N. Rudd. meeting.

Greenhouse for Roses and Best Varieties.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-In building a greenhouse for roses, which is the best plan, the long or short span to the south? What are the best four varieties of roses to be grown in a private greenhouse? They must be white, pink, yellow and red.

I. N. T.

Much can be said in favor of both styles of rose house, and in fact each has champions great and small, but my own opinion is that when it is intended to grow on raised benches the regular threequarter span facing south is the best and most satisfactory house that can be erected.

1 would recommend as the four best varieties in their respective colors for a private greenhouse Bride, Bridesmaid, private greenhouse Bride, Bridesmaid, Perle and Souv. de Wootton. The latter variety is not equal to Meteor when both are well grown, but it is quite impossible to handle Meteor successfully in the same house with other varieties.

Robert Simpson.

St. Joseph, Mo.-The new greenhouse at Krug Park will cost $5,000. It will be 34x76 and will be 26 feet high. The plans were selected after a careful examination of the best establishments in the west, and the structure, of iron and glass, will be thoroughly modern in every par-ticular. A miniature lake is being con-structed in the park and will make a fine home for aquatics.

FLORISTS' CLUB HOLDS AN IMPORTANT SES-SION.—PLANS FOR THE ANNUAL PICNIC.— THE TRIP TO OMAHA IS ARRANGED FOR .-NOMINATIONS OF OFFICERS. - EVENING MEETINGS FOR THE SUMMER.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held last rather a light attendance considering the importance of the business transacted. The picnic committee reported on arrangements. A special train will leave the Union station at 9:15 a. m. over the Air Line for Belleville: returning, leave Belleville at 8 p. m. Tickets for theround trip are 50 cents, and 25 cents for children, and have been pretty well distributed. A cool time on a hot day is promised to all who attend.

The transportation committee having in charge the trip to Omaha reports that from present indications the rate will be $13.50 for the round trip, with the chances of a reduction when the time comes. Should fifteen decide to go, a special car will be provided for their use. Pullman sleeper berths cost $2.50 each way. The secretary will send out postals August 6, and expects to have a full list of those who are going by August 10, so as to be able to make final report and definite arrangements at the next meeting of the club, which occurs on August It is probable that all those going will leave here on the 14th over the Missouri Pacific. Parties from points connecting with St. Louis and wishing to go with our delegation, can keep posted by writing to J. W. Kuntz, $22 Olive street, who is chairman of the committee.

Nominations for officers developed quite a number of candidates for the various positions except the two that require ous positions except the two that require work. Those nominated for president are: F. C. Weber, C. C. Sanders, Wm. Young and E. W. Guy; for vice-president, Max Herzog, F. W. Ude, C. A. Juengel and Robert F. Tesson. But one nomination of the state of th tion was made for either secretary or treasurer, the present incumbents, Emil Schray and J. J. Benecke, being renominated without opposition. Trustees to the number of three will be selected from the following names: J. W. Kuntz, Wm. Meinhardt, F. W. Ude, F. J. Fillmore, J. W. Steidle and Julius Koenig, Jr.

The picnic committee was authorized to have the secretary draw a warrant on the treasurer for $75 to defray expenses. The following new members were elected: Wm. H. Hudson, J. Koenig, Jr., and Gust Eggling.

An experiment is to be tried to see if a better attendance cannot be had during the summer months. The next three meetings will be held at 8 p. m. instead of 3 p. m., as formerly, and should this innovation prove popular, it is probable that the meetings for the summer months will to held in the evening and during the remaining six months in the afternoon. The trustees were empowered to select a place for our next inceting.

A change has been made in the bowling dleys used by the club, and from now until they leave for Omaha the club will toll on the Grand alleys, corner of Sixth and Pine streets. They are regula-tion size and better than those bertothe used by the club. Several extra players are being concluded, so that we will not be short of good material. E.F.T.

Woodbury, Conn.

I notice from your Boston correspondence that at a recent exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society J. B. Shurtleff showed a sport of Mme. Salleroi geranium, with leaves more deeply cleft than the parent variety. Geo. S. Allen, of Hotckissville, Conn., has three sports of this variety from plant. One is very dwarf, like Mme. Salleroi, the foliage myrtle green and deeply cleft with a distinct dark zone. Another break is distinctly of the ivy style, with pink flowers, and the third of a less pronounced ivy stamp with varie-gated foliage. Mr. Allen is of the opinion that if the original plant had been given a fair chance it would have filled one house with sports.

We are likely soon to have a good new canna of local origin somewhat after the character of Italia and Austria, but not so coarse. It makes fine growth in the shade, and is now under trial in a position fully exposed to sunshine.

W. E. GARRAT will embark in the nursery business at Engle Grove, Iowa.

President Brooke, of the American Association, has recently added thirty-five acres to his nursery at North Topeka,

The proposition to incorporate the American Association of Nurserymen has been defeated at three separate annual conventions.

Lyman Smith, inventor of several modern methods of handling grain, seeds and farm products, died at Urbana, Ills., July 9, aged 73 years.

The big apple crop of 1896 was largely sold abroad and this year there is a very noticeable increase in the European demand for the fruit.

The Georgia Horticultural Society, of which L. A. Berckmans is treasurer, will hold its twenty-second annual meeting at Americus, August 3 to 5.

THE American Association of Nurserymen has on hand $536,70 in cash and has due from ex-treasurer N. A. Whitney, Franklin Grove, Ills., $1,491.80.

Greenfield, Ind.—James Freeman has returned from a very successful trip through the west, selling nursery stock. He reports trade as very good indeed.

CHARLES I. BROWN, of Brown Brost Nursery, Rochester, N. Y., formerly president of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, has been chosen chairman of the Monroe County Republican committee.

ELGIN, ILL.—John D. Busch, proprietor of the Bluff City Greenhouses, has purchased the stock and business of the Elgin Nursery, Seed and Bulb Company. The consideration was $6,000. On July 13 the sheriff levied on both establishments to satisfy judgments of $366, which Mr. Busch adjusted in order to be able to continue.

A Laudable Departure.

The ediet has gone forth and exhibitors of truit at the meetings of the Royal Horticultural Society of England will no longer be permitted to advertise manures or fertilizers in connection therewith. In at least one of our leading organizations, the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, we believe such a rule has long been in force, the privilege of attaching business announcements or advertising matter being withheld alike from all. It is an being withheld alike from all. excellent rule, and one which should be adopted in every exhibition designed to promote horticulture. Commenting on the recent action of the Linglish society the Gardeners' Chronicle pertinently

"The Royal Horticultural Society has in many instances of late introduced very necessary improvements in connection with horticultural exhibitions, and though the present modification may be considered a small matter, it is by no means unimportant. Horticultural shows should be made pretty and attractive as possible, and as much by the climination of unnecessary features that tend to mai the beauty of the display as by the intro-

visiting the exhibitions for the purpose of inspecting the plants and flowers to be found there are only too sensible of the untasteful prominence given to advertisement cards. But of these the greatest objection is taken to the cards placed in very close proximity to first prize collections, and suggesting, and sometimes actually asserting, that the produce has been grown by the aid of this or that manure. We need not discuss whether these are placed in such postion by the exhibitors themselves, or by their permission even. It is a fact that they are generally distributed subsequent to the prizes being awarded, and the visitor will seldom see one attached to other than the first-prize exhibit.

"Without asserting that in many cases the exhibits may never have been given any of the particular manure so closely associated with them during their exhibition period, this much is quite certain, that the manure has played a secondary part in the production of the flowers, fruits or vegetables. Is not the first prize in a competition a primary testimony to the skill of the cultivator? His attention to details, his knowledge of the plant's requirements, and his doing of necessary work at the proper time; all these are the chief factors in the successful cultivation of any plant, and were such a cultivator to substitute Mr. So and So's artificial manure for Mr. Somebody-else's preparation, the result would most likely be similar. Gardeners understand this, but the 'man in the street,' the large number of unprofessional cultivators who attend the shows, may be misled.

"It is therefore most gratifying to note that the Royal Horticultural Society has decided that such practices in future will not be permitted at their fruit show. Certain other societies which are ever ambitious of acquiring a respectable reputation would find it to their advantage to adopt a similar course in the matter. We may add, also, that we have no sympathy with the custom of displaying cards advertising the fact that certain exhibits have resulted from the employment of seeds from a particular establishment. As in the other case, the credit is usually wholly due to the cultivator, who would not be likely to make use of inferior seeds."

Worcester, Mass.

After weeks of waiting, rain has come our way at last and we anticipate no more trouble for our field crops.

I took a trip the other day, in company with another carnation enthusiast, to Northboro, and looked over H.A. Cook's establishment, which is devoted exclusively to this flower. About thirty thousand plants are in the field in splendid condition and will make unusually good stock by September. Mr. Cook intends to house about five thousand of his seedhing No. 1, which made such a good impression in Boston last winter. Nivea and baybreak will be the varieties grown most extensively. Of the newer ones, Bon Ton, Victor, Bradt, New York, Lyclina, Mrs. F. Joost, Wellesley and John Young will be given a trial this winter. At present they are all looking well in the field, Bon Ton and New York especially large and thrifty. Mr. Cook has just broken ground for a new house 26x150 and will use 14x14 glass, butted, as he is a form believe in this system of glazing.

things about town are a bit slow and or a slight improvement in stock can be noted. A few good carnations are being cut from the earlier beds planted for summer blooming and we have had a few asters. The supply of good Kaiserins is about right for the demand.

H. F. Littlefield will build a carnation house 23x50. A. H. L.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt.—C. E. Allen had 500 lights of glass broken during the recent hurricane.

PLANS FOR ENTERTAINING THE CROWD AT THE S. A. F. CONVENTION.—COMMITTEE ON FINANCE AND AMUSEMENTS -LOCAL BOWLING SCORE.

The Nebraska and Iowa Florists' Club met Thursday evening, July 14, to formulate plans for entertainment for the Society of American Florists in August. A committee on finance was appointed, consisting of the following persons: J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.; A. Donaghue, Sr., and L. Henderson, of Omaha. The committee succeeded in raising a nice sum at the meeting, and will endeavor to add to this greatly during the week.

A committee on amusement and programme was appointed as follows: L C. Chapin, Lincoln, Neb.; A. Donaghue, Jr., J. H. Hadkinson and J. Austin Shaw, of Omaha.

A new building with completely furnished bowling alleys and reception rooms, will no doubt be selected for the convention prize cup contest, as it is adjacent to the main entrance of the exposition. The following is the score for the games rolled July 18 in competition for positions on Omaha's representative

Helpful Reminders.

So far as sales are concerned July, August and September are the florists dull months but this is the season during which we should do our most careful work to bear its rich reward in the selling months of winter and early spring. Now is the time for studious, diligent endeavor; it is the season for starting things right, for "as the twig is bent, the tree inclines. Much important work for next season's crop cannot be satisfactorily accomplished at a later day than the present.

Over a large proportion of the country crops are in the ground, both for immediate use, such as sweet peas, asters, gladioli and pansies, and for winter blooming, such as violets, carnations and hydrangeas. Be careful that, except where the garden has perfect drainage where the garden has personal and affords means for deep rooting, these and affords means for moisture. When plants do not suffer for moisture. I say moisture I do not mean water exactly. People usually want water and not moisture, while the reverse is true of the vegetable kingdom; plants want moisture and not water; they will endure water at the time of a moist atmosphere. such as is usually produced by rain, but when the air is dry and hot be very careful how you water. Your plants will curl their leaves to economize in evaporation and so get through a drought better without your assistance than with it unless it is intelligently rendered. I have seen a field of tuberoses virtually cooked in hot July weather by being drenched with warm river water; the spikes of buds lay perfectly limp and the plants never recuperated. We all know that evaporation has a cooling effect; that upon a hot day the water in a porous jug is much cooler than that in a glazed vessel. We may easily apply this law of nature to our affairs and, by keeping the surface of the soil in our gardens con-stantly stirred and porous, add to the cooling, life-giving properties of the sun-parched ground. It is far better that the surface of the soil should be dry but porous than wet and hard. Very frequently much delay in blooming is caused by an injudicious summer use of the lawn liose. Many growers were quite late with their violets last season and carnations are frequently inferior at moving time. Too many of us relax our care as soon as plants are set out in our gardens, a mistake for which the following three months can hardly pay. If you cannot manage your garden properly do not use it at all, and unless you can irrigate when the welfare of crops requires it, you would better do all your growing on benches. The hest carnations and chrysantheniums are grown that way by a few who are ever watchful, but it is not my intention to advocate either plan in preference to the other, only to urge upon you the necessity of exercising as much care outdoors as under glass, and particularly to warn you of the immense amount of damage done annually by pouring water over a dry C. B. W. garden.

Spencer, Mass.—The firm of Bigelow & Tyler has dissolved, W. G. Tyler, retiring.

GUILFORD, CONN.-Smith T. Bradley, the Atwater street florist, has just completed his sixth greenhouse. He has a lot of 4,000 very fine carnation plants in the field which will be planted on the benches in the new structure. Mr. Bradley also has 2,000 chrysanthemums and 500 violets doing well for winter blooming.

Bulb Growing in North Carolina.

I am still at work endeavoring to demonstrate the adaptability of our soils and climate here to the production of flowering bulbs on a commercial scale. It has been hard for me to get those in control to realize that there is any importance to our people in anything beyond corn, potatoes and cotton, and hence my work has been retarded by lack of means for putting the work on a scale sufficiently large to attract the attention of the trade. But we have done enough to demonstrate that we can grow here with perfect success most of the bulbs now imported for winter forcing. In the case of Lilium candidum we have grown bulbs which were vastly superior to those from France and the same can be said of the Roman hyacinth. Last fall I tried a small lot of small sized and badly diseased bulbs of Lilium Harrisii. They grew healthily and though the bulbs are still small we feel sure that the matured crop will be fine and healthy. More than this, we feel certain that we can produce these in full time for early forcing. Narcissus Tazetta, the Chinese sacred bly, made bulbs here that bloomed more quickly in water than the imported ones. White Italian hya-cinths make bulbs that look like Dutch, and much larger than the Dutch we have been getting lately. Dutch hyacinths are this year larger and finer than any that will be imported if the accounts from abroad are correct. We are hoping to get the Department of Agriculture at Washington interested in this matter so that we can get them to divert a little of the money now wasted in common garden seeds to experiments that may establish a new industry here. We have, we beheve, demonstrated that the true bulb soil of our state is the medium sandy upland near the coast and not the deep sand of the sand hills where we have made some e-periments. They suffer there too much from drought. We have here a vast area of good soil in a fine climate in our lower coast region, and I am trying to get some of the northern colonists at Chadbourn to take an interest in bulbs. The great difficulty here, aside from lack of experience, is the fact that it requires some expenditure of capital to get started on a commercial scale and our people are poor and indisposed to take risks. If some of the northern dealers would put a large lot of stock here the matter could soon be settled, and the industry put on its feet. That we can produce the bulbs I am satisfied beyond a doubt, and that we can grow them at a profit to the growers we feel quite certain.

HOT WEATHER PRODUCES ITS EFFECT ON STOCK AND PRICES AS WELL AS DEMAND. -TAPLIN'S HOME-GROWN AZALEAS.-OTHER GOOD STOCK.—BEARD BROTHERS LOSE BY HAIL.

We have been having unusually hot weather and it has caused deterioration all along the line. The quality of stock has gone down; so have prices and so has the call for flowers. Good flowers are so searce that florists all have a hard time in getting blooms with which to trim their windows. Japanese lilies are helping out some.

S. Taplin has some home grown azaleas. hundred plants in all, which effectively controvert the old story that good azaleas can not be grown in this country. These plants were propagated from cuttings and some of them are now perfect pyramids ten to twelve feet high and six feet through. They are covered with leaves from the tub up and are per-tect plants in every way. Many of the tect plants in every way. Many of the plants are in 12 and 14 inch pots and are four or five feet in height, trimmed to perfect cones. Several standards have stems four feet long and heads of almost equal diameter. They would make a grand show in any florist's window. Mr. Taplin also has a fine lot of cattleyas, most of them in 8 inch pots and in good condition. He claims that they can be grown to good profit if given proper attention. He has some large and fine looking Cologyne cristata and also grows evpripediums well.

Our recent hail storm skipped over the city and only touched two florists but it hit them hard. Beard Bros. lost $300 and S. Taplin had very little whole glass left after the storm passed. Neither had insurance.

At the great race for the Merchants and Manufacturers Stake this week, the winning horse was presented with a floral blanket. It was a well executed piece of work and made a great hit with the crowd.

BURLINGTON, IA.-John Nordean has a most attractive home and place of business. When he started, four years ago, he bought land which was anything but attractive, but has since filled it in and made it beautiful. Mr. Nordean learned floriculture at the royal gardens in Sweden and in Berlin.

Rochester N. Y.

We are sadly in need of rain, and outdoor flowers are getting scarcer and poorer every day, and although the demand is not very brisk at present our florists are not at all pleased with the quality of stock available.

A visit to a new addition to the nurseries of Ellwanger & Barry, situated several miles south of the original grounds, shows plainly what can be accomplished by thorough cultivation of the soil under the existing unfavorable weather conditions. Like all the numerous large farms which this old reliable firm has acquired during the last half century, these grounds were first systematically and thoroughly drained at a considerable expense, before any attempt was made to plant young The grounds are now kept perfeetly free from weeds; cultivators and plows go through the rows every week and when necessary a gang of men follow with hoes. About twenty five or thirty acres are devoted to hardy roses, one and two years old, and Mr. Ellwanger, who invited me to accompany him on his daily tour of inspection, repeatedly called my attention to the vigorous growth of various varieties as we passed along through the narrow driveways between the blocks. "Given new soil for roses and we can get the growth every time, never mind the dry weather," was one of the remarks of the venerable expert. "We have roses in older parts of our nurseries, which in growth compare very favorably with these, but you must remember that we adhere to our practice of changing about; resting the ground by introducing farm crops and grass for some years, treating the land to liberal quantities of well decayed stable manure before we again use it to grow nursery stock. Still I always prefer new land for roses."

Although the regular rose season is past weeks ago, thousands of perfect flowers are to be seen yet in these fields. The soil, though naturally of rather stiff loam, is now loose and friable, with plenty of fibre intermixed, just like the best material we may use for potting. Constant stirring has broken up all the lumps, and in such soil we may expect ample root formation and strong growth. Several gangs of men were busy budding, for about one half of the roses grown here are on Manetti stock. The selection of scious and buds is entrusted to the foreman of the ornamental department, who is under strict orders to use only the very strongest and best developed buds, for Mr. Ellwanger has found, in his long experience, that a vigorous bud on a vigorous stock always produces a good sala-ble plant, while inferior buds produce correspondingly interior stock in spite of good culture. Formerly, for many, many years, all the buds were selected by the old gentleman himself, and it was with reluctance that he relinquished the task. Even now, at nearly $2 years of age, he shows the keenest interest in this important work, and quite frequently be ersonally supervises the selection of buds and gives acceptable advice to the man in charge. Nearly all the rest of this tertile preceof ground is planted to young shrubs, of last summer's propagation Some few thousands of fruit trees are onthe farther end, and every plant or tree is perfect and shows the beneficial effects of good, well-prepared soil and thorough cultivation.

BUSINESS BUMPS THE BOTTOM. - SWEET PEAS AND CARNATIONS.—ANDERSON'S DECORATIONS,-PLANS FOR THE EXPEDI-TION TO OMAHA. - NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Trade at present is even too dead to bury. Occasionally a funeral order awakens the echos in the deserted stores and I did hear of one warm weather wedding for which the floral work was a bunch of eighteen roses; I believe there was some talk of having them photo-graphed. Sweet peas are abundant but the stems are short owing to the dry Carnations are still good and weather. about the best things we get.

The B. Y. P. U. held a convention here last week and S. A. Anderson had charge of the decorating. It is needless to say he used some palms but the work was effective. You can find a good display of palms, ferns, pond lilies and turtles in the different florists' windows all arranged differently.

The boys are making preparations to go to Omaha and if every other city is as well represented as I think Buffalo will be, the attendance will be good.

The florists who made lawn vases and bedding work their specialty for May and June can now be approached by the ordinary retail dealer without sending in his card as they are now busy only in making out bills. In almost every store now one or more of the employes are enjoying a much needed rest and as all the stores with one or two exceptions close at 6:30 p. m. the others have no reason to complain until their turn comes.

As yet we have made no preparation for our annual outing. Somebody is tired and if only the same degree of activity is shown in preparing for the flower show as there is in getting the boys together for meetings and outings we all know what the consequences will be—a small crowd

Prof. Cowell, of the Botanic garden, called the other day and seemed very inhilant.

TRADE IS DULL.-LIGHT RAINS PROVE MOST WELCOME.—FLORISTS' CLUB TO DISCUSS OPENING A COMMISSION HOUSE.—LUDWIG DESIGNS A FLORAL FLAG. -NOTES.

Business continues in the same quiescent state that it has been in for the past three weeks, there being no general trade to speak of. There have been several rains since last report, and, although not near enough, they have helped the outdoor stock immensely.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists'

Club will hold its regular monthly meeting on Monday evening, July 25, and will discuss the advisability of opening a wholesale cut flower commission house here. The growers are especially invited to be present, as they are very directly interested. It is hoped there will be a large attendance.

Louis Schmidt, who has been with J. L. Wyland for several years, writes from Boulogne-Sur-Mer, France, of his safe arrival in good health. Mr. Schmidt will visit many of the large establishments in France and Germany before he returns.

At one of the recent numerous flag raisings, a young man, sick with consumption, requested the privilege of pulling the flag to the masthead. A few days after he died, and a floral flag was ordered as a funeral piece. Gustave Ludwig furnished it. The pole and knob were made of Daybreak carnations, the stripes of white and red carnations, the field of cornflower and the stars of tuberoses. Over 7,000 carnations were required to complete the beautiful design.

Wm. G. Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind., visited here this week. REGIA

BUSINESS IS QUITE DULL .- REBUILDING BY SUNDERBRUCH'S SONS. - THEO, BOCK'S NEW HOUSES. -GREENHOUSES FOR SALE.

Business continues very quiet, and our wholesale houses have but very little to do, as with the retailers funeral work constitutes about the only trade.

Nearly all of our growers are now busy repairing and painting. Messrs. A. Sunderbruch's Sons are remodeling six or eight houses and giving their entire plant a general overhauling. Theo, Bock, of general overhauling. Theo, Bock, of Hamilton, O., is erecting two model houses, each 16x100, one for carnations and the other for roses. The glass is 16x24, and the Challenge ventilating machine will take the place of the old-fashioned sash lifter. The posts are red cedar and the balance is cypress. The Lockland Lumber Company furnished the woodwork. Mr. Bock believes in using good material, and finds it cheapest in the long run.

Owing to the death of Anthony Fisher, Mrs. Fisher wishes to retire from business, and the stock is now for sale. It is said to be in good condition and offers a rare chance for a live man. H. Schwarz.

Terre Haute, Ind.

A sight leaving a lasting impression upon the the mind was the funeral of a volunteer who died in eamp and was brought home for burial. The obsequies were inspiring. The entire city united in paying the last tribute of respect to a townsman, to a patriot, to an American eitizen. The floral designs were numerous and very elaborate and were furnished by John G. Heinl and Lawrence Heinl.

This is the time of the year when florists, in spite of the dull season, seem the busiest. Between replanting and putting the houses in good condition there is little time to waste. Lawrence Heinl will soon commence rebuilding four of his houses, making each 10x85 and thoroughly modern in every particular. Mr. Heinl has, among other things, a fine stock of Bostoniensis and cordata compacta.

John G. Heinl contemplates making some extensive improvements and additions. His stock of Nephrolepis cordata compacta, of which he grows a large quantity, will surpass even that of last season. Mr. Heinl reports an increased demand for this tern, both for his wholesale and retail trade.

Henry S. Graham made a flying trip to Indianapolis one day recently. His houses are in the best of condition, having been equipped with all the modern improvements, while the grounds surrounding them prove conclusively that Mr Graham is a landscape gardener of full thirteen-inch calibre.

Cowan Bros., the Spruce street florists, have met with success during the comparatively short time they have been in business. They do a general trade, making decorative work one of their specialties. Fred, Wunker & Sons are also well pleased with the results of this season's work. Mr Wunker, who has been on the Помо, sick list, is improving.

TEN DOLLAR REWARDS FOR THE DETEC-TION OF FLOWER THIEVES .- CITY PARKS ARE VERY BEAUTIFUL. - THE CLUB'S ANNUAL OUTING .- BOWLING WAS THE FEATURE.

At the July meeting of the Florists' Club another flower thief was reported brought to justice, much to the satisfaction of everybody excepting the club's treasurer, who thinks it rather hard on his funds to pay out so many ten dollar rewards. In this case, however, he was consoled by the generous offer of Messrs. Huntington & Page, our seedsmen, to pay the reward, which was thankfully accepted by the club. Huntington & Page say the numerous thefts committed considerably affected their bulb trade.

The flower displays at our city parks, now at their best, are much admired. Garfield park especially presents a most beautiful appearance this season. This park but a few years ago almost unknown to the general public is now the most beautiful as well as popular of all the recreation grounds. The annual picnic of the Florists' Club was held at White River Park, July 6. As usual bowling was the main source of amusement. The alleys of the park are considered very fine, and prizes were won by John Hartje, Jas. Hanson, Frank Saak, Wm. Hartje, Henry Rothennal and A. Pahud, in the order named. Although the majority had a pleasant time at the picnic, it was the prevailing opinion that for a family outing a more suitable place might have been selected. The ladies and those gentlemen who do not bowl felt the scarcity of other amusements, and also of shade.

Madison, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its regular monthly meeting in Masonie Hall on Wednesday evening, July 13, thirty-one members being present. Pres. Wm. Duckham, in opening the session, said that owing to family sickness he would have to leave and request Vice-Pres. J. Jones to take the chair. Before vacating, however, he desired to express Mr. D. Willis James' appreciation and thanks to the society for the arch they had erected and for the part they had taken generally in the parade and celebration in his honor on July Fourth. The reason for this was that Mr. James bought several acres of land in the lest part of the town, pulled down the old structures, and has created a most beautiful park. To show their appreciation of this gift the townspeople decided to have a parade in honor of this benevolent citizen. Fully 25,000 people were on hand, the gardeners and florists turning out to a man, with a splendid banner.

The monthly exhibition was as good as usual. In the vegetable class J. Robertson swept the decks, P. Cox came in with a creditable display of perennials and annuals. E. Reagan had seventy-four and A. Herrington forty-five named varieties of wild flowers, and Wm. Duckham staged a superb collection of sweet peas. There were many other miscellaneous exhibits not in competition. It had been arranged to have a "Rose night," but the lecturer failed to appear. Mr. Herrington filled the gap with an impromptu discourse on the habitation and requirements of wild flowers. He compared the wild flora of the United States with that of Europe, and, taking specimens, he spoke of the failures and successes he had met with in endeavoring to establish them in England.

Under the head of new business J. Jones proposed that the society take an excursion to Glen Island in September. This was put to a rising vote and met with a unanimous response. Six applicants were proposed for membership.

The Right Cypress for Greenhouse Material.

Have you heard of Cypress Greenhouse Material that has not been satisfactory? If you have it does not tollow that Cypress is not the best lumber to use. There is White Cypress, Yellow Cypress and Red Cypress; there is Cypress that grows on the high lands and Cypress that grows in the swamps.

All of these different kinds are not suitable for greenhouse purposes. Do you know which kind is best and do you know that kind when you see it? If not you would better buy trom those that do know and will deliver exactly what they sell. We introduced Cypress for greenhouse construction and pushed it to the front. We know all about it. For fifteen years we have made a specialty of furnishing it, and during this time we have built up a reputation that we can not afford to jeopardize. We send out the best only.

In view of the excellent rate of farenow granted by the railroads, it is both hoped and anticipated that there will be a large attendance at the S. A. F. convention. The Chicago, Milwankee and St. Paul railroad has been selected as the route from Chicago to the convention city. The fare will be $14.75 for the round trip, and many of the eastern delegations will consolidate at Chicago for the trip west, leaving over this line August 15 at 6:15 Special cars have been secured, and berths will be reserved upon request, addressed to the undersigned, care of the AMERICAN FLORIST.

J. V. MERRION, Vice Pres. for Illinois.

Hardy Herbaceous Plants.

Looking over our herbaceous border we notice the following plants in flower during the week ending July 23. Achillea The Pearl which we have been cutting for the past three weeks. All florists should have a good patch of this most useful plant. It is entirely hardy, exceptionally free flowering, and the flat open heads of pure white double flowers last a long time when cut, and associate well with other flowers. Although a free spreader it can be kept in bounds by running a spade around the clumps, or space allotted to it. Anthemis tinctoria is a little gone by but is still making a good show. should be cut back as soon as the flowers are over; another crop of flowers in September will be the result. If allowed to seed it will soon become a bad weed. Aster acris, a native of Southern Europe is just commencing to bloom; the individual flower heads are rather ragged looking; white suffused with lilac. Astilbe Chinensis is past its best, but the foliage will be handsome till frost. For a damp place this is very fine, and although the flowers are not very bright (pale pink), the long graceful spikes are distinctive and attractive, especially on large, established plants. Campanula Carpathica, blue and white, are very pretty now, and the large blue and white bells of Campanula (Platycodon) grandiflora varieties are showing up finely.

Cephalaria alpina, sometimes catalogued as Scabiosa alata, has been very beautiful for the last three weeks, and seems likely to last in beauty for some time. The clear sulphur flowers are very distinct. C. Tartarica seems to be identical with C. alpina. Cimicituga racemosa, closely allied to the activas has very handsome foliage and racemes of feathery white flowers. When well estab-lished, the plant when in flower is three to four feet high and the foliage spreads to about the same width. Like the astilbes this requires a moist place. Coreopsis grandiflora is another plant that should be cut back before seeding, so as to seeme another crop of flowers later in the season. We consider this the best of the family for cutting.

Delphinium Chinensis varieties have been flowering for the last three weeks, and will continue to do so till frost, if not allowed to seed. There are white, light blue, dark blue and some intermediate shades. Ervugium amethystinum is still very fine, and with several plants there is generally a succession of flower spikes from July 1 till frost. The stems as well as the flower heads are of a beautiful metallic blue. Euphorbia corrollata is a very distinct looking plant; it will continue to flower until frost. The white flowers are arranged in whorls and work in well with others. Echinops ruthenica Ritro. the globe thistle, has very distinctive round heads of metallic blue flowers, which last a long time when cut if kept dry. Gypsophila paniculata is very fine now; a large plant several feet in diame ter makes a pretty background for some of the dwarfer plants. G. acutifolia, just commencing to flower, is good for eutting, but hardly showy enough for the border. The flowers are larger than those of G. paniculata but more scattered.

Helenium Boulanderii is beginning to make a good show; it is not so stiff in habit as H. autumnale, and the flower heads have very distinct dark brown discs. Heliopsis kevis is in flower and will continue to make a good show for several weeks with its golden yellow flower heads; it should not be allowed to seed, or it will become a bad weed. 11. Pitcherii with us is not distinct enough to make it worth while to have both on the border. Hemerocallis disticha fl. pl. we consider the best of the double hemerocallis; the flowers are terra cotta, shading to fawn, and are several shades brighter than the other double varieties. Thunbergii is very fine: its pale lemon vellow, sweet scented flowers make a distinet feature in the border. Lychnis vespertina fl. pl. is still making a good showing with its pure white night-scented If cut back soon now, there will flowers. be another crop of flowers when cool weather sets in again. Lythrum roscum superbum has been in flower for some weeks; its long spikes of bright rosy red flowers are distinct and produced continuously during the summer and fall. Monarda didyma, the best of its family, is at its best now, and will continue to brighten up the border with its deep red flowers for several weeks. It is good for cutting. (Enothera Youngii the best of the taller onotheras, will continue to open its bright yellow flowers for some weeks yet unless the soil becomes too dry. Œ, riparia is quite as continuous, and is fine for the front row of the border. Pentstemon barbatus Torreyii keeps in flower longer than most of the pentstemons, and its long spikes of searlet, tubular flowers are unique.

Phlox suffrutieosa varieties are still very beautiful; they are not so set look ing as the P. decussata sorts, start flowering two or three weeks carlier, and if the flower spikes are cut oft will bloom again later in the season. The range of color is from almost pure white to dark pink. 1', decussata has started to flower and will continue to make the border look bright till fall. We have over 150 varieties on trial this season, including some of Lemoine's latest novelties, and will describe the newest and most distinct as they come into flower. Sedum spectaas they come into nower. Senim spectabilis fol, var. has very handsome golden variegated foliage, which keeps its color well from spring to hard frost. Thy mus montanus albus and T. montanus coccincus should be more generally grown; they make a very dense carpet of green, and for several weeks are covered with their small flowers. T. languinosus forms carpets of heary foliage, and is worth growing on that account; the flowers are not so showy as those of the two just mentioned. being of a dull lilae color. T. vulgaris argenteus and T vulgaris aureus have very pretty variegated foliage, and are good for sunny, dry situations. We find T. vulgaris argenteus the hardiest and the variegation is well fixed. T. vulgaris aureus is liable to go back to the green form it in a shady position or rich soil.

Viola cornuta and its white variety have a second crop of flowers, and are helping to make the border bright. Verbaseum nigrum we find the most satisfactory of its family; it started to flower two weeks ago, and by cutting off the flower spikes when over, a succession will be obtained for the rest of the season. It is a true percunial, which is more than we can say for the rest of the verbaseums.

Roses at the Arnold Arboretum.

Hybrid roses are not reliably hardy in the United States. True, there are some localities where they succeed tolerably well, but in most places their culture is continued under discouraging conditions. A large number of plants never get strong a large number of plants never get strong enough to bloom well and those that do are short lived. The question of estab-lishing or creating a new breed better suited to our climate has engaged the attention of specialists for a long time. Among others Mr Jackson Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, has given much time and thought to the subject. At first he believed it was a question of stock for grafting, and he has experimented largely with native and other reliably hardy species. R. multiflora has reliably hardy species. been tried with most satisfactory results, s) far as concerns vigor. At first stem grafting was practiced, but this has proved unsatisfactory on account of suckers; roots alone are now used. Some eyes of Paul's Carmine Pillar on roots have grown four feet this season. Florists complain that tea roses are too rank on the multiflora stock and that the flowers are soft. So much for stocks.

The idea that hybrid roses could be made hardy by grafting on a hardy stock has been abandoned. Mr. Dawson now considers a new type necessary. This he is working for, and showing what cross broeding and selection will do, we need only look at Mr. Manda's hybrids and Mr. Dawsou's with R. Wichuraiana. In choosing R. Wichuraiana and General Lacqueminot, two very distinct roses are brought together. Only an innate love for experiment could suggest such a proceeding some curious breaks, and some valuable ones, havecome from these crosses. The indications are plain that by following them up, infusing hybrid blood, and reverting occasionally for vigor we shall be we hybrids hardy enough to remain unincired by any ordinary trost. There is a host to work with Probably Crimson Fambler, in which we have remarkable color, and constitution, will help us to a new type of trellis rose

mented upon. The Dawson Wichuraiana and Jacqueminot, a climbing cluster rose with semi-double pink flowers, is a better trellis rose than the Crimson Rambler, though not equal to it in color. Wichuraiana and rugosa is a delicate single rose with trailing habit—a splendid cover plant. Rugosa and Jacqueminot makes a fine bush with deep crimson flowers. Wichuraiana and Jacqueminot has produced two good double varieties almost equal to a hybrid in build of flower; one is a delicate peach, the other deep pink; both are of vigorous constitution. Numerous crosses were made this season, and some interesting information was gathered as to the manner of making them. If the flowers were left on the plants, the bees would get all the pollen before the operator, so they were brought under glass and ripened. A brush is considered wasteful, so the point of a knife is employed in collecting and applying the pollen. Boston Belle, an old rose of good constitution, was extensively used this season among these hybrids. Seedlings of Wichuraiana crossed by China roses will be watched with interest; they are making pretty plants, all more or less creeping after the habit of the seed parent, but showing much variety in foliage, some being dark like the pollen parent.

Beantiful landscape effects can be made with the species of roses. From R. cinnamomea, R. spinosissima, and R. blanda, to R. hucida and R. setigera, the prairie rose, gives us a long season of bloom. A month ago R spinosissima was superb. To-day R. setigera is at its best, the flowers changing from deep rose to white as they mature, make a splendid effect. The rare R. lucida alba is being propagated by thousands; it is a most deserving acquisition. I should not forget to mention some hybrids with R. multiflora and the Dawson. Some large bushes of these have been blooming in the nursery for a month past. From a decorative point of view they are far superior to the common R. multiflora. Immense trusses of semi-double white flowers, occasionally tinted, terminate the stems, forming bouquets in themselves. T.D.H.

Rust of Garden Pinks.

The garden pinks (Dianthus species) are sometimes badly rusted. Not long ago while in a commercial garden the ago with the acondition of the various sorts of pinks. The engraving shows, nearly natural size, three leaves that were then gathered. This rust while affecting the whole leaf and causing it to lose its green color, develops conspicuous circular patches of pimples. There are two of these patches upon the under surface of the leaf to the left hand, three in the middle and one upon the right hand leaf. A careful inspection of the clusters will show that the pimples are more or less in concentric circles, giving a peculiar appearance and one that does not admit of an easy explanation.

In connection with this rust there frequently arises the question of its identity with that upon the carnation. The pinks and carnations are very closely related, but here is a case where the fungi attacking hosts of the same genus are widely separated. To the naked eye the rust of the pinks and carnations resemble each other even to the circular arrangement of the pimples above noted, but here the likeness ends for with the compound microscope the fungi are seen to be so unlike as to belong to different genera. That of the carnations is Uromyces caryophyllinus Schr., while the pink rust is Puccinia arenariæ Schm.

It is therefore a pleasure to assure all interested in the question that while both are genuine rusts and flourish upon hosts that are as closely related as cousins, so to speak, yet they are not propagated the one from the other. The rust of the pinks is an old enemy in this country and has a wide range of plants upon which it grows, both cultivated and wild, as the sandworts, chickweeds, corn cockle and sometimes the bouncing Bet.

Because of its wide range of hosts, some of them being common weeds, there is but little hope of extermination. two points here being to give information upon a pest of the ornamental grounds and secondly to assure those who may have it that their carnations need not be expected to contract rust from other plants of the pink or any other family.

Byron D. Halsted. other family.

Carnations.

Another place in Lancaster that is devoted almost exclusively to carnations is that of Henry Rohrer, an establishment that is too large to describe in one paper, so we will divide it into two sections.

One range of his place is built with the houses separate, with a working space of three feet between them. The roofs are made of sash of regulation size, one of which is stationary and the next one movable and so on over all the houses. In the winter these movable sash are used as ventilators and in the summer they are taken off entirely.

His object in building his houses in this way was to have enough ventilation to grow the plants in them all summer and thus avoid the time and expense of transplanting them in the fall. The sides of the houses, although they are not over three leet high, interfere greatly with the free circulation of air, even with one half the roof taken off, and this lack of eirculation is plainly noticeable in the plants, for while they are of good size and growing mody they lack a certain character in strength and vigor compared with those grown outdoors. This lack of vigor will be made up for to a great extent later in the season when they get the cool weather to grow in and do not have to be replanted.

There is no question but that this set of houses is going to be a decided success the coming winter unless something unforescen turns up. It will be the first winter since they have been built that they will be a success financially as other seasons they have been too late in coming into full crop, the bulk of the blooms coming after the holidays. Some exceptionally fine flowers have been cut in these houses, but on account of the plants being small and rather weak until they had been brought along by regular greenhouse treatment they came entirely too late.

Profiting by past experience, Mr. Rohrer had early struck cuttings for this season's planting that were in due time potted up and grown into fair sized plants, better ones than many growers I know of have when they plant their houses in the fall. These were planted in the houses as soon as they could be emptied this spring, with the result that they can be brought into bloom whenever they are wanted this fall.

One reason why these plants are in as good condition as they are to-day is because Mr. Rohrer has had several years' experience, of which he made good use, and gives his plants careful attention and the best of culture, such attention and culture as can only be given by one who has had experience and keeps his eyes open all the time.

With a drought extending over ten weeks this summer, these plants had the advantage of water when they needed it and this makes the contrast between them and outdoor plants all the more striking. Yet, with all this in their favor and the condition they are in, for myself I would prefer good outdoor stock for my next winter's cut of flowers.

These are not model houses for the summer growing of earnations, but they show what can de done, in that they are going to be better than the average set of carnations this winter.

BEST OF ALL TOMATO.

Best of All Tomato.

The specimens from which the accompanying illustration was taken were grown by Edwin Lonsdale, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. Best of All is an exceedingly prolific variety and a capital sort for forcing under glass. Here are the weights of the fruits in one cluster:  $10^{1}$ ,  $10^{1}$ ,  $6^{3}$ ,  $9^{1}$ ,  $8^{1}$ ,  $7^{3}$ ,  $8^{1}$ ,  $7^{1}$ ,  $4^{3}$ , total,  $72^{3}$ , ounces. From all appearances Sutton's claims for this tomato are well founded. They are as follows: "When first offering this fine tomato in

"When first offering this fine tomato in 1895 we especially recommended it as the most profitable variety that could be grown for market purposes, and increased experience has confirmed our opinion. It sets very freely and is an immense cropper, producing heavy bunches of fruit at short intervals all over the plant. In a given space we question whether any other variety would produce so great a weight of fruit. A peculiarity of this tomato which has attracted the attention of experts is that the first cluster is borne very low on the stem. The color is a deep scarlet; form admirable; good size, and the fruit is so solid that very little seed is produced."

I do not know whether any one has tested Best of All in comparison with the Lorillard which is at present considered our best forcing variety. When selected stock of the Lorillard is available it is hard to beat, but in Best of All there are evidently some additional points of excellence that make it a welcome addition to our list of forcing tomatoes for market purposes.

Odontoglossum Prince of Wales.

This superb variety of Odontoglossum crispum, exhibited at the Royal Horticultural Society's meeting of June 14, by Hugh Low & Co., of London, was awarded a silver medal and the coveted first-class certificate. This species of odontoglossum, in its numberless exquisite forms, has given us many pleasant surprises, but certainly none more wonderful than the present variety. The individual flower measures nearly five inches across, and the labellum is totally abnormal in its size of  $1^31\times1^11$  inches. The mai in its size of 194x114 inches. The substance of the blooms, like their size, is quite exceptional. The specimen exhibited had twelve pseudo bulbs and four leads. It was imported from Colombia by the Messrs. Low about four years ago, but while thriving satisfactorily at all times, it had never bloomed until this occasion, when it produced one spike with twelve flowers. The plant has passed into the orchid collection of Baron Schroeder, at Egham, Surrey, which is world-renowned, especially for its representatives of the genus odontoglossum.

Utica, N. V.—William Wagner, the florist of Milford, formerly of this city, has been called here by the serious illness of his father, Henry Wagner. Stephen Whitton, of Whitton & Sons, was kicked by a horse July 20. His left arm was broke and his head was badly ent.

THE REINBERG ESTABLISHMENT, SUMMERDALE, CHICAGO.

Chicago Florists' Outing.

Reinberg's judy feast will be er be forgot. By those who were there or those who were not." **Dean Saitt.**

The excursion of the Chicago florists to Reinberg's has passed into history as the most successful of all the expeditions of the Florists' Club and its friends. The guests began to arrive at the great greenhouses at Summerdale early in the afternoon of the appointed day, Sunday, July 24, and a constant stream of visitors flowed up the incline to jovial Peter Reinberg's broad lawn until the dusk of evening fell. It was a good-natured, interested, perspiring crowd, and outnumbered any similar pleasure party of florists. It is estimated that fully 250 were present, and a pleasing feature was the participation of an unusual number of ladies.

A considerable number of the guests reached Summerdale by the Northwestern road, leaving Chicago at 1 o'clock. but a party of more than half a hundred arrived at the scene upon two great tally-hos, each drawn by six prancing horses. As one of those who availed himself of the former conveyance remarked, the dead ones went by rail, while the "warm members" went as live men should, a jocularity particularly pointed, as the Reinberg brothers proyided free for those coming by rail a specal car attached to the daily train to Fost Hill Cemetery, which chanced to be the only train available at the desired hour E. I. Winterson conceived the tally housen and took it to its finish Those who availed themselves of his invitation to be of the party assembled at Vaughan, McLellar & Winterson's at noon and despate the heat of the day Winterson's at ar joyed themselves during the two hours drive as do boys at a circus. The turn were decorated, and their gaidwas heightered by the bright dresses of Peter Fernberg, bit, forty and friendly, we' omed the arrivals and bade them as an them serves of whatever Reinberg peter ion they saw that pleased them ever if it bere the brand of his brother therage. But there was there to speak for his self-and it is shis busy day, as he left be there are done which would add to the pleasures of their guests.

There were refreshments for all and at all times. Tables were set upon the broad verandas and a tempting collation was spread, a choice assortment of eatables all the way from sandwiches to ice cream. There were cigars and other concomitants for an outdoor entertainment for men. The base ball game was a feature of the afternoon. The contest was between the city men and the "farmers," as the former dubbed the players who do not not earn their living by labor in stores. However, three of the city boys were compelled to turn countrymen for the occasion to fill up the opposing team. They found great delight in defeating the "dudes" by a score of 13 to 12 in five innings. Here are the teams:

CITY TEAM. POSITION. COUNTRYMEN. E. Winterson....Pitcher.....Jno. Sahnon Jas. Curran.....Catcher......Matt Smith Jno. Zeck.....Short Stop.....C. Pruner W. F. Kyle....First Base....F. Hansen P. Hauswirth.Second Base....Joe Dunn W. Kreitling. Third Base.....C. Hanner L. Kelley....Left Field.....H. Smyth C. Balluff...Center Field....C. Hughes C. Erne.......Kight Field....J. Beckman

It was Ed. Winterson's busy day, and it is a safe prediction that he worked harder than he ever did before, although he leads an active life. Had Anson found Ed. the "Old man" would have saved his job as head of the Chicago league team by virtue of Ed.'s pitching and base running. His sliding to first base was a feature of the game. But even at that the team did not win. "Jimmy" Curran was the hardest worked man in the eighteen, unless it was Matt Smith. These two gentlemen can sympathize with the Spanlaids, for they found it no fun to stop connon balls. Phil. Hauswirth, who was the moving spirit in arranging the game, played harder than he could be induced to work and received a bump at second base which is far from ac pleasant memory. Walter Kreitling, at third base, was a star, for he never muffed the F. Hansen and John Salmon wore regular base ball suits, the only ones on the field, and were jocularly accused of being professionals. They played as though they had worn their clothes before H. Smyth, for Beckman, C. Pruner, Joe Dunn and all the others did their share of over-exertion for the amusement of the crowd. The grand stands were all "bleachers," but the friends of the players lined the sidewalks, although they made hard, hot seats, and enjoyed the sport to the fullest degree. One of the striking things of the game, aside from the batsmen, was the coaching of the runners, a duty in which the crowd assisted with many a pertinent bit of personal advice.

After the ball game the refreshments sustained an attack which was simply irresistible.

But, after all, the most interesting part of the day of pleasure was the trip through the great greenhouses of the two brothers. Nowhere in America, and probably not in the world, is there such an expanse of glass devoted almost entirely to the growing of roses and carnations for the cut flower market. Here are 600,000 square feet of transparent roofing, and the investment in glass alone is a sum equal to a small fortune. The season is, of course, the wrong one to see the immense establishment at its best, but were the long benches absolutely empty the place would still be well worth a visit.

As it is, the tourists found house after house, so many that the proprietors themselves are not able to tell the exact number, planted to thrifty young roses. The work of housing approximately 175,000 plants has been virtually just completed, although a number of the houses have been occupied for several weeks and some of the plants will soon be sending first-class blooms to market. Several houses are still the homes of roses which have bloomed constantly for many months, and which are still supplying very fair flowers for the wholesale house at 51 Wabash avenue, which Archie Spencer manages for the two big growers.

The Ecinbergs grow more roses than any firm in the west. They make American Beauty their leader and are very successful with them. They have benched over 50,000 Beauties. Bridesmaid is second numerically, as the plantation is about 35,000. Meteor, Bride, Perle and Kaiserin follow in the order named. They have planted a few La France, but have discarded both Carnot and Testout. They also have small plantations of several of the new roses and the ones less valuable commercially.

An incident may be cited which will in a measure illustrate the extent of this rose growing establishment. It is no small task to provide supports for a large number of plants, and here a force of men is now at work straightening telegraph wire and cutting it into four and one-half and five-foot lengths for this purpose. The wire is what dealers know as No. 8, and usually sells at $21 a ton, but the Reinbergs recently placed an order for eight tons, are hauling it themselves, and secured the lot for $1.44.

The fields of carnations were a source of much pleasure to the visitors, most of whom tramped across the six broad acres of plants and admired their healthful condition. In only one spot in the big field is there any trace of rust or any plants which are not in the best of shape for their various purposes. A small part of the land is somewhat lower that the rest, and here the water stood during the June rains and damaged a few hundred plants, but a few hundred is such an inconsiderable portion of the many thousands in the field that they are hardly noticeable.

It is said that nowhere in the middle west is there soil better adapted to the outdoor growing of carnations than is that at Reinberg's. It is sandy, light and porous, and the plants invariably make strong growth in it, but when it comes time to house them it is necessary to prepare a heavier soil. The field blooming carnations are among the most attractive features of the place. The thousands of plants which are now blooming are well developed, despite the fact that permitting them to bloom prevented pinching them back, and in most varieties the blooms are large and of good color.

One of the best of the summer flowers they find to be the Kohinoor, of which they have 18,000 now blooming. This variety gives splendid large pure white flowers when grown in the open air, but under glass it comes variegated and is of little value, consequently only enough are housed to supply cuttings in late November. The cuttings are in pots until late April or May and are planted out as soon as possible. They grow strong stems which need no support. About 10,000 Portia are blooming this season, but the variety will be dropped in the fall.

There are more Scotts in the field than of any other variety, but every standard sort is being grown, and many of the new introductions are being given a trial. While Scott is considered the best commercial varity and nearly 15,000 of them will be benched, Lizzie McGowan, Nancy Hanks, Mayor Pingree, Jubilee and Flora Hill are high in favor and will be planted in extensively. They have virtually discontinued Nivea and Ivory because of their lack of size, but are still growing a few hundred of each variety. Mrs. McBurney, Evanston and the New Triumph are among the new sorts which are being tried, and from which much is expected.

The next excursion will be to Milwaukee via the steamship Virginia, Thursday, August 11. The boat, which is the finest of those running out of Chicago, will leave at 9:00 a. m., reaching Milwaukee at 2:00 p. m. Returning, the boat will leave at 5:00 p. m., reaching the docks in Chicago at 10 o'clock. This schedule permits of a stay of three hours in the Cream City, and the party will be well entertained by the Milwaukee florists. Tickets are on sale in all the wholesale houses. The fare will be 85 cents for the round trip.

Notes of the Omaha Exposition.

The bluff tract on the east side of the exposition grounds is rapidly becoming an attractive resort. The beautiful head-quarters of the different states in imposing buildings are the rendezvous of many a gay convention party and the odor of flowering plants and shrubs is everywhere.

Omaha has a population of 200,000 and offers better hotel facilities and conveniences than any other city of the west. Omaha, in fact, is famed for her hospitality. Every tourist stops there on his journey across the continent; therefore it abounds with hotels ample to accommodate the large delegation the florists' reception committees are so generously providing for. Trips to the parks, to Manawa, the Manhattan of the west, to Prospect Hill and Forest Lawn cemeteries and the "bowls" to take place directly under the towers of the Exposition buildings will make pleasant the intervals snatched from the convention and the exposition.

Chrysanthemum Notes.

Plants benched early in June should, by this time, be in condition for a mulch of well-rotted manure. If they have made vigorous growth and the soil is well filled with roots showing on the surface, it is time a mulch was applied. Later planted stock will get along for a week or two without being mulched, or until such time as the beds are in the condition described above. Before mulching go over the beds and cut out any suckers that are pushing up through the soil. It is well to take a little care in doing this and not tug and pull them up with a good sized piece of root from the plant, as is often the case when the work is done carelessly. It is far better to take a knife and cut the suckers away. Then try and have the soil in as even a condition as possible, using caution not to have it dry or the plants will absorb the manure too rapidly. The idea of a mulch at this time is to act as a protection for the young roots from the hot sun and drying winds, and also as a gradual nourishment. The manure should be well rotted and made as fine as possible, spreading it as even as can be and not too thick-just enough to cover the sur-

A watchful eye is a necessity now to keep the lateral shoots removed before they get too large and have sapped a great deal of the vitality from the main stem. It is therefore best to pinch them out as soon as they are large enough to handle without injuring the leading shoot that is to be retained. The early varieties must be given every encouragement possible from now on, as the production of fine blooms early in October depends greatly on the treatment given the plants during the next few weeks. They must not be allowed to dry out or they will soon get stunted, and this means dry and hard wood with small foliage and short petaled blooms.

The plants need to be well syringed on hot days to keep the foliage in good condition and the sap flowing, so that in about four weeks from now they will be in condition to form the kind of bud that is essential for an early and well formed bloom. If any specimen plants are grown for exhibition or market purposes, care must be taken not to allow them to become drawn and leggy. They should be kept away from dark corners and given lots of ventilation. If any are grown outside and they show a tendency to get hard, it is best to put them indoors. For specimen plants that are well rooted a weak application of liquid manure every six or seven days will be beneficial.

DULL TIMES.—ALL FLOWERS AT SUMMER QUALITY.—VACATIONS IN ORDER.—IMPROVEMENTS GOING ON.—PERSONAL ITEMS, SERIOUS AND OTHERWISE.

New York florists just at present do not look for business. Occasionally some one dies, even in New York, and an order for a wreath or two is the outcome. The wreath is more likely to be made of galax leaves than anything else and a little cluster of peas, lily of the valley or roses in one corner constitutes the flower growers' share in the transaction. Asters, white, pink and purple are now in market but are of poor quality as a rule. There are plenty of other flowers that are also of poor quality. American Beauties are no longer peerless; the buds are about the size and shape of small acorns when they come in and as flat as a half dollar by noon time. A half dollar will buy an armful of such and a dollar or two will transfer the ownership of the entire consignment from a good-sized growing establishment. Carnations are also at summer size and price and lily of the valley does not realize the original cost of the pips, hence the grower would make a comparative profit by throwing the pips away as soon as he had bought them and saving himself all farther trouble.

Clerks in many places are now away on their vacations. So the visitor in town finds the boss in charge of the deserted store, ill at ease over the obligation to remain there till the last and close up at night and longing for the two weeks to pass so that he may be relieved of the responsibility of opening up the place in person early every morning. Some are painting up and making repairs during the quiet time. J. K. Allen, on Twenty-eighth street, is having another big refrigerator built. This very enterprising gentleman evidently has his eye on some big American Beauty grower for next season for the new ice chest is devoid of shelves and can accommodate a whole forest of seven or eight foot stemmed Beauties. Johnnie Weir doesn't build ice chests; he buys them; in fact he will buy anything that he can get for his own price. The opportunity this time was furnished by Bennie Ezechel, who gives up the wholesale florist business on Twenty-eighth street, for the present at least, and betakes himself to the beaches. So Mr. Weir got the ice

Down town on Greenwich street the irrepressible "Sinquillum" man still holds out, but apparently the gullible part of the native population has concluded that if it is to be fooled Coney Island is the preferable place at this season of the year and the visitors are very wary, so although he displays the "English Tuba Rugosa, thirty-six colors, will bloom in two weeks," the "Sinquillum" man has but little success in creating any enthusiasm over this wonderful discovery.

J. J. Hess, of Omaha, visited New York last week and made a pleasant call on several of the local florists and seedsmen.

Ford Brothers are the only wholesale florists here who are thoughtful enough to provide arm chairs for their visitors.

MacDonald & McManus are receiving grand flowers of Cattleya gigas, but customers for the beautiful things are scarcenow.

Theodore Lang has been seen in town several times since he escaped from his triends amid a cloudburst of rice and a volley of old shoes.

Peter Barr has departed westward, bound for the Yellowstone Park. He expects to see New York again, however, before returning to England.

The list of intending visitors to the Omaha convention is lengthening, and New York will show up better than was anticipated.

John Finn has been appointed to take charge of the small parks between Fiftysixth street and the battery.

Ernest Asmus packed up his rods, lines, reels, flies and nets and started for a fishing trip on Monday last.

P. & E. J. WELCH ENTERTAIN THEIR GENTLE-MAN FRIENDS AT OLD ORCHARD BEACH, —SWEET PEA DAY AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—SPLENDID EXHIBITS,—BUSINESS STILL VERY QUIET,—ROSES IMPROVE IN OUALITY,—NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Messrs P. & E. J. Welch entertained a few of their friends in business, at their summer home at Old Orchard Beach, on Tuesday. Two dozen gentlemen, mostly from Boston, Providence and Portland comprised the party, which, had there been more room, might easily have been increased by several dozen more before the number of intimate business friends and associates of these two gentlemen would have been exhausted. The occasion was an unqualified success in every respect and the day one of the greatest enjoyment for all who participated. Most of the Boston contingent went by boat to Portland and thence to Old Orchard by train, the all night sail on the ocean at this season of the year being a vacation in itself. A drive in buckboards along the beach was enjoyed and when it came to refreshments, both solid and liquid, the hospitality of the hosts knew no bounds, while the many kind attentions of the lady members of their families added greatly to the pleasure of the guests. But little time was devoted to guests. speech making, the attractions of the beach being too potent, but Mr. John Galvin who officiated as toastmaster managed to extract some interesting remarks from a few of the strangers, including a cyclonic onslaught from Mr. Warren Ewell which was supplemented by the "Maloney" song rendered in Mr. Galvin's best style.

Last Saturday was sweet pea day at Horticultural Hall. There was a superb display of these much-loved flowers and many delighted visitors were in attendance. H. B. Watts, F. A. Blake, W. H. Harrison, F. E. Chaffin and M. B. Faxon were the largest exhibitors. There were herbaceous plants in fine assortment from W. N. Craig and Rea. Bros., also a fair show of hollyhocks and other flowers from various contributors. Robert Laurie was rewarded with a certificate of merit for dwarf Tropacolum Vesuvius, of which an illustration appeared in the AMLRICAN FLORIST last year. Mrs. A. W. Blake showed a fine specimen of Cattleya gigas.

Business is still very quiet and time hangs heavy on the hands of the store florists while their fellow craftsmen in the greenhouses out of town are going through the broiling process of planting and putting houses in shape for next season's business. Roses are better in quality, generally, the greater part of those coming in being grown especially for summer curring. Asters are getting plenty and there is a heavy supply of candytuff, teveriew, gypsophila and other outdoor garden products.

Hypernum aureum is one of the showlest things to be seen in the park and baile and plantations at this date. Its golden flowers are exceedingly effective and to baing flowering period is another to ag point in its tayor.

STOCK IS OF INCREASING QUANTITY AND IMPROVING QUALITY.—TRADE IS FAIR.—NEW BEAUTIES ARE IN DEMAND.—CARNATIONS ARE BETTER THAN IS USUAL IN SUMMER.—HEAVY LOSSES BY HAIL.—NOTES OF PEOPLE AND THINGS.

The tide has turned, and both the quality and quantity of flowers show improvement from day to day. Most welcome is the new cut of American Beauties, for this flower is in constant and never satisfied demand. Beauties are not yet absolutely first-class, but they are good, nevertheless, and the demand is increasing as fast as is the supply.

Hot weather never fails to have a deteriorating effect on trade, and the last few days have been scorchers, but none of the dealers have serious complaint to make. The call for flowers has been all that could be expected, and about all that the supply could accommodate.

Among the finest blooms in the market are the Perles and Kaiserins, which seem to stand the hot weather with unusual fortitude this year. Carnations are also exceptionally good for summer flowers, and William Scott are about the best of the lot, although the Kohinoor, one of Pennock's introductions of three years ago, is one of the finest whites in the market, and is being sent in by several growers who are making large cuts from plants in the fields.

Sweet peas are still in over supply and are of rather inferior quality.

Only three bowlers participated in the games last week. The Stollery brothers are enthusiasts in this sport and seldom miss a night, no matter how high the temperature. They are both showing marked improvement in their game. It will soon be in order to select a team to represent Chicago in the prize cup contest at the convention.

Thursday has been selected as the day for the next outing, as the hoats to Milwaukee are badly crowded on Sunday. It is hoped and expected that there will be a good sized party, and cach excursionist is expected to bring his lunch.

On Thursday evening Chicago was visited by the heaviest hail storm on record. The icy pellets were of almost incredible size, fully sufficient to perforate green-house roofs, but fortunately the storm extended over a belt only a couple of miles wide from north to south. It swept the west side of the city and a part of the north side, being most severe in the vicinity of West Madison street, where Herman Schiller lost nine tenths of his glass. His greenhouses in the country were outside the storm belt. H. N. Burns, at 690 West Van Buren street, was a heavy loser. Not only was much of his glass broken, but many valuable plants were beaten down. Nelson Swain & Sons, Paulina street and Chicago avenue, lost most of their glass. E. Wienhoeber was one of those whose houses suffered the greatest damage. He has 14,000 feet of glass and hearly half of it was broken. At Garfield Park the hail demolished the glass in the conservatory. II. 1. Halle was another heavy loser, and Vaughan's greenhouses at Springs lost over 3,000 panes of glass.

Andrew Muller and August Jurgens have returned from The Dells, Wisconsin, where they have been camping with the ago's famous Apollo Commandery, Englits Templar

| C McCullongh, of Cincinnati, was a Chicago caller this week. Other visitors were A.J. Brown, of Grand Rapids, Mich., I. J. Hoss, of Omaha, Neb., H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, Cal., and G. B. Wiegand, Indianapolis, Ind.

W. E. Lynch is spending his vacation in the east.

O. W. Freese has returned from the Pacific coast.

E. II. Hunt, who has been in ill health for some time, is now fully recovered and at his store as usual.

FLORISTS OF THE MISSOURI METROPOLIS HOLD THEIR ANNUAL PICNIC AND MAKE IT A HUGE SUCCESS.—WINNERS IN THE VARIOUS CONTESTS.—GOOD DELEGATION ASSURED FOR THE TRIP TO OMAHA.—TRADE IS VERY QUET.

The principal event of the past week was the very enjoyable outing of the St. Louis Florists' Club and its friends which was held in Belleville on July 20. The special train leaving the Union Station at 9:30 a. m. was comfortably crowded, having about one hundred passengers aboard, and all prepared to have a good time. The day was ideal, a storm the night before having cooled the atmosphere to a pleasant temperature, while just enough rain had fallen to make the grounds in the best of condition. A band of five pieces accompanied the florists and entertained them during the hour's run to Belleville. Upon our arrival there we were met by the Bellville florists and a good time was con.menced.

After lunch the athletic sports were started with the quoit contest, and during its continuance the shorter events were disposed of. A shooting contest was indulged in but owing to the unfavorable location of the grounds very poor scores were made. First prize in the shooting contest was carried off by Mr. Amman, of Edwardsville, Ill., and second by Max Herzog, of Gratoit, St. Louis county. Dancing was indulged in to some extent and at 7 o'clock, after a most enjoyable day, the train pulled out for home.

The winners in the various events were as follows: Quoit contest, C. McCraw; 100 yard run, Henry McCraw, second C. McCraw; hop, step and jump, R. Beyer; running broad jump, Mr. Alers; standing jump, R. Beyer; ladies egg race, Mrs. E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Mrs. Gutzman, second; girls race, Miss Jeungle; fat men's race, 180 pounds and over, Gus Eggling, of South St. Louis. The competition in all of the events was close and furnished plenty of excitement. A game of cocked hat played with a wooden ball suspended from a convenient tree trunk attracted a crowd the entire day and was the occasion of much merriment. Despite the fact of there being a brewery on the grounds everything went on in the most satisfactory manner imaginable, and those having the matter in charge can congratulate themselves on having provided a most enjoyable outing for all who participated.

From latest indications there will be about eighteen St. Louis representatives at Omaha, and this number may be increased as there is enough attendance in sight to assure us a special ear; all those tributary to St. Louis who can possibly do so are cordially invited to join our delegation. A rate of $13.50 for the round trip has been made. Parties desiring further information can correspond with Mr. J. W. Kuntz, 822 Olive street.

Trade is very slow, funeral work being about all that is doing. Henry Berning has returned from his trip through Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. He reports Cincinnati as the deadest town on the continent.

The Convention.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Society of American Florists will be held at Omaha, Neb., August 16 to 19, inclusive. The secretary, Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield street, Boston, Mass., will receive the annual dues in advance of the meeting and forward the 1898 badge by mail. S. B. Stewart, 119 North Sixteenth street, Omaha, is in charge of the trade exhibition, and will supply prospective exhibitors with all necessary information.

On to Omaha.

The efforts of the American Florist have at last resulted in a reduction in the rate of railroad fare to the S. A. F. convention. The Western Passenger Association has authorized a rate of one fare for the round trip plus $2, or $14.75 from Chicago, and $13.50 from St. Louis. In territory within 150 miles of Omaha a rate of one fare will obtain. In territory between Chicago, Buffalo and Pittsburg the Central Passenger Association has conceded a rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip, upon the certificate plan.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad has been selected as the route from Chicago to Omaha, and the AMERICAN FLORIST is prepared to reserve for its friends berths in special Pullman palace ears leaving Chicago at 6:15 p. m., day, August 15, which will reach Omaha at 8:20 a. m. the following day.

Many of the eastern delegations will travel to Chicago over the Pennsylvania railroad upon the train leaving New York August 14 at 2 p. m., leaving Philadelphia at 4:30 p. m.; Washington, 3:30 p. m.; llarrisburg, 7:30 p. m.; Baltimore, 4:35 p. m.; arriving at Chicago at 5 p. m., at the same depot from which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul convention train will leave one hour and fifteen minutes later.

Eastern representatives are invited to join the Illinois party and should see that their tickets read "Via Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad."

Railroad Rates to Omaha.

A rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip, on the certificate plan, has finally been secured from all points in the territory of the Central Passenger Assowhich includes everything between Buffalo and Pittsburg on the cast and Chicago and St. Louis on the west, and north of the Ohio River. It is possible that special delegations from this territory may be able to make even better rates now that this rate has been conceded, but the one and one-third fare concession is available to individuals on any and all lines under the jurisdiction of the Central l'assenger Association.

STOCK IS FLOURISHING. - THE AVERAGE PPICE OF CARNATIONS -BUSINESS IS BET-TER THAN IS THE SUPPLY OF FLOWERS. -KAISERIN IS THE BEST OF SUMMER

We have had fine growing weather both inside and out the past two weeks, and stock for next season is making great Carnations in the field strides forward. are looking particularly well for this time of year. It would be interesting to know the average net price of carnations for the season. Many persons in seeing the quoted figures from time to time through the winter get an idea that from $1.25 to $1.50 per hundred would be about the average. A grower whose stock runs a grade or two above the general consignments, is reported to have said that his entire output for the season 1896-97 netted him 85 cents per hundred. The stock was handled entirely by one commission house. It would seem that this was very near the cost mark.

Business is quite good, retail dealers having to apologize for their meager stock to all customers unless they happen to want white roses, which are quite satisfactory, Kaiserins now being up to the winter mark and often better. It should winter mark and often better. be some one's good fortune to find a pink sport of this variety soon, and then there

Joseph Heacock potted off a lot of American Beauty cuttings, part of which he placed on a table bedded with ashes, and part on an empty rose table, from which the earth had not been removed; after a month or so the difference was very marked in favor of the plants on the earth. After being planted out they made a very vigorous growth and are far ahead of the other lot, although now meeting with the same treatment.

THE CARNATION SUCCEEDS THE CHRYSAN-THEMUM UPON THE PACIFIC COAST. CALIFORNIA VARIETIES SENT EAST.—CARL KRUGER'S GOOD WORK,—CARNATIONS FROM THE EAST DO LITTLE IN THE REGION OF THE GOLDEN GATE.

Many of the growers are not as yet throwing out their old carnation plants. Portias are in good demand on account of the war, there being many regiments of soldiers camping in the vicinity. Red, white and blue decorations are in order. and Portia, McGowan and cornflowers make a pretty and patriotic combination. Portias are now selling at eight dozen for a dollar and white and Scott at six dozen tor a dollar, a remarkable price at this rime of year.

Most of the growers are through planting chrysanthemums. There will not be very many grown this year, owing to the demand for carnations as noted above. Last season was a very favorable one for outside chrysanthemums, owing to the lack of rain from October to December, and consequently inside stock did not pay the cost of growing, Bonnaffon and such varieties, well done, wholesaling at from 50 cents to $1 per dozen. This season, owing to the overproduction last year, only about one-fourth the usual quantity have been planted; and if we have an early, wet winter, those that have a good crop under glass will reap a harvest.

The California seedling carnations being tried for commercial varieties by Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa., are the twelve varieties exhibited by John II. Sievers at the convention of the Carnation Society of America held in Chicago last February. Helen Dean, a pink seedling from Albertina, Hannah Hobart and John Carbour, something new in the way of yellow, are of especial merit, and when disseminated will take the lead in their colors over any carnations on the market provided they do as well east as in California. The variety Hannah Hobart, is one of the largest earnations ever grown, three and one-half inch flowers being the rule while many of them are four inches in diameter. Carl Kruger is the grower and introducer of these varieties and has been working on them for four years past. Last year he sent out fifty varieties and fifty more this year that have been extensively planted by the growers around San Francisco for cut flower and fancy varieties. The twelve sent to Albert M. Herr are the cream of his labor and were selected for commercial purposes.

The varieties grown at Rendondo Beach have more or less of the Margue-rite strain and in the Lois J. Haettel this is very pronounced. The reason car-nations do so well in California is that they can be planted from sand to the open ground as early as February and need not be lifted until October. It seems strange, however, that very few of the castern varieties do well here. Of those sent out last year Flora Hill and Mrs Bradt are the only ones that have done well enough to be grown to any extent this year. It may be that they are over propagated, fed up and forced to such an extend to make so called rooted cuttings at $10 per hundred, that they are impov erished and weak, full of bacteria and rust and do not do themselves justice the first season. They may do better after they have recovered from their seven treatment and have become more or less acclimated, but so far they have not been as great as rate cetted.

HOT WEATHER MAKES BUSINESS NO PLEAS-URE AND TRADE VERY POOK.—ROSES HAVE A WEARY LOOK.—FLORIST'S CLUB PLANS AN OUTING AND TRANSACTS OTHER BUSINESS .- THE OMAHA DELEGATION .-NOTES AND COMMENT.

Florists in and around Buffalo have done nothing the past week but look for cool places and wish for rain. The weather, of course, makes flowers very poor. Sweet peas show the want of poor. Sweet peas show the want of water, while roses have a weary look. The Florists' Club met last Friday and transacted its business in a thorough manner. The schedule for the chrysanthemum show was carefully gone over and was satisfactory to the committee. Wednesday, August 3, was selected for our annual outing. President Scott appointed Messrs. Kasting, Anderson and Buddenborg a committee to select the place and make all arrangements. The Bedell house on Grand Island will be the Bedell house on Grand Island will be the place, and with this committee a good time is assured for all. Phil. Scott was added to the committee to help out in the sporting part, that being his forte.

The boys going to Omaha have not completed their plans, but from present indications at least seven and probably ten will go from here.

The only Billy Boas, representing Edwards & Docker, of Philadelphia, called last week, and by his looks and good humor be weet boas and good humor he must have seen all the trade and met with success.

The Sage of Dreerville, Walter Mott, was here last week and, as usual, called on all and looked happy. He promised to see them again in Omaha. H. J. Wise, of East Aurora, was also a visitor this week.

Evansville, Ind.—The annual flower show of the Press Club will be held in the second week of November. C. C. Genung is chairman of the committee having the affair in charge.

Bucyrus, O.-J. F. Norton is remodeling his greenhouses preparatory to the removal of his Nevada establishment to this city. He has a large and rapidly increasing business, largely a shipping trade.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.—R. G. Chase & Co.' nurservmen, sued W. B. Hayesfor $15.75' bringing the action before Justice Stormswho is an agent for them. The plaintiff appealed and secured a reversal of Justice Storm's decision under the statute which forbids a justice acting in a case in which he has a personal interest.

THE price of nursery stock in Canada has not advanced because of the recent enactment excluding stock from the United States. Nurserymen in the States who had booked orders in the Dominion, which they were not permitted to fill because of the act, bought stock at wholesale from Canadian dealers and packed their orders inside the boundary. The considerable surplus of Canadian grown shrubs and trees enabled them to do this without loss.

The annual sweet pear show of the Hampden County Horticultural Society, held July 20 and 21, brought out such an unusual wealth of exhibits that a larger hall than that usually employed was chosen for the occasion; in fact it was one of the largest sweet pea shows ever held in America. The season has been tayorable for the growth of sweet peas and the flowers shown this year were of unusual merit. The interest of amateur growers centered upon the Eckford silver cup, which was won by W. J. Eldred, but the holder of the cup from last year, C. M. Hartzell, of Holyoke, was a very close competitor. Of the Lokford set for the current year buchess of Sutherland is a very pretty light pink, yet no improvement on former sorts of its color; Chan cellor is the most pleasing; Colonist is not good, Duke of Sutherland is a fine dark marcon yet of no special ment, Prince of Wales is an improvement on fler Magesty Lady May Currie is the repress to orange yet produced. Of other resevantetics Bertie Hamilton and Min nch dia are much alike. Burpec's Ear. e tot VII is the same as Extra Earl Blanche Ferry except that it is as it came implies. Walker's Dawn and Gaes Franciare machables, and Polly Varde From are mach after, and Polly Varide to donouse. I after Hutchins is good are of the best of the year, but is some start like Stella Mease. Modesty is yet pleasing, Orientae is distinct and good on attract the best American introduction of the year. Pink Cupid has better bears than Matte Capid.

very fine flowers in class 1. D. W. Brainerd, of Thompsonville, Conn., was entered in nearly every class and was the winner of several prizes. His flowers were well grown. W. J. Eldred, of West Spring-field, made the largest class entries. His flowers were excellent in size and stem. H. II. Fisk, of Chicopee, and Mrs. H. M. Olier, A. II. Smith, Edith Smith, of West Springfield; R. A. Houston and S. H. Howes, of Holyoke, all amateur growers, made fine exhibits.

Rev. W. T. Hutchins, of Indian Orchard, filled one large table for exhibition only, as did the B. L. Bragg Company. The Sunset Seed and Plant Company offered seedling A, which was very distinct and beautiful. Sam. Hamilton, of Roaring Springs, Pa., exhibited several seedlings of merit.

The awards were as follows: F. A. Blake first in seven classes, second in two; S. W. Brainerd, first in five, second in four; W. J. Eldred, first in eight, second in nine, third in one; Mrs. H. M. Olin, first in two, second in two; H. H. Fisk, first in seven, second in two; A. H. Smith, first in one, second in one; R. H. Houston, first in one; S. H. Howes, second in two; H. Rev. W. T. Hutchins and the Bragg Company were awarded diplomas for their excellent displays. Honorablemen-tion was awarded to Mrs. Chadwich for Burpee's American seedlings The Sunset Seed and Plant Company received a certificate of merit for seedling A. Sam. Hamilton was given honorable mention for miscellaneous seedlings. Miscellaneous awards were to W. T. Hodge and D. W. Brainard for hollyhocks, Mrs. Eldred and Mrs. Olin for nasturtiums, H. A. The Chapell, Miller Company, formerly the C. R. Miller Company is now located in a new store, which looks very neat and attractive. Mark Aitken has also moved and is now in the center of the dry goods business section. He is completing three houses for the growing of carnations and

C. F. Fairfield's property is advertised to be sold by the sheriff. It seems entirely uncalled for, and very likely cutting prices is responsible for it.

It is rumored that II. Grout will add several thousand feet of glass to his plant this fall especially for his new earnation Conch Shell.

UNION MEETING OF THE NEBRASKA AND IOWA HORTICULTUAL SOCIETIES. -EXCEL-LEXT PRACTICAL PAPERS.—THE WEEKLY BOWLING SCORE.

The Nebraska State Horticultural Society and the Southwestern Iowa Horticultural Society held a union meeting at the Commercial Club room, Board of Trade Building, July 26, 27 and 28. President G. A. Marshall, Arlington, Neb., opened the session; all formalities were waived and the society went in for business. C. S. Christy, of Johnson county, Neb., read a paper on packing and marketing apples, followed by J. P. Jackson, of Glenwood, Ia., who read a valuable essay on the "Different Varieties of Apples." Peter Youngers, Jr., of Geneva, Neb., contributed an address on keeping apples of different varieties. Mr. Youngers, being superintendent of the Nebraska horticultural exhibit at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition, has had excellent opportunity for observation in this line, having had in his charge 160 barrels of apples of seventy or more kinds packed in various methods and kept in cold storage. He has found a temperature of 365 to be most favorable, with wrappings, first of oil paper or common butter paper, with an outer covering of newspaper. This appears to prove that many varieties that are valueless in fall or early winter can be kept over till May and June, and put on the market at a good profit. J. A. Hogg, of Shelton, Neb., read a paper on the codling moth, E. F. Stephens, of Crete, Neb., one on planting gathering and marketing strawberries, and las. Russell, of Wymore, Neb., who will market this year 60,000 baskets of peaches, read an essay on this luscious fruit. Silas Wilson, of Atlantie, Ia.; A. Van Kirk, of Glenwood, Ia; C. C. Marshall, Arling-ton, Neb.; J. P. Hess, Council Blufts, Ia., C. H. Whitford, Arlington, Neb.; and H.

C. Raymond, Council Bluffs, Ia., all gave the societies valuable ideas through their various papers.

EVERETT B. CLARK, Pres.; Jos. A. BOLGIANO, 1st Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec. 9 and Treas.

UNDER a recent ruling of the postal authorities order sheets may be sent out with catalogues only when bound as a part of the book, but the leaves may be perforated so as to be easily detachable.

B. SUZUKI, of Suzuki & Iida, passed through Chicago last Saturday on his way to Yokohama. Mr. Suzuki says that the largest size of Japanese Lilium longiflorum bulbs will probably be very scarce the coming season.

WATERLOO, NEB., JULY 26.—Crop prospects on the whole are good. Corn is doing well, but could stand more rain. Vines are promising and are hardly in need of rain as they will stand more dry weather than corn.

Siteboygan, Wis.—The Landreth Seed Company runs its establishment day and night and is putting in a new electric light plant installed with a capacity of 150 lights. The company now has nearly 1000 pea pickers in the fields in this vicinity.

MR. GEO. A. BISHOP, of Bermuda, intimates that some of the statements imputed to him in a communication on the Harrisii lily disease, which appeared on page 1464 of our issue of July 9, are not maccord with the facts. He states that there is no occasion to send anywhere for good propagating stock, a plentiful supply being obtainable on the island, and that instead of being overdosed, the land is very much under-fertilized with good chemical manures of the right sort.

Importance of Selection in Seed Growing.

The articles by Prof. W. W. Tracy that have appeared from time to time in the AMERICAN FLORIST on the subject of seed breeding, are of especial interest and very opportune. The question of selection, conscious selection, is bound to become a greater factor in growing plants for seed, or for any other purpose, than it has been, and it is undoubtedly true that he who has the best and clearest mental conception of an ideal type of plant will meet with the greatest success. This may be illustrated by the character of the lettice now forced for the Boston market. more extensive growers are not willing to run the risk of the failure of a single crop by planting seed which they happen to find on the market, so grow their own seed. Various strains of lettuce have been developed which for forcing purposes are vastly superior to the types from which they have sprung. It may be said, and truthfully, that much of the selection which has evolved our present strains and varieties of plants was of an um onscious nature. Variations were only noted and perpetuated with no distinct ideal in mind of what they should be or might ultimate's become. But the right sort of conscious selection will do more for the smelt mation of a type in a feyears than can be brought about be uncenscious selection through

While plant generally resemble that parents in are than the are inhibe other plants, we have the remidle of the plants we have the remains the static from the parents. In the improvement of any type the conditional differences among the concession of the conditional differences among the conditional the breaks.

many interesting variations will occur which he may be tempted to perpetuate, even though not pointing directly toward his ideal. It is even possible to develop different strains from the same plant by making use of these side branches, which may, by their own characteristic variations, suggest a new ideal for a different purpose. New uses of plants perhaps require that they possess new attributes, new characteristics, so that one's ideal must sometimes be changed because of the changing conditions of the market and the new demands.

But I belive that in the long run the man who becomes the most successful in the breeding of plants is the man who early in his career establishes his own ideal of what a certain variety should be, and then adheres most rigidly to the type of that ideal. The better and clearer his conception the greater will be the progress toward the goal. 1 always feel like giving encouragement to any seedsman who has a proper ideal in his mind and who is making honest efforts to give us better vegetables or flowers. It seems to me, however, that if each would make a careful description of his own ideal and when the plant had been improved to such an extent as to conform or nearly conform to his ideal. see that the distinctive characteristics of his efforts are properly set forth in his catalogue, we shall then have a better knowledge of what is being done in seed breeding. We may confidently expect to see the business of seed growing, as well as that of the seed dealer becoming specialized to a greater and greater extent, and when eople learn that Mr. Smith or Mr. Jones has a strain of pansies or cabbages that is superior, even though for special purposes, they will not be satisfied with anybody's seed. Intelligent growers will first seek to know the ideals established by the different seed breeders and their success in making their plants conform to those ideals, then place their orders accordingly. W. E. BRITTON.

Tiffin, O.

To the credit of the florists be it said that they know a good thing when they see it. In the instance at hand they knew it when they heard of it through the medium of the AMERICAN FLORIST. I refer to the 10,000 Asparagus plumosa seedlings, which Mr. Lewis Urich recently advertised for sale, and which were gobiled up in no time. He states that orders came from various parts of the country, fairly pouring in on him, the result being that his stock was sold out much sooner than he expected. Moral:—Advertising pays.

Coal ashes as a fertilizer may or may not have many adherents. In Mr Ulrich's case it has been demonstrated beyond a doubt that common coal ashes make one of the best of fertilizers. Astrip of ground which for its negative qualities could be compared with the desert of Sahara, has been rendered fertile, and is producing a crop of corn the sight of producing a crop of corn the sight of which would make a Nebraska farmer green with envy. Here is another in-stance. A pear tree which for the past few years rarely bore any fruit, will yield bushels this season. "Coal ashes did it," says brother Ulrich. But whatever ashes may do for corn and pear trees, his roses were exempt from this experiment. Figmatively speaking, there are no ashes on The young stock looks clean, healths, and vigorous, and from all indicatron there will be plenty during the corong se ison.

Helpful Reminders.

It primroses, cinerarias and calceolanas are not worth raising, it is because the gardener is not equal to the task. While they do not sell for a high price, choice plants will always sell for something, and many other plants will not. You can put to use some plants that are not strictly first-class, but they must be good or nothing. Start them all now in a cold frame, which is the best because it will keep them close to the light, protected from draughts of air, and insure moisture. Leaf mold put through a sieve, with some loam and sand, is best for seed pans. It is well to use shallow boxes; put in a layer of broken pots and cover with a half inch of sphagnum moss, then lay on half an inch of the prepared soil. Have the soil well dampened and quite smooth on the surface. Be extremely careful to have this all ready before opening your seed paper; sow the seed on the surface, in rows as nearly as you can. Cover the box with glass, allowing very little opening for evaporation. As soon as the seed germinates the glass may be removed and water given to prevent drying; a fine spray should be used to avoid disturbing the delicate plants; the frame should be kept shaded. They will make root quite rapidly and as soon as four leaves are discernible they should be potted in light and porous soil, well fertilized. The cold frame or small greenhouse where the benches are close to the light are best for pot plants. While they must not be allowed to dry out they will not grow healthily if made soaking wet. Keep shifting them to larger pots as fast as roots begin to run around looking for room. Growth will be slow until January, but at no time should they be cheeked or crowded; each leaf should have room. In early spring, just before the blooming season, it is well to cut off a few of the Well grown plants should be in leaves. 6 to Sinch pots for flowering.

Freesia bulbs should be sorted out and started now. Your ivy geraniums should now be in 4-inch pots and seedling maurandias in 3-inch pots.

Don't forget while repairing and making alterations in your greenhouses that sub-watering is the most desirable and beneficial. Look up the best methods and keep in line with the progress of the times.

Ninety-six degrees in the shade, with scarcely a breath of air is what we are having at present writing.

Roses are scarce and of poor quality, with but little demand for them except for funeral work. Outdoor flowers are more plentiful but sell slowly. Most of the florists are well along with rose planting—Some are through with it and are now cutting blooms from their first planting. There are no new greenhouses being built except a conservatory at King Park, which will be a much needed and a ery acceptable addition.

California Carnations.

ED. AM. FLORIST-"E. L." in the AMER-ICAN FLORIST of July 9, referring to carnations sent to Mr Herr from California, has evidently been misled in his remarks by his experience with carnations introduced from California several years ago, known here as Redondo stock, which, originating in southern California, are grown there extensively in the fields and gardens for cut flowers. The carnations Mr. Herr has under trial are in no way connected by crossing with Redondo varieties; they are in fact raised from seed obtained by crossing a European variety with Wm. Scott, Daybreak, Mme. Albertini, Anna Webb, Silver Spray and Mrs. E. Reynolds. The varieties sent to Mr. Herr are the best selected from 1500 seedlings. Selection was made for commercial purposes only, after three years' trial; they have been raised and grown in San Francisco, in greenhouses with artificial heat, under the same methods of culture followed in the eastern states for the production of cut blooms during the winter months.

While California has many advantages over, as "E. L." states, less favored eastern regions in growing a great variety of plants out of doors, owing to the mildness of the winter months, it is certainly tor that very mildness of climate that the growing of high grade cut flowers in California requires more attention than in the eastern states, where the temperature is under the control of the grower under glass, with the benefit derived from the circulation of air caused by sufficient artificial heat. The very small amount of artificial heat which the grower in California, on account of the high outdoor temperature, can use without running his houses too warm for the production of high grade blooms, is against California in regard to growing carnations under glass, which even in this state, is theonly method by which we can produce flowers of good quality during the season when they are most in demand.

We confidently advance the opinion that Mr. Herr's California carnations will prove even a greater success in the east than in San Francisco, where for the past two years they have sold at fancy prices, unless the new introductions of this season and other novelties being raised show a great advance upon stand-C. Kruger. ard varieties.

KINGSTON, ONT.-The Canadian Florists' Association will hold its first annual convention at Toronto, Ont., in the sec-ond week of September, and a pro-gramme has been prepared for the occasion. O R. Johnson, a member of the executive committee, attended a recent session at Hamilton. He reports that at none of the western Canadian cities are carnations grown as well as they are in Eingeston.

Lagra Ita - Geo Souster takes a certain degree of pleasure in reading in the trade press of the operations of the palm windlers. The game was worked on Mr. Souster early in the spring, probably the first time it was tried, but he did not say a word about it until he found, that he was only one of many who were early courselet

Notes and Comments.

In one of the Philadelphia daily papers, the following advice on watering is given on the authority of a florist:

"Always water the plants in the even ing in summer and in the morning in winter." Water a plant whenever it needs it would be better counsel here, but we must confess, all other things being equal, it is better to act upon the advice of that particular florist, for there is less evaporation taking place during the night than there is in daytime, consequently there is more likelihood of the water soaking down to the roots than when the plants are watered in the morning, as evaporation is so rapid in this elimate that unless a well directed effort is made to water a very dry plant more than once in the morning it will very soon be just as dry as ever, apparently. It may be that this particular florist had in mind watering outdoors, and in that case it might be all right, but we would never under any circumstances think of allowing a dry greenhouse plant to remain so until night if found in that condition in the morning. These vague instructions are likely to do more harm than good. Writers on horticultural matters cannot be too explicit when endeavoring to convey an idea. "Boil it down," "Be brief," and "Cut it short," are all right in instructing the cynic who may be filling space in a jour-nal devoted to horticulture and who is not a horticulturist, but I am happy to notice that your columns are free from that kind of reading matter. E. L.

FERTILIZATION OF CUCUMBERS.

I was very much amused by a recent article in a contemporary, in which the writer questions the fact that cucumber flowers do not have to be fertilized, or rather pollinated, before they will swell. The erudite personage in question must have been partaking of mixed drinks at the soda fountain on a hot day and got his knowledge of cucumbers mixed with that of melons, though even in the case of melons I believe it is the proper thing to wait till noon and get the house dry enough to let the pollen fly. Some of his efforts at pollination, however, had not been in vain, as can plainly be seen by the number of fruits with a bulb on the endshown in an illustration accompanying the article to which reference is made. This is a fatal defect in a cucumber of salable size. I would advise the budding trucker, and the admonition is given in all Christian charity, not to get too deeply into the business, and to stay in bed as long as the average gardener. will then have better looking encumbers.

FITCHBURG, Mass. - Joseph Jackson, the veteran florist, died July 14 after a long illness. He was born in Halifax, Yorkshire, England, February 17, 1830, and gained an experience in floriculture before coming to America in 1801. before coming to America in 1864. In 1866 he won a silver medal at an exhibit of the Massachusetts Horticultural Socicty with a splendidly grown Campanula pyramidalis. He located in Fitchburg in 1868, first having charge of the estab-lishments of J. M. Sawtell and Sylvanus Sawyer. He has made exhibits at the Sawyer, He has made cambon Worcester north fair for twenty-eight years, winning many premiums. Mr. Jackson leaves a wife, three sons and four daughters.

Lenox, Mass.—At the meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society, on July 16, A. H. Wingett read a valuable paper on the cultivation of roses in the garden.

Northampton, Mass.

Trade in the florists' line is almost an unknown quantity and the stores wear a deserted look. A few palms and a bunch or two of carnations make up the usual window display. At the greenhouses, however, there is plenty to do and a chance to acquire a tan like that of our soldiers in Cuba. Chrysanthemums are nearly all planted and the early ones are looking well. Carnations in the field are. notwithstanding the dry spell, doing nicely, and, judging from the quantity planted out, the growers are putting considerable faith in the flower as a bread winner. The new French cannas are fast becoming popular as bedding plants and fine beds of them are to be seen in different parts of the city.

Work on Horace W. Field's new houses is progressing and he hopes to have them finished in time to plant carnations.
G. W. Thorniley.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.

The floral exhibits at the industrial show are just now attracting much attention. Richard Alston, of the Royal Greenhouses, and A. H. Philpott contribute the bulk of the display of the professional grower, and, considering the season, their exhibits are highly creditable. One of the most beautiful of the floral designs is emblematic of hope and is composed principally of sweet peas, white carnations, roses and adiantum. There is a display of several dozen varieties of geraniums and fuchsias. There are also many well-grown gloxinias, begonias, lilies, palms and decorative plants. The amateur floriculturists are not largely represented, but their displays are, nevertheless, very excellent.

THE FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' DEBATE UPON THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A WHOLE-SALE HOUSE.—THE CLUB WILL PICKIC.— SEMPLE'S GLADIOLI.-HINKLE-HEID NUP-TIALS.—JOTTINGS.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its regular monthly meeting on Monday night, July go, with a very fair attendance. The main subject, viz., "the advisability of opening a wholesale cut flower commission house" was warmly discussed pro and con by Messrs. Breitenstein, Hoffmeyer, Lauch, Semple, Langhans and Reineman, Erad Burki, made a provincial Reineman. Fred. Burki made a proposition to assist in the starting of such a house and finally the whole subject was laid over until the meeting in August. The club concluded to hold either a picnic or have a boat excursion in the latter part of next month, and a committee, consisting of Fred. Burki, chairman, Wm. Lauch, James Semple, Geo. Oesterle and E. C. Ludwig, was appointed with full power to arrange for either form of outing. James Semple exhibited a very fine collection of gladiolus blooms; they were very greatly admired and a vote of thanks was tendered him.

Fred. Hinkle, florist and gardener, was married last week to Miss Ella Heid daughter of J. B. Heid, the berry grower, of Allegheny. His brother florists extend their congratulations.

A. M. Elliott, formerly of Elliott & McGinness of this city, now representing J. M. McCullough's Sons, Cincinnati, O., was a visitor this week.

Alex. Nelson, in charge of the conservahas been receiving congratulations on the arrival of a young Miss in his family. He will visit Atlantic City with L. I. Neff and family in about two weeks. Both gentlemen are ardent piscatorial artists and have the war fever bad enough to say they must serve their country in some form, even if only to catch some Spanish mackerel. REGIA.

Hartford, Conn.—The sweet pea show July 27 was a pronounced success. There were hundreds of vases of blooms on display, and a very pleasing feature was an address upon the flower, delivered in the evening by Rev. W. T. Hutchins, the sweet pea authority of Indian Orchard, Mass.

How to Grow Mushrooms.

Procure fresh horse droppings in as the longest straw and add to the pile one-third its weight of new loam, intermixing thoroughly. The compost should be kept under cover, so as to preserve it from wetting by rains, until a sufficient quantity has been collected to make a bed of the desired size.

In making the bed spread out a layer of the material thus prepared from three to four inches deep and of the required dimensions as to length and width. Tread or tamp this layer until it is quite firm and add others in the same way until the bed is ten or twelve inches in depth.

The temperature of this compact mass of soil and droppings will in a few days rise to 100 or over, as may be ascertained on plunging a thermometer into it, and then gradually decline. On going down to the 90 mark it will be in a proper condition for spawning, and this is accomplished by making holes three inches deep and twelve to fourteen inches apart in the bed with a hard trowel, inserting therein pieces of brick spawn about two inches square and replacing the compost.

On the completion of this operation it will be found necessary to level the surface again, and the bed should also be made as firm as before spawning. About one week later apply a layer of loam one and a half inches thick to the surface, smoothing and tamping it lightly with the back of a spade.

The temperature and moisture of the mushroom house must now be given daily attention, maintaining the former at from 60° to 70° with a moist air. The bed will not need water until the mushrooms appear five or six weeks after spawning, and when they show on the surface as large as peas, a light watering should be given with water heated to about 100

I find the best temperature of a mush" room house to be 60', with the air moist to a perceptible degree only. The surface of the bed should also be kept moist, applying water when necessary by means of a watering pot with fine sprinkler, or a hand syringe, using water never below 80 . Air should be admitted to the house from the top, and must always be under control at a temperature never below 45. Upon entering or leaving, all currents of air likely to pass over the surface. of the bed should be guarded against.

The dry spawn will become active fourteen days after insertion in the bed, but in cases where the bed has been allowed to get dry after the cessation of termentation-which often happens in the absence of close attention-when two weeks have clapsed since spawning, apply water through a fine sprinkler until it penetrates the bed to a depth of two melies, with the water at 90, at the same time increasing the house tempera-ture 10.—Mushrooms will then appear in four or five weeks.

and prevent the commercial borist keeping up to the times and to his competitors. The expense for heating is a large one, and where a florist secures proper heat, economizes labor, economizes fuel and has no repairs, he is in a mach better position to meet the demand of the times for popular prices from florists. Some boilers have the sole merit of being CHEAP and bought at a low price. One winter's use shows that while the price is low for the boiler it is high for scrap iron, which is about all such boilers are good for.

Business the past season has been noticeably better than for some years past and is holding up well for this time in the year.

A splendid conservatory is being erected upon the grounds of the National Soldiers' Home and will fill a long felt want. The grounds of this institution are now in the very best of condition and display the talents of our joyial friend, Head Gardener Charles Beck, who has many new and striking designs in carpet bedding, several of which were inspired by the patriotic war fever.

J. B. Heiss has an immense stock of palms and ferns in tiptop condition and reports his wholesale trade as increasing in all lines of decorative plants. He has a large lot of home grown azaleas in 2-inch pots, some Araucaria excelsa and a house of young Adiantum Farleyense which would be hard to excell.

H. H. Ritter and G. J. Horlaeher each have large stocks so well grown that they are at all times worth a visit, and the National Plant Company is busy propagating roses by the hundred thou-

Strange to say there seems to be little interest taken in the approaching S. A. F. convention. The boys are all busy planting, and as everything seems to be well, it is probable that Dayton will, nevertheless, be represented at Omaha.

Little of interest has transpired during the past week. It is too early to make predictions for the coming season, still out of door stock, carnations especially, are looking much better than they did a

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its monthly meeting on the evening of July 22. It was a very spirited meeting, much interest being manifested in the coming Field Day, to be held at Rocky Point on August 10. Treasurer Macrae made his semi-annual report, showing the club to be in a good financial condition, which fact demonstrates the healthy influence the conventions of the society with an extended cognomen have had upon all kindred organizations.

The commonly-called century plant on the private grounds of Robert Knight on Elmwood avenue has been the subject of much interest for a week past, and hundreds of people have watched the development of the stately flower stalk well fur-nished with buds. This will be the first one to bloom in Providence within the recollection of any of our oldest florists. I saw one in bloom in Newport a few years since. One sees many rare things there. By the way, would Newport not be a good place to hold the national con-

This hot weather has nearly got the better of us all, but we are still in the land of the living and able to do a little hustling. Business here is quiet, as is usual at this season, but is slightly better than last year. There is no new glass being put up here. All the stock planted out seems to be doing nicely, and the prospects indicate a supply of excellent stock for the fall and winter months. Our city parks are looking better than ever, and much credit is due F. Roth, the gardener, who is quite well up with the times.

Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material.

This with us means the best growth of Cypress Lumber and the best grade of that growth; and from this grade all the sapbright sap, which only experts can detect—as well as stained sap, knots and other defects cut out. Others do not equal our quality if they do beat our prices. It is not hard to see the reason: You can not buy gold dollars at fifty cents each. Experienced growers know that the best is not too good and cheapest in the long run.
